Four Are Convicted In Watergate Case

News Briefs

Arabs to Rescue

LONDON (CP) — A group of "rich Arab investors" has decided to save the British auto firm Aston Martin, the Daily Mail newspaper says today. The Daily Mail says a representative of the unnamed Arab investment group had informed the company that the firm would receive financial aid "in exchange for substantial shareholding interests" in Aston Martin.

Subs Collide

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — A U.S. submarine armed with nuclear missiles collided accidentally with a Soviet submarine under the North Sea on Nov. 3, columnist Jack Anderson reported Wednesday. The columnist wrote that after the two vessels sideswiped, they surface and their captains inspected one another warily.

Please Stay Home

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The London and Middlesex County Roman Catholic school board sent letters Tuesday advising parents to keep children home if teachers who had resigned in a pay dispute do not report for work Monday.

Gold Lower

LONDON (AP) — The price of gold on the London market was down $1.50 today in morning trading. The major dealers set a prefixing price of $$184 an ounce, down $2.50 from the closing price of $186.50 on Tuesday, the last London trading day, and more than $11 down from last Friday's record prices.

Volks Layoff

WOLFSBURG, Germany (AP) — Volkswagen, the largest West German automaker, today laid off 86,000 of its 111,000 domestic workers until Jan. 10. The layoffs were attributed by a company spokesman to a general slump in the automobile industry. Rudolf Leiding, the firm's former head, resigned Dec. 20 and no successor has been named.

Firm Seeks Help

LONDON (CP) — One of Britain's biggest multinational firms, the large Burmah Oil Company has joined a growing queue of businesses facing financial crises and has been forced to appeal to the government for urgent assistance.

Patient Has Two Hearts

CAPE TOWN (AP) — Dr. Christiaan Barnard's second twin-heart transplant patient was in "good" condition today, a bulletin from Groote Schuur Hospital reported. Barnard implanted a second heart in the chest of a patient Tuesday night and did not remove the patient's defective heart. No information on the patient was available.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A United States court jury has concluded another chapter in the Watergate story by convicting three of Richard Nixon's most powerful aides of conspiring to obstruct the investigation of the break-in at Democratic national committee headquarters in the Watergate building here.

Found guilty of conspiracy, obstruction of justice and perjury were former attorney-general John Mitchell and ex-White House aides H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman.

Also convicted of conspiracy was former assistant attorney-general Robert Mardian.

The jury acquitted Kenneth Parkinson, a Washington lawyer who represented the Nixon re-election committee, of conspiracy and obstruction of justice.

The four men convicted were expected to seek reversal of the decision in the U.S. Court of Appeals.

U.S. District Judge John Sirica set no date for sentencing. The four convicted men remained free on personal recognizance.

Asked for his reaction to the verdict, Ehrlichman said, 'It changes nothing insofar as my basic feeling, and it's a deep-seated feeling, of innocence in regard to the charges in this case" .

Ehrlichman said he had instructed his lawyers to appeal.

Haldeman said, "I know legally and morally I am totally innocent of each of the charges that's been brought here. . . . I intend to move ahead in the days ahead on the process of appeal."

Mitchell said only that he would appeal.

Mardian, who slumped into his seat and held his head in his hands after the verdict was read, slipped out of the courthouse unseen by reporters.

When Sirica thanked the jurors for their service, Mrs. Mardian leaned forward in her seat among the other defendants' wives, stuck out her tongue and gave a soft but audible raspberry.

As chief prosecutor James Neal left the courthouse, he was asked if he was satisfied with the verdict.

"I don't think satisfied is the word. It's one of relief that a long, hard job is over and I can go home."

Mitchell faces a maximum sentence of 25 years in prison and a $37,000 fine. The maximum sentence for Haldeman is 25 years and a $21,000 fine; for Ehrlichman 20 years and a $35,000 fine; for Mardian five years and a $10,000 fine.

The verdict read in Sirica's courtroom just before 5 p.m. on New Year's Day climaxed one of the last major events in the scandal that dominated U.S. political life for the last two years.

The cover-up trial jury deliberated nearly 15 hours over three days before it notified Sirica at 4:25 p.m. that it had reached a verdict.

Watergate Guilty Now Number 23

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Twenty-three former White House or Nixon re-election committee aides now have been convicted or pleaded guilty to offences related to Watergate and other Nixon administration scandals

But the four found guilty Wednesday in the Watergate cover-up case—the main and most sensational of the trials—include three of the most influential men in the White House at the peak of the Nixon presidency.

They are former attorney-general John Mitchell, former White House chief of staff H R. Haldeman and former domestic affairs adviser John Ehrlichman.

The list does not include 25 corporation executives and 17 companies also fined for illegal election campaign gifts—most of them to Nixon's 1972 re-election fund but many to Republican and a few Democratic congressional candidates.

Also found guilty in the cover-up was former assistant attorney-general Robert Mardian. Re-election committee counsel Kenneth Parkinson was acquitted.

Other major figures who have either pleaded guilty, been convicted or sent to prison for related cases are:

Original defendants: Gordon Liddy; E. Howard Hunt; James McCord; Bernard Barker; Virgilio Gonzalez; Eugenio Martinez; Frank Sturgis.

The cover-up: John Mitchell; H. R. Haldeman; John Ehrlichman; Robert Mardian; Charles Colson (charges dismissed); Frederick LaRue; Jeb Magruder; John Dean; Herbert Porter.

The Plumbers: Egil Krogh; Ehrlichman; Colson; Liddy; Barker; Martinez.

Dirty Tricks: Dwight Chapin; Donald Segretti; George Hearing.

The ITT case: Richard Kleindienst; Howard Reinecke.

Tax violations: Edward Morgan.

Illegal political contributions: Herbert Kalmbach; Jack Gleason; Robert Vesco (a fugitive, charges pending); Harry Sears (granted immunity); John Connally (still to be tried); Jake Jacobsen; Harold Nelson; David Parr; Stuart Russell; Tim Babcock; Harry Dent; Jack Chestnut (indicted still to be tried), Mitchell and Maurice Stans, former secretary of commerce, were acquitted after trial on political contributions charges.

Gordon Strachan, an aide to Haldeman in the White House, was originally named with his former chief in the cover-up indictments, but his case was separated from the other defendants and his trial is expected to be held early next year.

A major case still outstanding is the bribery and perjury trial of former treasury secretary John Connally, alleged to have used his influence in the White House to have the administration increase government subsidies for milk.

North Vietnam Troops Attack Southren City

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese infantry and tanks launched a heavy attack today on Phuoc Binh city, the South Vietnamese government's last foothold in Phuoc Long province. Hard street fighting was reported

The government asked the Viet Cong delegation in Saigon for an emergency meeting to arrange for the evacuation of 26,000 civilians from the besieged city, saying many of them were wounded and starving.

The Viet Cong delegation rejected the proposal, terming it a "false humanitarian trick of the Saigon side"

In Cambodia, the military command reported insurgent attacks east, west and north of Phnom Penh, and intelligence sources said a force of about 5,000 Khmer Rouge were preparing for an offensive against the capital.

Immediate Increase Limited

Rail Rate Freeze Ends On Grain, Lumber, Meat

OTTAWA (CP) — The cost of shipping major food and construction products rose Wednesday because of a Canadian transport commission decision to end a two-year freeze on some railway freight rates.

The commission's railway transport committee said in a ruling Tuesday it would allow freight rates to rise between 10 and 15 per cent on such products as domestically-shipped grain, lumber, building material and meat.

And it would allow further, similar increases in March 1 following negotiations between CP Rail, Canadian National Railways and the provinces.

The decision is a compromise. Eight provinces, led by the three Prairie provinces, had asked for a 60-day extension of the freight rate freeze to allow time for discussions between the two parties.

But the railways wanted increases averaging roughly 25 per cent on a quarter of all goods shipped by rail to go into effect at midnight Tuesday night.

David Jones, chairman of the two-man committee, said he was faced with a dilemma in announcing the decision.

The railways had a legitimate desire to increase rates, but such increases created an "outcry because they were felt by the greatest number of people."

The cost of shipping beef, for instance, will rise roughly 15 per cent now an another 15 per cent March 1, to $4.54 a undredweight from $3.49. Such increases will be passed on to consumers through increased meat costs.

Lawyer for the three Prairie provinces, former Liberal MP Gordon Blair, said his clients agreed that the railways needed some increase but any raise could come later in the year, after the companies discussed the increases with the provinces,

Both CP Rail and CNR had been "handsomely reimbursed" from the federal treasury for any revenue losses during the two years the freeze was in effect, he said. The government gave the two companies roughly $15. million in subsidies to compensate for any losses.

The railways estimated they would lose beween $17 million and $2. million in revenue if the increases were withheld for the next 60 days.

IRA Extends Christmas Truce

DUBLIN (Reuter) — The Irish Republican Army (IRA) today announced a 14-day extension of its Christmas ceasefire.

The truce, which has halted guerrilla bombings and shooting in Ireland and Britain since Dec. 22, had been due to expire at midnight tonight.

Extension of the truce had been widely expected in response to a New Year peace gesture by Britain's Northern Ireland administrator, Merlyn Rees.

Rees on Tuesday freed 20 detainees held without trial in Northern Ireland and sanctioned remission of sentences for more than 100 convicted prisoners whose terms were due to expire at the end of March.

He also offered three-day New Year paroles to another 50 detainees.

A statement by the army council of the Provisional IRA, issued to newspapers and radio stations here, said the response to its truce so far from the British government was not sufficient to warrant a permanent ceasefire

Mackenzie King Was Amazed As Dead King Came to Seance

OTTAWA (CP) — William Lyon Mackenzie King believed he communed through spiritualist experiences with monarchs and commoners, family and the famous.

"I was amazed when the King came," the late prime minister says of one seance in 1938. He was referring to King Georeg V of England, who had died the year before.

Such encounters are mentioned from time to time in King's diaries for the years 1932 through 1944, opened to the public Wednesday for the first time.

The bachelor King, prime minister for 21 years between 1921 and 1948, also reveals in his diaries other examples of what some call his superstitions, others his religiosity.

He saw symbolism in numbers—"while seven is a mystical number, tens are evidence of completeness"—and looked for messages in dreams and daytime visions

His closest companions in spiritualism were banker Godfroy Patteson and his wife Joan, neighbors who were close confidantes and almost daily companions

In the diaries, the companionship of Joan Patteson and their shared spiritual experiences figure in curious counterpoint to public affairs, political matters and mundane personal events.

"After dinner Joan played the piano, beautifully," King writes of a visit with his pet dog Pat to the Patteson home on Elgin Street in Ottawa Nov. 13, 1938.

"When we came to hymns and I asked for Lead Kindly Light, mother's hymn, Pat got up off the floor, came onto the sofa and rubbed his little head on my trouser legs . . . I feel more and more he is a little spirit dog revealing dear mother's continued presence to me."

Earlier in the same entry, he refers to earlier visions—one of a dragon across the ceiling, another of his late mother in a lighted upper window.

At one point in a section of diaries entered in black loose-leaf binders are records of seances, set up in King's handwriting in the style of script for a play.

The script of Nov. 13, 1938, has "H.M. King George V," introduced by Mackenzie King's dead father, talking about the planned visit to Canada in May, 1939, by King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

"The visit is due to their affection for you," George V says. "The King likes you very much; you will be great friends"

In the same seance, he talks with Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Liberal prime minister from 1896 to 1911; Sir Robert Borden, Conservative prime minister from 1911 to 1920, King's mother, his brother Max, ad others.

Police Report Quiet Holiday

The New Year's holiday was a quiet one in the Belleville area, with no major accidents or accidents reported by police or firefighters.

Ontario provincial police here said they had to contend with a half dozen cars which slid off Highway 401 during a snowfall which left roads slippery for a few hours early Wednesday evening. No one was injured, an OPP spokesman said.

City firefighters reported no major alarms, Fire Chief Leo Culhane said.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie reported break-ins and acts of wilful damage during the New Year's holiday. At the A and D Esso Station on Dundas St. E., a cash register was rifled and $19 in cash taken. There was also $25 damage to the register in the occurrence discovered at 3.30 p.m. Jan. 1.

At Jack Phillips Motors on Cannifton Rd., a rear window was broken in an office and $80 in cash taken. Eight sets of car keys were also taken, police said. The theft was discovered at noon on New Year's Day.

In another incident investigated by city police, a distributor was removed from the car of Blain Lost residing at the Canadian Hotel. The car was parked in the Brewers' Retail lot on Dundas St. and the damage was discovered late New Year's Eve.

Number of Needy At Record Level

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Belleville's Christmas Sharing program that provides holiday dinner hampers for needy families had a record number of recipients this year. There were 503 families registered with the program, in contrast to the 274 registered last year.

All were provided for, said co-ordinator, Phyllis Hayman. Churches and school provided most of the hampers, followed by Brownies, Scouts and Cubs and service clubs.

Of the 166 baskets packed by schools BCI packed 22, Centennial 15, Moira 33, Quinte 39, Nicholson 13, Sir Winston Churchill five, St. Joseph's 11, the Christian Reform School five, Holy Rosary two, Queen Elizabeth two, Harmony six, Sir Mackenzie Bowell three, Prince of Wales four, and St. Michael's Academy 14.

Churches, including the Salvation Army, provided 109 baskets, Scouts and Brownies packed 21 and the remaining 147 baskets were paid for by cash donations.

Mrs. Hayman, predicting a 10 per cent increase in recipients this year, prepared for 325 baskets. She ordered 325 bath towels to add to the packed hampers, but ran out long before the last baskets were packed.

Assisting Mrs. Hayman as assistant co-ordinator this year was Mrs. Betty Watson. Mrs. Vivyan Edgar was treasurer. The program that matched donors and recipients was operated from the United Community Services building on William St. The names of the recipients were provided by churches and social agencies in the community.

Fire Guts Home

KALADAR — Fire that destroyed a small, single-storey dwelling a mile north of here New Year's Day also caused a brief area power interruption.

The fire burned down the home of Ronald Lobb, 33, who lived alone in the dwelling, on Highway 41.

Volunteer firemen from Northbrook were called to the scene about 1 a.m.

Power was restored by Ontario Hydro workers from Tweed.

Clerk Joins Staff

MARMORA — Mrs. Gadys Jones of Marmora village assumed the duties of cerk-treasurer of Marmora and Lake Township today. She replaces Mrs. Mabell Gawley who resigned as of Dec. 31.

Mrs. Jones was picked from among five applicants for the job by the newly-elected Marmora and Lake Township council at a Tuesday afternoon meeting prior to their taking office.

The new clerk-treasurer brings to the office 11 years of business experience having been employed by Wells Brothers in Marmora for 10 years and for Martin Building Supplies for a year.

She was born in Marmora Township and lived there until the spring of 1963 when she moved to Marmora Village. A widow, she has a daughter, Mrs. Keith (Glenna) Cooney of Guelph.

O'Flynn Named QC

A Belleville barrister was the only Quinte-district lawyer to receive legal honors inthe to receive legal honors in the annual list of Queen's Counsel awards announced by the Ontario government.

He is John Dale O'Flynn Jr., member of a family which has practised law for many years in the area.

Mr. O'Flynn joined the family firm almost 20 years ago after his law graduation.

He was an active figure in local Liberal party organization and various community groups — including school trusteeships.

He served as a member of the old Bay of Quinte High School Board and later of its amalgamated successor, the present Hastings County Board of Education. He resigned his board position when he moved out of Belleville to the Rednersville Rd., in Prince Edward County's Ameliasburg Township.

Loyalist Students Return

Loyalist College has geared itself for a two-day onslaught of second semester registrations today and Friday as most of the fulltime, day student population of about 1,000 return for another round of classes.

Registrar Jim Hemsley said this week registrations will take place in the college gymnasium, and it is hoped all students will register by Friday afternoon. The gymnasium will be open from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m. each day.

"A lot of people in the city will be out," he said, adding "that's a possibility" that some out-of-town students might not return until next week.

If such is the case, secondary arrangements will have to be set up Monday to deal with stragglers, he said. "I don't think we should expect that many."

Ernst Kneisel, public relations director, reported the present student population as of the last official count Sept. 30, is 1,047, including 947 full-time, fee-paying students, and 100 Manpower - sponsored department of national defense retired students.

There will probably be some dropouts, he said.

"I think our attrition rate is around 30 per cent," he said. "Whether it is higher or lower this year is anyone's guess."

The attrition number will probably be offset by new students taking new courses, Mr. Kneisel added.

Across the Country

Cross-country skiing now is booming across the country. Equipment sales are way up in the Belleville area as more families join the recreation. The city's YMCA has formed a club which has instructors like Ray Kraszewski (above) to show how it's done.

Economic One Attraction Of Cross-country Skiing

Cross-country skiing has slid into the ranks of top, popular outdoor recreations.

Among pointers to its peaking popularity in the Belleville area:

— Equipment sales are way up over last year, despite an unreliable weather start to the winter.

— The city's YMCA has formed the first mass-membership instruction club.

And it's not just the young who are joining in. In fact, one leading equipment supplier reports that middle-aged purchasers outnumber youngsters.

A number of factors favor the recreation as a popular pastime.

Foremost, is economics.

"That's one of the big reasons, alright," agrees a salesman at Simpson-Sear's sports department.

Don Leslie, of the downtown Leslie's Ski Den, estimates a cross-county skier can be outfitted — with skis, poles, boots and bindings — for $80-$100.

And that's about the price range of a pair of boots for downhill skiing, he says.

Like Simpsons, Leslie's have had "an awful lot more customers" seeking cross-county equipment than last winter.

Aside from the economics, the recreation also has the attraction of getting people into the bracing wintry outdoors with a minimum of effort, says Mr. Leslie.

The necessary equipment is light and easy to carry.

"And you don't have to be an athlete to get the exercise it gives," he adds.

Ray Kraszewski agrees. "If you can walk, you can cross-country — and it's a lot of exercise."

He is one of two volunteer instructors who helped form the first cross-country ski club at the YMCA before Christmas. The first meet brought 50 people. More are expected once the distractions of the holiday season are over.

Founding principle of the club was to introduce families to the recreation. For a start, they get advice on equipment and how to prepare it.

In future years, the club also could be the core for young people who wish to become competitive. Cross-county skiing is also a winter sport that reaches Olympic status, Ray points out.

The other club instructor is Ian Fraser.

Next meeting of the YMCA Cross-Country Ski Association Belleville Branch is Jan. 8.

Its fee schedule ranges from $5 for a single youth to $10 for an adult, $15 a couple and $20 a family.

New Year's Resolutions

Ellis: Change the Date of Christmas

Belleville Mayor Robin Jeffrey says she does not make New Year's resolutions while Hastings MP Jack Ellis says his New Year's resolution is to change Christmas Day.

"I don't make specific resolutions at New Year's Eve," said the mayor. "I make them all year round."

Mr. Ellis said Christmas is becoming "so crass . . . so commercial that it is nothing but a chore".

His solution is to make Christmas a "moveable feast" similar to Easter. His idea is that Christmas should follow the last Sunday of advent. In this fashion, people would have Sunday to rest and "reflect" on the meaning of Christmas and past performance. He said if his theory was used, Christmas would always come within the week Dec. 20 - 27 and said he thinks he might attempt a private member's bill in the coming year.

Alderman Stu Meeks said his only resolution will be to attempt to re-introduce smoking in city council chambers, something that has been banned for several months.

"Aldermen popping out of chambers to have a smoke is nonsense," said Ald. Meeks.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said his New Year's resolution will be to stay on his diet. The chief did not mention how much weight he is trying to lose. On the serious side, he and Fire Chief Leo Culhane both said they are resolved to continuing the chore of keeping the city safe in 1975.

At one point, Alderman Ben Corke said his New Year's resolution would be to strive to be "meaner than ever". He later modified this jest saying he would attempt to discuss his differences with other people "with less rancor and bitterness and also would try to ride the city's transit system more often".

Tree Pickup Monday

If pine needles are beginning to fall on your rug, you can have your old Christmas tree placed out for collection starting Monday.

The city's public works department will commence the pickup of old Christmas trees at the first of the week. The trees should be put out before 8 a.m. The service will not apply to unsold trees.

World In Perspective

Whither the media in Canada, not to mention the public and its taste in reading? Edmonton Journal publisher Ross Munro expressed some interesting views on this during a recent address in Toronto.

His theme was appropriate, for he was speaking at the first Atkinson Journalism lecture which will provide speakers to Ryerson Institute and to journalism students in particular.

The address was reported in our news columns earlier in the month. But briefly, Mr. Munro was of the opinion that the world was in a mess and too many newspapers were not telling the story well.

He decried a "lack of real expertise in many fields . . . too much cliche thinking and reporting . . . and even the lack of a national press — with all respect, he added, to The Star (Joseph Atkinson was the founder of The Toronto Star) and The Globe and Mail."

"We are a provincial press," he said bluntly. And our newspapers, "community institutions."

There are those things which get reported as a matter of course, such as police, the courts and city hall, councils and all the rest, and which "present," as he put it, "a great deal of so-called trivia to our readers every day. . ."

"But frankly," Munro added, "the vast majority want and love it. You just cannot get too highbrow in our kind of journalism in Canada or you simply lose your audience."

He has a point. Canadians are parochial — and to a considerable extent the media reflect this.

Munro, who is also president of the Canadian Press, has backing for this view of the media and their audience, from the distinguished Malcolm Muggeridge, one of the great philosophers of our day.

As Kildare Dobbs of Maclean's magazine noted in a recent article on Muggeridge based on an interview, as well as on personal family ties: "He began to talk about the decline and fall of the western world."

"The whole of western civilisation," said Muggeridge, "is on its last legs. I see a breakdown. It's happening now, creeping anarchy, day by day people are becoming conditioned to it. . ."

And he went on to speak of the Ulster situation and "murderous men walking about." Dobbs asked if he thought radio and television had anything to do with it?

"The media," Muggeridge replied, "enormously distort life. People are given a surface picture which they come to believe — the legend made visible, the word become television. . ."

And so on. There is a pressing need, in looking at any given situation, to consider all aspects, to see as much of the whole picture as possible; to question the veracity of every spoken or written word. The media by itself cannot do it all, nor can the public, but as Ross Munro says, we need not give up trying.

Amy Vanderbilt

Amy Vanderbilt could be described as the queen of etiquette and her tragic death in New York removes from our scene a lively and interesting character. Pictures of Miss Vanderbilt suggest a warm and attractive personality behind the blue-blooded Dutch-American ancestry.

Now that she is gone those of us who knew only the Amy Vanderbilt of her books and columns learn too of the human frailties behind the open, smiling countenance.

A friend said she seemed a little harried with pre-Christmas preparations but was looking forward to a get-together in the New Year.

And there had been the three previous marriages, reports too of hypertension and dizzy spells — but nothing, the same friend said, to suggest she would take her own life.

In any event she will be missed, and mixed with sorrow over her untimely passing there is a sense of dismay over something she said recently. What she said was timely, and redolent of the times, but it represents our loss too — that traditional etiquette is out of place in an age of social, philosophical and economic upheaval.

The one person who might have continued to champion the social graces is gone.

Defence Cuts 'East of Suez'

The U.K.: From Heyday of the Empire to Economic Slump

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Thomson News Service

The famous British expression "east of Suez" used during the recent announcement of defence cuts, still has a connotation of empire while it best expresses the implications of another British withdrawal in the world.

In the heyday of the Victorian Empire, "east of Suez" meant no such thing as reducing the size of the Royal Navy nor cutting back on military forces on border duties in India.

When it was used in the House of Commons or by a jingoistic press, it meant watching to see that the military build-up in Asia and the Indian Ocean was not dropping below what it should be to meet all imperial opponents.

In 1902, the phrase entailed the signing of an Anglo-Japanese Treaty pledging mutual assistance, if either empire the full-blown British one or the emerging Japanese, were ever attacked by a third power.

The phrase originated from the service of the P and O (Peninsular and Orient) Steamship Line which took hundreds of British officers, troops and their families to and from garrison duty in India and Singapore. The long stretch of sea voyage from the then-new Suez canal to the Far East was the preserve largely of British merchant ships and naval vessels.

After all, it was scarcely 30 years before the end of the Victorian Era in 1901 that Disraeli had been responsible for the refinancing, completion and opening of the Suez Canal in 1870.

So much for the legacy, super-grand and super-nostalgic, reasons enough why the phrase clings, even in a new and declining military context.

In over-all terms, the British decision to cut back "east of Suez" made last month by Labor Minister of Defence Roy Mason will mean a savings over the next decade of $11 billion, beginning with an estimated cutback of $700 million during 1975.

Some of the 10,000 British troops in Hong Kong will be withdrawn, with the Crown colonial government being asked to handle more of its own military requirements. About 30,000 civilians in the defence ministry, half of these serving overseas, will lose their jobs between now and about 1977.

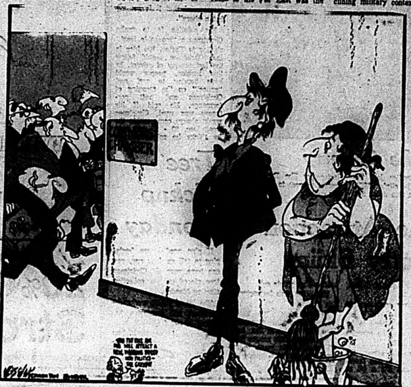
Most of the 2,500 troops in Singapore under a five-power defence agreement with New Zealand, Malaysia, Australia and Singapore, will be sent home. And over-all, the armed forces would be reduced by about 35,000 men, half of them in the RAF, by 1985.

Untouched in the British defence minister's announcement are British NATO forces in West Germany which will be maintained probably at their 1975 strength of 55,000.

That old sore spot of all Labor governments, the use of the South African naval base at Simonstown for overhaul and maintenance of naval units serving in the wide stretches of the Indian Ocean, continues to plague Labor defence ministers.

The present one says the British government will terminate its agreement with South Africa for its use. But will it? Events are changing so fast in the southern Indian Ocean region, what with the South Africans now encouraging talks between blacks and whites, that the ideological stigma of doing defence business with the Afrikaners and their fleet, may wither away.

And then there is the growing Soviet naval presence in the Indian Ocean while the British declines. This build-up could compel a reallocation of military resources rather than their withdrawal from Asia by 1985.



"Looks like full attendance today — must be pay day."

A Government in Decline Feature of Year Just Past

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — In the field of public affairs 1974 was a dramatic year.

There was inflation, the cloud of recession, the energy crisis which threatened the country, a suddenly belligerent CSAO and a host of other matters.

But in the minds of men close to politics the event that would stand out with most would be the continuing decline of the Davis government.

After a calamitous 1973, which saw a series of scandals and general boobery, it seemed that the trend couldn't continue that things would have to turn for the government.

But they didn't.

Once again it was on the toboggan.

There were two byelections and it lost both. Its great glamor project, the Krauss-Maffei transportation scheme, fell to pieces. And even in the last two weeks of the year it was revealed that two of the men named discreditably in the report on the inquiry into the construction industry had been prime organizers of the premier's sometimes praised but more often derided parade through Italy.

There was some solid achievement during the year.

Plans for the protection and future recreational development of the Niagara Escarpment finally were put in motion.

The government did at last recognize the problem of escalating land prices. (Though to some people its cure is worse than the disease).

Plans were launched for a series of waste (garbage) reclamation plants which as an environmental step is leading the way in America.

The last regional governments were formed and plans for two new cities were developed.

There was more consumer protection legislation and a number of other constructive steps.

In fact, normally it would be classed as a constructive year for a government.

But with the Davis administration for every step it took forward it seemed to stumble two backwards.

And it is these stumbles that stand out in the public mind.

They are what are remembered.

And undoubtedly they are what Mr. Davis would like to forget. In fact he might like to forget the whole year.

A Champion of the Active Senior Citizen Sen. Muriel Fergusson Soldiers on at 75

by RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA - What do you do when, after two years as the first ever woman Speaker of the Senate, you find yourself again just one of 92 other Senators.

If you are Senator Muriel McQueen Fergusson of Fredericton, New Brunswick, you do what you have always done: keep busy.

There she is, at 75, tucked away in a one-room office - very nice, mind you, tastefully furnished in red — at the dead end of a corridor on the sixth floor of Parliament Hill's Centre Block.

Only six months ago, back before the July election, she had a suite of offices, one beautifully appointed chamber leading into another along one whole corridor of the main floor.

She had a staff, secretary and assistant, a couple of pages, messengers and other retainers at the beck and call of a Parliamentary Speaker.

Now she has one secretary..

As Speaker she entertained in style in her suite, hostess to the great (such as Prime Minister Trudeau) and the near-great (like Liberal cabinet ministers), to the red-sashed diplomatic set, and to junketing Very Important Visitors from Faraway Places.

Now she lunches, seldom with more than one companion, in the Parliamentary Restaurant.,

So how does she like the abrupt change in official lifestyle..

"Never thought much about it until now: too busy," she said..

That busy?

Busy doing what? (Surely not with the leisured pace of the Senate.)

Busy with the "problem of aging," she says, and starts to get steam up about Canadians "squandering the great natural resource of their senior citizens."'

Now she's rolling::

"The stupid appearance, the utterly foolish appearance of and obsession with the rule which forces so many men and women, good productive people, to retire at 65 is sheer waste..

"Why I know of all kinds of engineers, doctors, teachers, businessmen who, often, with no great desire to leave home, have gone to developing countries and imparted their skills and knowledge to people there simply because Canada has thrown them into the discard for being too old..

"Somehow we're not smart enough as a nation or a society to recognize that a great many people have done their best and finest work in the last years of their lives.'"

"There's Leonardo da Vinci who painted his Last Supper at 80 ... Sarah Bernhardt in her greatest roles in her late seventies ... and what about Darwin .. Longfellow . and Winston Churchill — Toscanini — Gladstone — Carlyle — De Gaulle .. and Grandma Moses who was still painting on her hundredth birthday"

Senator Fergusson practises what she preaches, and just about always has from the outset of her long public service career..

She had a strong hand in setting up the old age security system in her native New Brunswick ... was chairperson (up to date, what?) of the Committee on Aging of the Canadian Welfare Council ... is active on the special Senate Committee on Aging, and is honorary patron of her provincial Senior Citizens Council..

'.When we feel old, and I suppose some of us must, let us remember what Lord Attlee said at 80 about it being the better alternative — Uncle Louis St. Laurent, aging so quickly as Prime Minister, recalling that 'the best is yet to be' .. and Dief (what an unlikely pair of allies, the Chief and Madame Fergusson, professional Tory and Grit), declaring at 79 that 'life begins at 66' and demanding the government set up a federal department of geriatrics to help the aging attain their full, mature potential."

"You can always, until the very end," Dief had observed, as indestructible as ever, "reach for the stars."

Muriel McQueen Fergusson, a politician, thinks in terms of votes and power even in pondering the problem of aging.

"There are more than two million Canadians over 65 today, and in only a few years there will be three million. If we get together and agree on what we want, we could have a great deal of leverage on legislation at all levels."

Busy is the word, now, as it was when she was Madame Speaker, for the busy busybody and busybrain from Fredericton, N.B.

Anomalies of Advertising

Editor
The Intelligencer:

I was once rapped on the wrist by a soft drink company for suggesting to them that their paper cups advertised their beverage exclusively and therefore should be provided free. Not only was the company irked but the organization flaunting the cups was horrified at my suggestion that they shouldn't be paying for the right to sound their trumpet.

I seem to stand alone when I shout that we're paying enough for a product without handing out free advertising.

Like the teenager, wearing a sweat-shirt, extolling the virtues of a certain beer. Who bought the shirt? And why? Or how about the beer glasses lauding beer companies? I'll consider using one for free. Perhaps.

Or the shopping bags which the customer buys and then totes the name of the store through town. I suggested to a manager once that he should give me one if I was going to visually acclaim his store and he refused to talk to me.

Take cars - why should I carry the name of its dealer emblazoned on my trunk for free, or do I get preferred treatment when I take it there for the inevitable repairs? Or worse - I'll never be caught dead in a car with its make specially painted on its side. Sounds like school kids who rant for hours about a certain brand of car because their fathers happen to own that model for that year. I'd say: "infantile."

Could it be that when we so willingly advertise these company's wares we save them advertising costs and so cut down the initial cost to us?

Oh, come on, George!

Hide-and-Seek With Buses

It's Tough Not Having a Car in Oshawa

KEN WAXMAN
in The Oshawa Times

I suppose it's my own fault. Not having a car in the city that moto-vates Canada..

But I don't.

Which brings me back to public transit. Buses and subways as it's called everywhere else. Slow torture as it's known in this city.

Oshawa only has eight bus routes, perfect for getting you downtown until six p.m., but impractical for any other part of the city.

That's GETTING you downtown. After six p.m. the company runs on a once-an-hour schedule until midnight, which means you'd better have a good contingency plan if you happen to miss one bus.

And you'd better have strong legs if you miss that midnight bus. Not to mention the joys of walking you get on Sundays when the buses only run on Simcoe St., away from most of the city's population.

Then there's the matter of schedule. Oshawa buses may run 20 minutes after the hour and before the hour in principle, but not in fact..

It's all in figuring out when the bus gets to your corner.

The 8 a.m. bus to get me to work in the morning hits my corner at five to eight, or three to eight or seven to eight, depending on the weather, number of passengers, and just plain chance..

Except on holidays that is, when there's no bus.

But the Oshawa PUC seems to observe more holidays than most places. At least, that's what I found on Boxing Day.

There I was bright-eyed and bushy-tailed (in a manner of speaking) waiting for my bus for work at 10 minutes to eight.

At five minutes to eight. At eight o'clock. At three minutes past eight.

Time for another early morning jog, I realized.

Twenty minutes later I was in the office, a little out of breath..

There ARE people who would like to avoid all the aggravation of driving by using a well-coordinated public transit system. Look at the success of the GO trains and buses. People like me.

Toronto is trying to improve its bus and subway service and Ottawa, as part of the Fullerton report for the National Capital Region, has come up with a massive scheme to link all the outlying areas around the city with rapid public transit..

In Oshawa, buses still run once an hour at night.

Maybe I'm biased, but it seems that an attitude like this would probably be more at home in Orono or Newcastle Village than in a city with 100,000 people.

At least let's give the bus riders more buses to take..

Because people do take them.

'Boxing' Day Was for Gifts in Merry England

Kingston Whig - Standard

Part-way through Boxing Day somebody wondered out loud just what it was. What is the significance of the odd name for this day - after - Christmas holiday?

Boxing Day is a part of the tradition of English-speaking communities. It originated in England and doesn't refer to a yearly sport-day such as Ascot. It is a regular bank holiday both here and in Britain and its name refers to the custom of giving Christmas "boxes" (or tips) to servants, errand boys - and postmen.

Yes, postmen. It appears that postmen at one time (remember?) used to deliver mail on the day after Christmas. Nowadays, if they get Christmas boxes they must collect them either before the 25th or whenever they get back on the beat - at least in Canada. As for errand boys and servants, they are not conspicuously active any more, even on normal weekdays..

So, what price Boxing Day?

Is it really relevant? Well, it does have pleasant connotations, after all. Christmas is the time of giving. Remembering all kinds of people who render services at a time when most of us are out of circulation is no bad thing. Apart from that, it's a perfectly good holiday - in fact, one of the best because who wants to go back to work on the day after Christmas? That, surely, is one of the great let-downs.

"Wherefore I also, after I heard of your faith in the Lord Jesus, and love unto all the saints, Cease not to give thanks for you, making mention of you in my prayers." Ephesians 1:15,16. Prayer is our instrument of communication given to every man, to be used in the behalf of others and we ourselves are doubly blessed in the process. "Pray one for another that ye may be healed."

ALL IN THE FAMILY/Isabel Huggan

Fear of Future Faces Us Today

As we perch on the edge of this century's last quarter, many of us are afraid of what lies ahead.

We cannot take flight from our fear, because there is nowhere to go but forward.

We cannot fight, for there is nothing yet to battle against but the imagined ills of the future.

What can we do?

Shall we ignore the future and live for today? Or should we be working in the optimistic hope that we might better our children's chance for a long and happy life?

The problem, of course, is that even today doesn't look too good.

Looking at the present is one of the thing that makes us fearful of tomorrow.

It almost seems that the ostrich's head-in-the-sand system for dealing with problems may be the best way. Ignorance could be bliss, and what we don't know can't hurt us. The only method for dealing with the future might be to pretend it isn't there.

But as soon as we take that stance, we know somehow that it's foolish. Turning our back on our fears won't make them go away.

The alternative?

Perhaps we can shape the world's destiny by preparing now to deal with future events.

We can limit the size of our families, and we can help other countries to control the number of their children too.

We can learn to eat less, and to do without the luxury items that take up growing and marketing space that could be used for staple foods.

We can urge world government to take measures to prevent nuclear disaster, famine, or death-dealing pollution.

We can take steps to a brighter and better future by encouraging scientific research, technology, medical and industrial progress.

We can reach out to the underdeveloped nations and offer our assistance now, before they are destroyed by poverty and disease, before they become our enemies.

And as we reach this point in our thoughts about the years ahead, cold slivers of fear slide through us.

What does it matter, we wonder, whether or not we strive bravely now, if there's only a little time left for humanity to survive?

What if being alive in the year 2,000 will only be to witness dreadful wars, starvation, death?

If these fears are justified in fact, we should be living only for the moment, steeping ourselves now in as much experience as we can.

There are so many places to go, things to see, books to read and people to know before our lives are over. Providing for the future is senseless, perhaps even wrong.

If the world is going to become a fearful place to be, does it matter at all if our children pass geometry, get their teeth straightened, or learn to be polite? Does it matter if we get a raise, support a starving Asian child, or discover a cure for cancer?

And fear slips in the door again.

Because we just don't know what's going to happen.

Ann Landers

Bigoted Old Bat Has Real Fans

Dear Ann Landers: Every day I fight my husband for the part of the paper that runs your column. We just can't wait to see what the bigoted old bat has to say about marriage, money, drugs, child-rearing, medical problems, legal hassles, cats, dogs and, of course, sex. Obviously, you consider yourself an authority on everything.

Usually we sit back and snicker. Once in a while my husband will say: "Old Annie is at it again, giving her 18th-Century views. It must be wonderful to be so smart."

On occasion I get upset by some of your squirrely advice but never was I mad enough to write until you came up with that line: "Tell Ed that Ann Landers said to cool it. He'll understand."

Do you really think Ed gives a hoot in hell what Ann Landers says? You've got yourself lined up there with Confucious and Buddha. This letter is to let you know we think you are obnixious.—Nuts To You

Dear Nuts: People who fight every day for the part of the paper that carries my column are genuine fans. Thanks for letting me know.

Dear Ann Landers: Can you possible squeeze in one more letter on the Mrs. John Smith free-for-all? I don't give a hangnail what the etiquette books say about the proper labeling of a woman. I am Mrs. Ann Jones, happily married to John Jones and I want to be called Mrs. Ann Jones.

When John starts calling himself Mr. Ann Jones then I'll settle for Mrs. John Jones.

I'm active in club work and can't tell you the number of times I've needed to know a woman's first name and found myself stumped with Mrs. Joe Schmo. Who needs him? It's her I'm looking for.

By way of identity, I'm 33, the mother of four, a lousy housekeeper and not terribly concerned with Women's Lib. I just want to be me. Let me, will you?—Mrs. Ann Jones

Dear Ann: Be my guest.

Dear Ann Landers: My mother is going to a funeral tomorrow (a person she used to work with died) and my 11-year-old brother is bugging her. He wants to go, too.

Chuck did not know the deceased but he is very curious about what goes on at funerals because he has never been to one.

You stated in a column several months ago that if a child wants to attend the funeral of a relative he should not be denied his wish. You also said if he doesn't want to go, he should not be forced to.

Should my mother take Chuck just to satisfy his curiosity?—A N.Y. Q.

Dear N.Y.: It would be unfair to the family to bring a child to a funeral just because he wants to see what's going on. A funeral is not entertainment. Sooner or later a relative will pass on and then Chuck can go—with good reason.

Dear Ann Landers: Your advice wasn't tough enough for the girl who sent $10 for something to enlarge her bust and received a plastic male hand.

She should have written to the magazine that carried the ad, informed the Better Business Bureau, called the attorney general of her state and the state where the company is located, written the U.S. Postal authorities, notified the Federal Trade Commission and written to the Bureau of Consumer Affairs in Washington, D.C.

She would not only have gotten her $10 back, but put the crooks out of business.—Informed Reader

Dear I.R.: Thanks. I hope others who get duped will take your advice.

Many Attend Opera

NEW YORK (AP) — More than eight million Americans attended live opera performances between September, 1973, and September, 1974, says a survey sponsored by the Metropolitan Opera National Council. Five years ago, the attendance figure was approximately half that. There were 6,676 performances in the United States during the 1973-74 season.

BETWEEN CONSENTING ADULTS • DIALOGUE FOR INTIMATE LIVING

By Cathrina Banky

Cathrina Banky is an author and professional speaker in the field of human relations and interpersonal communications In her book "Between Consenting Adults", Mrs. Banky cites failures to communicate as the main reason married or unmarried couples have problems in their relationship.

The key to solving these problems, she demonstrates, is to talk about them, to confront them directly and openly. Conflicts that remain buried can't be resolved; it's unspoken resentments that cause conflict. Unfortunately, many people find it extremely difficult to communicate when it comes to the things that disturb them most.

Mrs. Banky explores various causes of misunderstanding and conflict between people who live together, and shows how effective dialogue can overcome them with emphasis on the ability of both partners to learn to listen.

The author has based her book upon extensive psychological and sociological research, and on case studies of real life relationships that have been improved through better dialogue.

Using thirty-seven cases as examples, Mrs. Banky guides the reader through many difficult crises of living together, and suggests how effective dialogue can lead to solutions that are acceptable to both mates. Her book is an invaluable guide to understanding and resolving the problems resulting from intimate living today.

This book is available in Corby Library.

Bruhn Makes Comeback

NEW YORK (AP) — The famous classical ballet dancer, Erik Bruhn, who retired in 1971, will dance with the American Ballet Theatre here Jan. 11, at a gala benefit performance marking the company's 35th anniversary. He will perform, with Cynthia Gregory, in an excerpt from Miss Julie. The role of Jean, the butler, is considered among Bruhn's best. Currently, he is associated producer of the National Ballet of Canada.

Canned Salmon Recipes: Truly Easy to Prepare

We offer recipes using British Columbia Canned Salmon that are truly easy to make.

Salmon - Stuffed Baked Potatoes

two small cans or 1 large can B.C. Salmon six baking potatoes
½ cup hot milk
1½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
¼ tsp. thyme
1 egg beaten
¼ cup finely chopped onion
¾ cup finely chopper parsley
½ cup fine dry bread crumbs
¼ cup butter, melted

Heat oven to 350 degrees F. Wash and bake potatoes as usual. Cut potatoes in halves lengthwise while hot. Scoop potato out into a bowl, keeping shells intact. Set shells on a large baking sheet. Add hot milk to potato and beat or mash until very light and fluffy. Add seasonings and egg and beat well to blend. Drain salmon. Fold in salmon, together with onion and parsley, and spoon mixture lightly into the shells. Combine bread crumbs and butter and sprinkle over potato. Bake about 20 minutes or until nicely browned and heated through. Serves six.

This recipe uses the entire contents of the can of salmon. The liquid and bones contain valuable nutrients — don't throw them out.

Salmon Spinach Souffle

1 small can B.C. Salmon
2 tbsp. margarine
2 tbsp. cornstarch
¾ cup milk (including reserved salmon juice)
four eggs, separated
½ teaspoon sweet basil
¼ teaspoon thyme
Dash cayenne pepper
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
one cup ground cooked spinach

Parmesan Cheese

Drain and mash salmon with bones, reserving juice to measure with milk. Melt butter or margarine in saucepan. Add cornstarch; blend. Add milk with reserved salmon juice gradually; cook and stir until mixture becomes thick; cool 5 minutes. Add slightly beaten egg yolks, basil, thyme, cayenne, and mustard; mix well; cool a further 5 minutes. Add ½ of this sauce to salmon; fold in ½ of the stiffly beaten egg whites. Place remaining sauce in blender container; add spinach; whirl until smooth; fold in remaining ½ of the stiffly beaten egg whites; pour into 1½-quart souffle dish. Spoon salmon mixture gently on top; sprinkle generously with Parmesan cheese. Oven-poach at 350 degrees F. for 45-50 minutes. Serve at once. Serves Four.

South Seas Salmon Supper

one large can salmon
one can (1 lb. 13 oz.) sliced pineapple three cups toasted enriched white bread pieces ½ cup chopped water chestnuts.
½ cup chopped green pepper two tbsp. minced onion two tbsp. pickle relish two tbsp. lemon juice three tbsp. butter
three tbsp. flour
two tsp. salt
one egg
¼ cup lemon juice

Drain salmon; reseserve liquid. Drain pineapple; reserve syrup. Add pineapple syrup to salmon liqud to make ¾ cup. Reserve an additional ¼ cup pineapple syrup; set aside. In large mixing bowl combine salmon, bread pieces, water chestnuts, green pepper, onion, relish and lemon juice. In saucepan melt butter; blend in flour and salt. Add reserved salmon liquid; cook and stir until smooth and thickened. Stir into salmon mixture along with egg. Arrange six pineapple slices in greased 11 x 7-inch baking pan. Mound or scoop with ice cream scoop about two-third cup salmon mixture on each pineapple slice. Bake in preheated 350 oven 15 minutes. In saucepan combine reserved ¼ cup pineapple syrup and ¼ cup lemon juice. Boil 4 minutes. Pour over salmon and return to oven for 15 minutes longer. Cut remaining pineapple slices in chucks for garnish.

Deep — Dish Salmon Pie

two small cans B.C. Salmon one can whole potatoes, drained one can peas and carrots, drained one can small whole tomatoes, drained one can cream of vegetable soup
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon marjoram
Celery salt to taste
Pastry for one 9-inch pie crust

Drain and flake salmon, reserving juice and crushing bones to mix with flaked fish. Alternate salmon in layers with potatoes, peas and carrots, and tomatoes in buttered 2-quart casserole dish. Blend soup, reserved salmon liquid, and seasoning; pour over salmon and vegetables. Top casserole dish with pastry. Bake at 450 degrees F. for 20-25 minutes Serves six.

Salmon Pot Pie

2 small cans B.C. Salmon four tbsp. butter or margarine four tbsp. flour
½ teaspoon mace
Salt and pepper to taste
two cups milk (including reserved salmon liquid) two cups grated cheddar cheese
½ cup chopped celery
two medium carrots, grated one medium onion, chopped
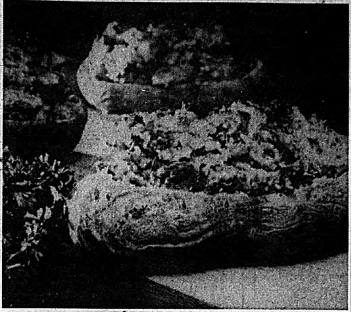
three cups prepared mashed potatoes

Drain and flake salmon reserving juice to measure with milk, and mashing bones to mix with flaked fish. Make a white sauce from butter or margarine, flour, seasoning, and milk. When thick, remove from heat; add grated cheese; stir to combine until cheese is melted. Add flaked salmon, celery, carrot, and onion. Pour mixture into buttered two-quart casserole dish. Pipe potatoes around edge. Bake at 450 degrees F. for 10-15 minutes, until bubbly and potatoes are nicely browned. Makes 6-8 servings.



These salmon-stuffed baked potatoes are easy and nourishing

Doris Clark

Thinking Destructive

The wife was a professional woman before marriage; also an adaptive person, dedicated to marital harmony. She prided herself on having the perfect marriage in which she and the husband "thought alike" on all important issues."

She gradually became "deselfed" by her busband, who gained functional strength at her expense. As he made more and more decisions for the two of them, she gradually became less capable of making decisions. It became harder for her to find energy for the home and children.

She began taking drinks during the day to help her through the chores, taking the usual precaution to hide the drinking from her husband.

The husband gained in functioning and had the usual degree of "blindness" to the wife's increasing disfunction. He even overlooked the situation when he brought business associates home for dinner and found the wife passed out on the living room couch Then in another "passed out" incident, the wife was hospitalized for surgical emergency.

During the course of family therapy, the emotional isolation between husband and wife was reduced. As she became more of a functioning self on her own, they went through a period of thoroughly intense marital conflict She discovered their "thinking alike" had been her failure to think for herself.

—Addictions, publication of Addiction Research Foundation of Ontario.

There it is, folks A clear example of interpersonal human relationships. No marital discord is the fault of just one person. An overbearing spouse whose action are meekly accepted will continue same. But a mature, more self-expressive response — even straight rebellion — would tend to cut the overbearing short, to the advantage of both marriage partners, believe it or not!

(Canadian resources exist to help with many of today's problems of daily living. Write to Doris for direction, in care of this newspaper.)

Good Retort

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A prosecutor accused 28-year-old Elizabeth Wiltens in court of shoplifting while under the influence of alcohol. "You don't look so hot yourself," she retorted. She was found guilty of the shoplifting offence and was fined $75.

(. . . an advertising feature designed to keep you better informed of what's new around town.)

List Now

Gord Roblin Real Estate, 117 North Front St., suggests that if you're going to put your home or property on the market in 1975, you do it NOW. Buyer interest is at its height during the next months and you want your property to be available to participate in that interest. Any of the competent Gord Roblin salesmen will be glad to assist you if you call them at the Roblin number, 968-6475. The best price usually comes to he or she who lists early. Start '75 off on the right foot of opportunity and call Gord Roblin today.

Taking Advantage of Charters

Davison and Davison Travel, 188 Front St. can get you to the gateways of Europe - London, Paris, Frankfurt, Manchester, Prestwick and Amsterdam, via charter. But they can't do it if you don't visit them and visit them quickly. Getting to Europe by charter means you have more money to use on your tour once you get there and Davison and Davison can help you here too. Charters require a minimum advance deposit of 60 days, which doesn't leave you much time to muse about it and delay making definite plans. Davison and Davison also have some unique charters to unique places this year. The staff at Davison and Davison will be glad to help you. Just get yourself down there.

Floor Sample Sale

Wrays, Your Home Furnishers, 306 Front St. is clearing the stock on the floor with savings of 10 to 40 per cent. Reductions are in effect on every kind of merchandise - tables, lamps, bedroom and dining room suites, chairs, chesterfields and on carpet. If you're thinking of making changes in your home's decor, now is the time to do it with some help from the people at Wrays And with that money your Aunt Matilda gave you for Christmas, you can easily get that new occasional chair or table lamp and maybe have some money left over for a cushion or two. Take yourself and Aunt Matilda's gift down to Wrays while this great buying opportunity lasts.

A Good Used Car

As you know, Vaders Car Sales at the corner of North Front and College Streets, are small car specialists. And that applies to their used cars too. At the moment, they have an excllent selection of small used cars, some of them automatics, which I'm told are almost as rare as the perverbial hen's teeth. These cars are all in top Vader-style shape and are as import-nt to the fine reputation of Vaders as are any of their new Datsuns. A new used car as your house may well be one your New Year's resolutions. So take your resolve down to Vaders. They'll make sure you get what you want.

Reports Continue To Pour In

The people who rent you Aquafine Water Refiners in Belleville are no strangers to you. When you dial 962-4504, someone at the other end of the phone says 'Moira Shuster' when they answer. And the people at Moira Shuster are amazed at the extent of the favorable feedback they receive from customers who have rented an Aquafine Refiner. It's like a whole new world at your house, having the safety and softness of 'Aquafined' water. And with special equipment, an Aquafine Refiner can handle special problems such as well water or bay shore water which may require additional refining facilities. A whole new world at your house for as little as $8 a month is quite a promising proposition isn't it?

Last Minute Haven

If there's one thing that Sidney Inn, 265 Moira St. W. has (and what haven't they got?) it's versatility. That happens to be one of the qualities of anything which I happen to admire. And at this time of year, when unexpected guests are always dropping in to wish you the best of the season you may well have need of the array and the hours of business of Sidney Inn. It's open seven days a week from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. and can supply you the makings of a great impromptu party, snack or full-course dinner. Not to mention their supply of eggnog! Convenience and service are all-year attributes of the Sidney Inn.

Starting the New Year Right

The Hotel Belvedere, 360 Front St. is starting its new year definitely on the right note - in fact on a whole bunch of notes . . . the notes and singing stylings of Frank Turcotte-Rain, a very popular country and western performer who seems to have a particular appeal to Belleville and area audiences He will be appearing this week and of course, this weekend, in the John Cabot Lounge of the hotel. And there's a matinee on Saturdays too starting at 3 p.m. See Floyd again this weekend at the Hotel Belvedere.

Why Wait 'Til Spring

If home renovating and decorating are on your list of resolutions in 1957, then the name of Paul Bernard of Bernard Interiors, 47A Campbell St. should be right there on that list too. Proper planning before you start will guarantee both, that'll get what you want the first time and, that it will be achieved properly. Paul can help you right from square one. And he's particularly adept at handling space and decor problems of businesses. It's a proven fact that surroundings definitely affect production and Paul can help you Mr. Businessman get increased production and happier employees with some carefully planned changes A new look at your office could well mean a great new business year too. Call Paul at 962-4973.

Eureka . . Eurekas!

Forgive the little play on words there but I just couldn't resist. And you won't be able to resist the great buys now on on Eureka vacuum cleaners at the Quinte Sewing Centre in the Quinte Mall. These three Eureka models on sale are the type you have seen advertised on television . . . a combination of upright and canister types of vacuum cleaners all in one. These vacuum cleaners are rated very highly by Consumer Reports. And these vacuums can adjust to any kind of carpet, including shag. What wonderful machines these are! And at what wonderful prices! See the Eurekas at the Quinte Sewing Centre and you'll say 'Eureka' too.

Modernizing With Glass

If we don't start off January with a fair amount of ambition, we're going to accomplishing very little by the end of the year. And Belleview Glass and Mirror, 354 Pinnacle St. can help you start off the year with resolve and achievement too. Now is the time to get that shower door or patio door installed; now is the time to renovate the bar area in the rec room, adding the spaciousness and elegance of bar mirrors and now is the time to get your aluminum windows measured and ordered so that you don't have to go through those 'window spring and fall gymnastics' again. Now is the time for Belleview Glass to come to the aid of you - and your home.

If This Is Your Month . . .

(And I sincerely hope it will be.) If your birth month is January, then your birthstone is a garnet. This stone, which is mined in Brazil and India, is dark red in color and once connoted royalty. W. Wonnacott and Son Jewellers, Front St. will be featuring a discussion each month of birthstones, telling you a little background and what setting are available for that particular stone. The great thing about garnets is that they are equally appealing to both men and women and can be obtained in rings, pendants, pins and 'gent sets' - cuff links and tie pins. If January is your month, or someone special that you know's month, visit W. Wonnacott and Son.

Treating Your Friends Specially

The Drift-Inn on Highway 33 near Consecon is a place you should definitely jot down in your address or telephone directory. It's a great place to treat your friends during this holiday season ,or just anytime you want to do something special for some special people. And the menu is special in the Squire Room all the time, though what is particularly special right now is the Weinerschnitzel and Lobster Margarite. The Drift-Inn really is special. Call 392-2143 for reesrvations.

Income Tax Cuts Due Next Week

OTTAWA (CP) — Take-home pay for most workers likely will go up next week, at least on paper, but it might take longer for the results of tax changes to show up on paycheques.

The federal budget tabled in November cut income taxes but the revenue department has not mailed out all the new tax tables. A department spokesman said tables were being mailed out this week with the mailing to be completed Thursday.

The tax deduction at source for a head of family who is married, with two children and is earning the average industrial wage of nearly $200 a week, will drop by close to $5.

For the average worker, unemployment insurance contributions will increase by 21 cents, but Canada Pension Plan (CPP) weekly contributions will not change. However, because the annual rate has gone up, the worker will pay CPP instalments for a longer period. CPP weekly payment schedules are set up so that the maximum annual payment is made before the end of the year.

400 Take Dip

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than 400 people braved the cold waters of English Bay on Wednesday in the 56th annual ew Year's Day Polar Bear Club swim.

Swimmers ranged in age from two years to those in their late 70s Last year 331 swimmers took part in the dip.

Two Charged

TORONTO (CP) — Police said Tuesday they have arrested and charged a second man with conspiracy and arson in an explosion and fire Monday which caused about $100,000 damage to a north Toronto leather goods store.

John Peter Figliomeni, 28, of Toronto was arrested at a city hospital where he was being treated for severe burns. Police earlier arrested Douglas Herbert Taylor, 22, also of Toronto.

Blue Movie

TORONTO (CP) — CITY-TV has been charged with broadcasting an obscene program in connection with its Baby Blue Movie feature Nov. 29.

Controversy has swirled around the Friday-midnight series for two years, but this is the first time Channel 79 Ltd., the company which owns the station, has been called into court.

The movie that drew the charge was Love Boccacio Style. It has been shown in Toronto cinemas.

CITY-TV's court appearance will be Jan. 9.

Kidnapped

TORONTO (CP) — Two masked men armed with sawed-off shotguns kidnapped a Dominion Store employee Tuesday night outside his home and forced him to give the combination to two safes in the supermarket where he worked.

Police said the gunmen cleaned out the safes and escaped with $10,000.

Douglas Brian Moore, 27, said in an interview Wednesday that he was "scared as hell" with "those guns pointed at me."

Two Charged

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — Two North Bay men were remanded in custody Tuesday until Feb. 20 when a preliminary hearing will be held to determine if there is sufficient evidence to commit them to trial on a charge of murder punishable by life imprisonment.

Paul Wayne McLean, 16, and Robert George Hillier, 22, are charged in the shooting death of taxi driver Borden Bleich, 63, of Gravenhurst.

Refusal to Ignore Pickets Held Illegal

SANT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — An appeal by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (IBEW) of an injunction granted to the New Brunswick Telephone Co. Ltd. during a strike last fall by nearly 600 telephone operators has been turned down in the New Brunswick Supreme Court appeals division

The union appealed an injunction that ordered the craft and plant personnel, members of the same union but working under separate contrarts, to refrain from strike activity. Most of the plant and craft personnel had remained off the job for a major part of the 42-day strike, refusing to cross the operators' picket lines.

The unanimous judgment was reached by Mr. Justice Henry E. Ryan, Mr. Justice R. V. Limerick and Mr. Justice John N. Bugold. The judgment stated in part: "The facts so disclosed clearly establish that the union members acted in concert and in accordance with a common understanding not to cross the operators' picket line, and such refusal was designed to restrict and limit the company's operations and constituted a strike. . ."

Windsor Man Murdered

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A man whose brother was found murdered in Detroit 19 months ago was found stabbed to death here Wednesday morning.

The body of Hugh MacCallum, 13, of nearby Rodney was found behind an apartment building in the city's east end. He had been stabbed twice in the throat.

It was Windsor's first murder of the year. No charges have been laid.

Mr. MacCallum's brother, Donald, 37, was shot to death in a Detroit alley May 3, 1973. His murder has not been solved.

A Final Check

Keeping in mind the possibility of impaired drivers, Trenton police officer David Camp tests the department's breathalyzer New Year's Eve for what proved to be the last time in 1974. Police did not use the equipment on New Year's revelers and laid no charges for impaired driving overnight. Last New Year's Eve only one charge was laid. In all of 1974, 92 such charges were laid by Trenton police.

Funds Lacking

UCS May Withdraw Bureau Support

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — The fate of the dollar-strapped Citizens Bureau is again in doubt as an expected source of local money appears threatened.

Trenton's often controversial consumer-help group expects to receive $2,000 from United Way coffers later this month.

However, the possibility now exists the funds may not materialize if the bureau cannot assure the United Community Services (UCS) board of directors it has an additional source of money.

In an interview Tuesday, UCS president Virginia O'Rourke said the bureau has failed to comply with a major requirement made of it by the board.

She said the requirement is that the bureau have funds, other than those from the United Way, available.

"To date, as far as I know, they only have promises," said Mrs. O'Rourke.

Boards chairman, Allen Baldwin confirmed Tuesday, his bureau is without written confirmation of additional funding.

Citizens Bureau personnel have been trying to raise money to keep the group in operation since a Local Initiatives Program (LIP) grant ran out in mid-summer, 1974.

Mrs. O'Rourke said assurances that a second source of operating funds is available is the "crux of the problem."

Until the bureau has something in writing, "I'm afraid the board is going to turn them down," she said.

The bureau, along with 13 other agencies, is a member of the annual United Way fund raising drive co-ordinated by the UCS.

Since the United Way failed to reach its $140,000 goal for 1974, it will be forced to reduce allotments to its 14 member agencies. Cuts will be made by the budget committee Jan. 7, after which its recommendations will be brought to the full board Jan. 9 for approval.

At that time, the fate of the Citizens Bureau allocation (originally $2,000) will be decided.

Mrs. O'Rourke said it is "crucial" the bureau meet the Jan. 7 deadline with a firm, early commitment from another funding source.

She said when the board decided to admit the bureau to the United Way campaign, it felt "very strongly" the bureau should meet its requirement.

Although she admitted the UCS allocation is a "drop in the bucket" compared to the needed funds, she said she feels it should not be used to keep the bureau merely hanging on and not servicing the citizens of Belleville.

Mr. Baldwin said he is optimistic other major funding can be arranged but if "they (UCS) want that first, then to hell with them."

"What do they do for people when they get in a crunch?" he asked. "I question their motives. It's the people's money."

Youths Charged In Double Crash

TWEED — Two youths were charged after a car they were in was involved in two separate accidents on the Stoco Rd. south of here early New Year's Day.

Police said the car, driven by David Masterson, 17, of Stoco, was in collision with a pickup truck driven by William Countryman, 26, RR2, Tweed, on the Stoco Rd., a half mile east of Highway 37.

Damage was estimated at [illegible] to the truck and $300 to the car.

Shortly after, police allege, a passenger in the car drove off in the vehicle.

At the highway intersection the automobile rammed a tree and sustained another $500 damage.

Masterson and John Robert Gunter, 17, of Stoco, have been charged with impaired driving, careless driving and drinking while minors.

In another mishap investigated by provincial police from Madoc the drivers of two pickup trucks were uninjured when their vehicles collided on the Crowe Lake Rd., four miles north of Marmora, Tuesday.

A total of $450 damage was caused the vehicles driven by Bruce MacKenzie, 59, Marmora, and Lloyd Stone, 40, RR3, Brighton.

Garbage, Parking Picton Priorities This Year

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Improvements to the sewerage disposal plant, waste disposal and parking facilities are among the priorities confronting town council in 1975 says mayor-elect Donald King.

Mr. King, who defeated incumbent mayor James Bird and mayoralty contender Margaret Ackerman at the polls last month added he plans to organize a special sub-committee to investigate town parking.

He noted it is important to relieve traffic congestion with adequate parking facilities.

The mayor-elect said plans initiated by the last council for improvements to the sewerage disposal plant must be continued.

Waste disposal also will become an issue for action in 1975 and recently Mr. King visited the town of Alymer to observe its disposal system in operation.

"We have to solve the problem," he said.

An alternative to Picton's present dump site probably will be required next year.

Picton reeve Ross Cronkwright, re-elected to office this month says improvements to the town sewerage system should be initiated at once.

He suggested it may take two years to complete the required work which involves expansion of the sewerage plant.

DONALD KING

Reeve Cronkwright noted the original cost figure for the project was about $350,000 but observes this figure now has doubled.

He said off-street parking must be developed for Picton merchants and agrees with mayor-elect Donald King this will be a 1975 priority.

Reeve Cronkwright said he does not feel immediate action will be required concerning a dump site.

He added the ministry of environment probably supports a bin disposal system.

Picton deputy-reeve Larry Richardson, acclaimed to office this month, agrees improvements to the town's sewerage system must begin at once.

Action is needed immediately or the project will be "priced out of sight," he said.

He referred to the original cost estimate of about $350,000 and added the last figure submitted was approximately $750,000.

Deputy-reeve Richardson stressed council has not dragged its heels but much time has been spent in waiting for approvals from various government departments.

A swimming pool for the community is a priority for council in 1975 said the deputy-reeve.

Another council priority in 1975 will be preparation of a secondary plan by Hallowell Township and Picton, said the deputy-reeve.

He noted he is not convinced Picton has a parking problem and would not consider parking a number one priority.

Deputy - reeve Richardson added, however, he would support any plans to investigate the parking situation further.

Island Residents Barter for Goods

NORFOLK ISLAND (Reuter — Inflation has hit this remote picturesque Pacific Island, reducing many of its 1,250 inhabitants to bartering.

A territory under the control of Australia, tiny Norfolk Island, 1,000 miles across the ocean from Sydney, has been regarded as a tax haven for many years.

But now the residents of the 15-square-mile island, some of whom are descendants of the 18th century mutineers from Captain Bligh's HMS Bounty, say inflatiin has almost completely eroded the benefits of living free of income tax and import duty.

It has become common to see two men bartering in one of the island's half-dozen hotels—a bag of green vegetables for a needed car part, a side of beef to pay a lawyer's bill.

The island has been drawn into the world-wide inflation problem as a result of the inhabitants basing their economy on tourism over the last 10 years.

Many items are cheaper on Norfolk Island than in Australia and other parts of the world because of the island's tax-free system but high freight costs and low food the cost of living.

Food prices are high compared with Australia and fresh vegetables and fruit, milk and meat are often scarce.

Electrical goods and alcohol are cheap but motor vehicles are an expense because of freight costs, shortage of spare parts and the price of gasoline.

Even so, there are many cars on Norfolk Island's 60 miles of roads.

Instead of income tax, the island still has a relic of its past in a "public works call," which requires all men between 21 and 55 who have lived on the island for more than six months and those over 55 who have lived on the island for less than 10 years to pay an annual sum of between $10 and $20.

Instead of this, they may choose to perform public works for five to 10 days, depending on their assessed "call rate."

The tourism boom has brought Norfolk Island an influx of cars, a radio station, telephones and regular airline flights from both Australia and New Zealand.

Some 8,500 tourists a year visit the island, mainly from Australia and New Zealand, beauty, mild climate, and historic buildings which date back to the days when the island was a British penal colony.

Norfolk Island was discovered by Captain James Cook, during his second world voyage of exploration, on Oct. 10, 1774. The first settlement was established in 1788.

The island had no native inhabitants despite the plentiful water supply and fertile soil, and it was not until 1856 when descendants of the Bounty mutineers were moved to Norfolk from Pitcairn Island by the British government that a true settlement was started.

The nature of the island and its people has changed much in recent years.

Only the historical buildings, some still in use by the Australian administration at Kingston on the southern end of the island, and colorful place names like Slaughter Bay, Headstone Point and Bloody Bridge, remain as a reminder of the island's past.

Receives Navy Cros

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — The navy presented the Navy Cross, its highest decoration for wartime valor, to Lt.-Cmdr. George Coker for his escape from the North Vietnamese prison known as the Hanoi Hilton. Coker 31, one of the few PoWs to break out of the heavily-guarded prison, was recaptured near the Tonkin Gulf, beaten and put in solitary confinement for 2½ years.

Ever-lasting Car Can Cruise at 160

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dave Bradwell, 24, has a car that can cruise at 160 miles an hour, won't rust, and which he says will last forever. And he built it himself.

"I was watching TV one night and I started drawing the car," said Mr. Bradwell. "Once I saw it on paper I knew I had to do it. I quit my work and started on it in the garage the next morning."

The project took about five months with Mr. Bradwell working as much as 16 hours at a time on the car.

Having already built a few hot rods, the former high school shop instructor said he knew what he was getting into at the outset.

He has gone through about $12,000 in parts and materials alone, and the project still is not complete. To meet government safety regulations for new cars, he must install impact — absorbing bumpers which will cost an estimated $500.

The car has an aluminum shell. To rivet it to the frame, Mr. Bradwell drilled about 24,000 holes and installed 8,000 rivets. Three cheap drills met their end during that portion of the project.

It cost him $1,000 for the engine (a 425-cubic-inch rear-mounted V-8 normally used in the front-wheel-drive Toronado); $1,000 for aluminum sheets thick enough to last and last; and hundreds of dollars for instrumentation.

The car has sufficient acceleration to take it from zero to 65 miles an hour and back to a full stop within a city block.

But Mr. Bradwell stresses safety and durability.

"It will last forever. There's nothing to rust."

Mr. Bradwell said repairs are easy to make and parts can be obtained almost anywhere.

"All the mechanical parts are available at any GM dealer in Kamloops or anywhere else. There are a few Volkswagen parts but you can get those easily too."

And, except for the addition of the regulation bumpers, the car passed through the Vancouver safety test station with flying colors.

Now that he has completed his first car, Mr. Bradwell said he envisions the possibility of building more, each a little different, and selling them. The one he has completed bears a price tag of $18,000, but the seller will dicker.

"I could do about four a year," said Mr. Bradwell. The first model was over-designed and far stronger than necessary. He said a second could be built for about $8,000 in materials plus labor.

BILLY BALDWIN DECORATES — Billy Baldwin.

Interior decorating has a fascination for us all. Mr. Baldwin is the dean of American decorators and one of the most versatile. He has decorated a one-room city apartment and a 7,000 acre ranch. Good taste need not and does not mean great expense. Mr. Baldwin feels that nothing is in good taste, regardless of its cost, unless it suits your personality and the way you live. He discusses the importance of colors, how to make the best of a small room; lighting, fabrics and many other aspects of decorating.

THE COMPANION GUIDE TO MADRID AND CENTRAL SPAIN — Alistair Boyd.

This is an easy to read, well-illustrated guide book to Madrid and Central Spain. Mr. Boyd writes with knowledge and love that reveals the texture of a fascinating country. He encourages people to use the provincial towns as centres for regional touring. here is also an appendix on eating and drinking.

MY LIFE AND FILMS — Jean Renoir.

Son of the famous painter, Jean Renoir was the little boy with the golden curls in the paintings by his father. His story begins in the France of the late 19th century, in that wonderful world that comes alive here in his words as it does in his father's pictures. Jean Renoir became one of the greatest masters of the art of cinema. In his book he portrays the places where he has lived and worked in Europe and Hollywood and India. He tells us why he became a maker of films, but most of all he shows us himself, a man of dazzling simplicity, immense creativity and profound humanity.

KITCHENS — House and Garden.

A kitchen is really the most lived-in room in the house. As such, it should be the most personalized and self-expressive room of all, and that is what 'House and Garden' tries to do. There is detailed advice on how to achieve the perfect solution to suit your life-style, taste and pocket. Outstanding pictures were selected from the files of 'House and Garden' magazine and they present an up-to-date view of what is best in kitchen design today.

LET'S GO SKATING — Howard Bass.

This is a highly individual but most authoritative book. The newcomer is shown how to take up and develop an interest in the sport, with suggestions as to what equipment and clothing are most suitable. Figure skating, free skating, ice dancing, ice hockey and the spectacular theatrical ice shows are all covered. There is a special chapter on the world championships and winter Olympics.

CANADA SPORTING HEROES — Doug Fisher and Side Wise.

This book is a record of today — little-known facts about the superstars of the hockey rink, the football field, the swimming pool, and the horse races. The development of Canadian football is traced from its earliest colonial beginnings to the Grey Cup. Here, in spendid profusion, parade the sporting heroes — and heroines — who have made Canada one of the most athletically gifted nations in the world.

MEMO FROM HELEN GAGEN, CONSUMER ADVISOR

NOW THERE'S NEW LIGHT ON MEAT BUYING

For practicality and economic reasons, some meats are frozen at their source to ensure reaching consumers at the peak of quality. For some years now, all Miracle Food Mart meats in the non-freezer section which had been previously frozen, carried a label saying, "For the best flavor and quality, do not re-freeze."

Now for the sake of flavor, good texture and overall quality, government regulations require that such meats in non-freezer counters of all supermarkets carry the wording, "Previously frozen." Miracle Food Mart will continue to include its advice about not re-freezing. In the case of ground meats, required government wording is, "From previously frozen meats."

The greater part of the meat in Miracle Food Mart's non-freezer meat section is not previously frozen. But when the label indicates that it has been, texture and flavor are better if the meat is cooked and eaten within a couple of days. Or cook it into a favorite stew, meat pie, meat sauce or lasagne and freeze in the cooked form.

Strict sanitation and government regulations assure safety of previously frozen meat. But for most satisfactory results, keep in mind that if it has been previously frozen, it is better to be cooked before refreezing.

In Heart of Central Asia World's Highest Dam Rises

NUREK, Soviet Tadzhikistan (Reuter) — In a remote mountain valley in the heart of Soviet central Asia, thousands of workers and hundreds of tons of machinery are toiling round the clock to build what will be the world's highest dam and Asia's mightiest producer of electric power.

egun in 1962, the Nurek rises 500 feet above what was once a narrow gorge on the Vakhsh River and the first three turbines of the planned nine are already generating current for the area's rapidly growing industry.

By 1979, when all turbines should be running with a massed output of 2.7 million kilowatts, the barrier will tower 985 feet above the power station at the dam's base. The Guinness Book of Records lists the highest dam in the world as the Grande Dixence in Switzerland, 932 feet from base to rim.

The Nurek dam lies about 25 miles from the Tadzhik capital of Dushanbe in what 12 years ago was an almost inaccessible valley.

To build the dam, which will form the nucleus of what Soviet engineers call the South Tadzhik Industrial Complex, comprising an aluminium plant and an electrochemical works, thousands of tons of machinery had to be hauled over newly constructed and tortuous mountain roads.

On the site, where a few mud huts made up the former village of Nurek—its name in Tadzhik means "the hottest place"—a whole new town had to be put up to house the builders and provide amenities.

Many of the engineers had worked on the construction of the Soviet-financed and designed Aswan Dam in upper Egypt.

"The two dams are really quite similar" explained Yuri Sevenard, construction chief at Nurek and himself a veteran of Aswan. But the Egyptian dam is only 246 feet high, although not much smaller in volume than Nurek's planned 1.98 billion cubic feet.

At the site, more than 100 dump trucks labor up the sides of the Pulisanga Gorge, tipping 27-ton loads of material onto the wide, unfinished crest of the dam.

Some of them carry local clay, dumping it carefully into two lines about 50 yards apart across the top of the mound.

Sevenard explained: "This clay is being packed into two vertical layers, forming a kind of pyramid, to keep the dam water-tight.

"When compressed, the clay is almost as dense as concrete—but if there's any earthquake, its flexible and won't crack."

Tadzhikistan is the Soviet Union's most volatile earthquake area and the dam has been designed to take tremors up to nine points on the 12-point Russian scale.

While Sevenard was confident that his men would meet the 1979 target date for completion, he admitted construction was two years behind the original schedule.

The difficulty appears to lie with the main consumers—the aluminum plant at Regar and the chemical works at nearby Yavan, which are well behind plan in getting into production.

Regar should produce its first metal by next March, but holdups were such that Pravda, the Soviet Communist party newspaper, warned two years ago that hundreds of millions of rubles might be lost if there was not better co-ordination between the three projects.

"There have been no serious delays on our side," said Sevenard. "We could have built our dam more quickly but our consumers wouldn't have been ready, so we preferred to keep costs down."

As it is, estimates of Nurek's final cost have risen from an initial $750 million in 1962 to about $1 billion.

Electricity is not the only benefit Nurek will provide for the region, which is hit by heavy rain and snow in winter, followed by fierce heat—up to 120 degrees fahrenheit—and drought in summer.

The regulated water flow provided by the reservoir will be used to double the irrigated area, now 1.24 billion acres of this key cotton-growing republic.

At present the lake is only 15 per cent full, but it already stretches 12 miles up what were once the foaming rapids of the Vakhsh.

The engineers are filling the reservoir slowly, afraid that to burden the earth suddenly with the weight of 2.5 cubic miles of water would touch off uncontrollable earthquakes.

Local officials predict the waters of the lake will provide the area with its own gentle climate, so plans are afoot to build tourist facilities along the unspoilt shores.

Local fishermen are already saying that the clear waters of the reservoir are producing the best trout in central Asia.

Outnumber Men

REGINA (CP) — There are more than three million cattle in Saskatchewan, an average of 3.3 head for every resident. Saskatchewan ranks third among Canadian provinces in the cattle count, behind Alberta and Ontario.

Will Stay Open

LEWES, England (CP) — East Sussex County council has voted to reconsider closing the county reference library. It reversed its original decision after receiving protests from authors, artists, teachers and students.

Fishing Industry Means Isolated Prosperity

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — In some Newfoundland communities good times are increasing economic prospects, but around other settlements, the gloom hangs like a mourning shawl.

There were glows of prosperity in a number of places where commerce was brisk because the fishermen made good catches and plants worked overtime to process them.

On the Burin Peninsula, where 20,000 Newfoundlanders take their living mainly from the fishing industry, the year was a good one.

The area is "the most prosperous region in the province," said Justice Minister T. Alex Hickman, who represents the Burin region in the Newfoundland legislature.

A fluorspar mine employs about 400 persons and there is a shipyard at Marystown, but the yard depends on building boats for the fishery and repairs to draggers, trawlers and other craft, so the bulk of the peninsula's residents make their living directly or indirectly from the fishery.

A fleet of about 50 modern trawlers with crews totalling 800 sets out from four ports on the peninsula—Burin, Fortune, Grand Bank and Marystown—in a year-round operation.

The draggers bring in cod, flounder, redfish, haddock, herring and other fish and keep more than 2,000 production line workers, plant personnel and shipyard employees working from January to December.

The brighter future for Marystown began in the 1960s when the former Liberal government of Premier Joseph Smallwood attracted the fish plant and shipyard. Both opened in 1967.

At the time, the government's resettlement program, under which many people living in small isolated villages were persuaded to leave their homes for larger communities, was in high gear and the population of Marystown tripled within a few months.

Other Burin Peninsula ports and fishing settlements along the southwest coast of the island have had fish plants and trawler fleets for more than 20 years.

But beyond the Burin Peninsula, along the coast a distance of 200 miles to St. John's, there is only one year-round operation.

Trepassey, midway between the two points, has a trawler fleet that employs 300 persons or more full-time. In St. John's, the Halifax-based firm of National Sea Products Ltd. has a fleet of modern draggers and a large processing

Will Aid Tourists

ESTEVAN, Sask. (CP)—This southeastern Saskatchewan city has been selected by the provincial highways department to start a pilot program to provide highway turnouts at city entrances. The city will erect informational map-type signs. The signs will show tourists available facilities, major streets and highway routes and general information of use to highway travellers.

Resolved:

Continued quality and value in 1975.

A happy New Year to everyone. And may 1975 be your most prosperous year yet.
Our resolution for this year is a big one. But one we will live up to. And that's to continue to give you quality foods, value and friendly, helpful service. After all, you made us what we are. Canada's leading retail food chain. And we do our best to live up to that image, every single day of the year. So if you're not already shopping Dominion, try us. And see why more Canadians have made us the number one food store.

Trudeau Will Press Euromart To Give Canada Special Deal

OTTAWA (CP) — The eyes of the Canadian government are expected to be turned toward Europe again in 1975 as Prime Minister Trudeau continues attempts to gain special status for Canada with the European Economic Community (EEC)

The prime minister will visit four countries early in March to continue the campaign be launched this year to make Europeans understand Canada's bid for a special arrangement

About the time of the visits—to Rome, Bonn, the Hague, and London—negotiations might be starting with the EEC on the Canadian bid. Exploratory talks that might lead to those negotiations are to start in the new year.

But while the focus of external affairs may be on Europe, at least for the early part of the year, it will not be the only important foreign work before the government and the relatively new External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen

Mr. Trudeau will join Mr. MacEachen at the Commonwealth Conference in Jamaica in April. Canadian officials consider it a highly important conference at which developed and underdeveloped countries in the English-speaking world will deal with resource transfers, commodity agreements and the like.

Mr. Trudeau started travelling after his July federal election victory, deciding to add personal intervention to the long-time Canadian attempts to gain some form of associate membership in the EEC, grown to nine with the admission of Britain, a primary trading partner, and others.

The idea is to attempt to balance the political and economic influence of the United States. He emphasized in a subsequent trip to Washington to visit President Gerald Ford that Canada is not being anti-American.

The prime minister visited the EEC in Brussels and was told that Canada's proposals for a contractual agreement with the community were "banal." Earlier he had won support for his efforts from Belgium but President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France declined to work for him.

But the EEC did agree to enter negotiations with Canada on some form of agreement, a greater achievement than the United States had been able to do, and talks are to start

Meanwhile, a tariff war might be looming because the EEC refuses to give Canada any more concessions for losses suffered because Britain entered the market.

Canada has agreed to some market tariffs but not those dealing with cereals. Negotiations under the General Agreements on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) are near breakdown.

The prime minister, making the first visit to France since Gaulle's long-time-free-Quebec outburst set in 1967, left Paris for Brussels satisfied with trade talks and the treatment accorded him.

The prime minister said Giscard d'Estaing understands the federal system. The French president, however, later gave Premier Robert Bourassa of Quebec red-carpet treatment that was close to that accorded to heads of government.

Trudeau went to Washington early in December intent on explaining Canadian government policy on such cross-border irritants as oil, energy and meat, and livestock quotas.

Major objective was to establish an easy relationship with President Ford and in that the two-day trip was successful However, the prime minister did not attempt to do anything more than explain Canadian positions on the matters that strain relationships between the two countries.

There were other major external matters to concern the government in 1974:

—Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka of Japan visited Canada in September and left with both sides talking of increased trade. Mr. Tanaka subsequently was forced out of office because of business scandals.

—Mr. MacEachen took over from Mitchell Sharp as external affairs minister. It was a shift of personalities that is changing the image of the department. Mr. Sharp was open and easily accessible to inquiries. Mr. MacEachen is the opposite.

—Ivan Head, the prime minister's foreign affairs adviser, left the impression in an interview that the country was headed for a left-wing, moralistic foreign policy. The reference was made just before Swedish Prime Minister Olof Palme paid an official visit to Canada. Prime Minister Trudeau subsequently denied the impression and Mr. MacEachen talked of progress but not major change.

—Mr. MacEachen and Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan went to the Rome food conference and pledged increased food aid, equal to that of a few years ago, starting next year. The Canadian aid agency later announced an increase in food aid for this year.

The prime minister of Iran also dropped in for a five-day visit to Canada and talked of the millions of oil-dollars that were available for Canadians in one form or another.

Amir Abbas Hoveyda talked of the millions that Iran has made from oil and how some are available for investment in Canada and some are available for Canadian exports. Not the least that Iran could buy was nuclear reactors, worth millions. It could also buy eggs—of which Canada has many to spare.

At a time when there is little heard but inflation and recession, his words were welcomed.

Lindbergh, U Thant On '74 Death List

By R. J. ANDERSON
The Canadian Press

Many well-known newspaper men, engaged in an occupation often subject to stress and strain, died in 1974 and the world of entertainment lost some notable figures. Charles Lindbergh died and so did U Thant, the outstanding secretary-general of the United Nations who served for a decade.

Lindbergh, who won fame and fortune in 1927 with his solo flight in the Spirit of St. Louis from New York to Paris, died in Hawaii Aug. 26 at the age of 72. That was just a day after another outstanding aviation pioneer, Alexander de Seversky, died at age 80 in New York.

U Thant of Burma was UN secretary-general from November, 1961, to November, 1971. He had been in ill health for some time before his death in New York Nov. 25 at the age of 65.

His body was taken to Burma for burial but the funeral services were far from peaceful. University students who thought U Thant deserved interment in an imposing mausoleum stole the body and nine persons were killed in subsequent rioting.

Whether Ed Sullivan could be classed as a newspaper man or as an entertainer was debatable.

He started as a reporter in New York City and remained a newspaper man to the end, writing a Broadway column for The Daily News. But he was better known outside New York as master of ceremonies for the Ed Sullivan Show, on television weekly from 1948 to 1972. He was 72 when he died Oct. 17.

Hal Boyle for many years wrote a humorous column for The Associated Press and won a Pulitzer Prize for his work as a Second World War correspondent. He had been ill for some time when he died April 1, aged 63.

Walter Lippmann, 85, won two Pulitzer Prizes and a host of other awards in a career as a political reporter and analyst that spanned six decades and was presented with New York City's highest honor, the Bronze Medallion, only two months before his death Dec. 14.

Arthur Krock, 86, another Pulitzer Prize-winning columnist, for the New York Times, died April 12 in Washington. Arthur Daley, Times sport columnist, died Jan. 3, aged 69, and well-known television newscaster Chet Huntley, 62, died March 20. Frank McGee, 52, NBC news commentator and anchor-man of the Today Show, died April 17 and Stewart Alsop, 60, political columnist, May 26.

The illness of President Georges Pompidou was a well-kept secret in France for months before his death April 2 at the age of 62.

Other world figures who died during the year included Argentine President Juan Peron, July 1 at the age of 78.

The theatre lost Katharine Cornell, 81, June 9 and Duke Ellington, 75, jazz composer, orchestra leader and pianist, died May 25.

Samuel Goldwyn, 91, dominant in Hollywood for decades, died Jan. 31 and the movies also lost Billy de Wolfe, 67, March 5.

Comedian Jack Benny died of cancer in Los Angeles Dec. 27 at the age of 80

Death came June 18 to Marshal Georgi Zhukov, famed Russian Second World War army commander, at age 77 and also to other military leaders: Gen. Carl Spaatz, 83, first chief of staff of United States air forces, July 14, Gen. Creighton Abrams, 59, U.S. Army chief of staff and former commander in Vietnam, Sept. 4, and Gen. George Grivas, 75, leader of the anti-government Greek-Cypriot underground in Cyprus, Jan. 27.

The world of sport lost many prominent personalities.

Among them were James J. Braddock, former world heavyweight boxing champion, Nov. 29 at age 68; 63-year-old Dan Topping, for 21 years president of New York Yankees, May 18, and Indian Jack Jacobs, 53, former Winnipeg Blue Bombers quarterback and one of the first nominees to the Canadian Football Hall of Fame, Jan. 12.

Death came, too, to one of the richest men in the world. He was 85-year-old H. L. Hunt, reputed to be worth as much as $5 billion, who died Nov. 29.

Early Hazard Warning

LONDON (CP) — A dashboard-mounted message display unit to warn motorists of hazards ahead has been developed in Britain for use on high-speed roads. Operated by roadside transmitters, a working prototype unit has been developed by the transport and road research laboratory. A buzzer warns the driver of the message. The unit prints out the hazard, where it is and what the driver is to do.

All U.S. Buyers Agree to Boost For Natural Gas

OTTAWA (CP) — All United States buyers of natural gas produced in the western Canadian provinces have agreed to pay additional 67 per cent for their supplies, with most contracts starting New Year's Day.

When the federal government announced a new pricing plan in September, raising prices to $1 a thousand cubic feet from an average 60 cents, the buyers were offered a choice—pay the new prices or pay existing prices for two years and then lose their contracts.

A spokesman for the National Energy Board, the federal agency that controls oil and gas exports, said none of the companies opted for the lower price for two years.

"I guess they just need our gas and didn't want to see the contracts end within two years," the spokesman said.

The higher price for most gas export contracts—574.5 billion cubic feet a year—comes into effect New Year's Day.

The remainder of the gas, totalling 434.9 billion cubic feet, is exported from British Columbia and the increased prices for those started Nov. 1.

The government says the increases put Canadian gas in a more equitable relationship with other energy sources in the United States.

Producers had expressed the fear that consumers would switch to natural gas from oil since the gas was "undervalued."

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald says he expects domestic prices to increase gradually, reaching prices for an equivalent amount of oil within three or four years.

With domestic oil now selling at $6.50 a barrel, the commodity price for gas should be about $1.25 a thousand cubic feet, energy department officials say. At present the gas sells for about 45 cents a thousand cubic feet at the wellhead.

Sagging beef prices in the U.S. and a willingness in some countries, including Australia, to hold live cattle off the slaughter market, are main reasons for the 1974 decline. Australia historically supplies about one-half of the beef imported into the U.S.

Worldwide production of beef, particularly that from grass-fed animals is expected to increase significantly in 1975, the department said.

U.S. Beef Imports Limited by Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. beef imports will be held down in 1975 to below levels that might touch off stiff quotas if negotiations with foreign countries are successful, the agriculture department said Tuesday.

If agreements are worked out, the department said 1975 imports—mainly low-grade beef used for hamburger—will total 1,150 million pounds. Undersecretary Phil Campbell, who made the announcement, said that estimate was about 30 million pounds less than what would touch off quotas.

In effect, the United States is telling other countries to hold down shipments of beef to U.S. markets voluntarily or be faced with tough mandatory curbs prescribed by American federal law.

The 1975 import estimate was based on the expectation that voluntary arrangements would be made with the foreign suppliers. The estimate although less than the maximum allowed under the quota formula, is about 85 million pounds more than that entered the U.S. market in 1974.

Meat import restrictions, designed in a 1964 law to protect American cattle producers, had been suspended since mid-1972. The quotas were set aside at that time to encourage entry of more foreign beef to help cool off increasing retail prices.

But cattle prices have slumped last year and the government has been pressed to reimpose quotas. President Ford promised in a campaign speech last fall he either would enforce the quotas in 1975 or seek negotiated settlements to hold down imports.

The announcement said beef imports in 1974 now are expected to total 1,064 million pounds, down about 50 million from a previous estimate and about one-fourth below 1973 imports despite the open door policy.

Oil Company Tactics Are Probed in Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says federal combines agents are investigating oil company tactics in Metropolitan Toronto.

The newspaper says that some major oil companies are applying pressure to force gasoline retailers to reduce prices and profits, driving smaller dealers out of business

It says that the Ontario Retail Gasoline Association (ORGA), representing about 1,000 dealers, complained to Ottawa that oil company coercion on dealers has created a gasoline price war and high-pressure sales tactics at a time of supposed energy shortages.

The Globe and Mail says that sources in the provincial government and in the oil industry have revealed that federal investigators are checking complaints that dealers are being forced illegally to sell at company-set, market-war prices.

Robert Pyke, ORGA executive director, is quoted as saying that dealers have resorted to increasing charges on car repairs to recoup losses on gasoline sales.

"In fact, some who have complained about low gasoline margins have been told by company reps to jack up the prices in their (service) bays," the newspaper quotes Mr. Pyke as saying.

Catfish Hunter Needs to Make New York His Kind of Town

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Yankees pleased pitcher Jim (Catfish) Hunter with the richest contract in baseball history.

That was relatively easy compared to the task which now faces Hunter—satisfying the toughest sell in the major leagues, the New York fans and the New York media.

If Hunter is successful, New York can be very friendly to a country boy from Hertford, N.C. But if he fails—and failure is judged by steeper standards here than anywhere else, particularly when you're paid as much as Hunter will be—New York can be a tough place to live. Even if you have a contract worth $3.75 million over five years.

If Hunter thought he had it rough dealing with his former boss, Oakland A's owner Charles Finley, he might think again after enduring the ever-present media and thousands of victory-hungry fans in New York who won't be kind if he doesn't win fast and often.

There is a hidden cost in Hunter's contract, believed to be one of the three or four largest ever negotiated in the kingdom of sport.

If Hunter, acknowledged the winningest pitcher in baseball the past five seasons and the American League Cy Young Award winner with a 25-12 record in 1974, is worth $3.75 million, then how far below financially should the rest of the team be?

It's a good bet that the Yankees salary structure might be in for an inflationary push because of their newest player.

Gabe Paul, president of the Yankees, who personally centered the chase for Hunter with two personal visits to Ahoskie, N.C., doesn't appear worried.

He thinks Hunter can perform and will perform.

"We have been looking for a right-handed pitcher," Paul said after Hunter signed Tuesday night. "In Hunter, we have the winner of the 1974 Cy Young Award. I don't think we can do any better than that.

"If he wasn't as competitive as he is and had as much pride as he does, then we couldn't give him a multi-year contract."

JIM HUNTER

Paul says the players are welcoming Hunter with open arms.

"The morale of the club will be improved and increased when you add a player of Hunter's stature," Paul said. "The players talked to all say signing Hunter would be great since it will enhance their chances for a World Series share."

Several high baseball sources close to the negotiations told The Associated Press that Hunter's attorneys were asking for a $1 million bonus, a salary of $200,000 a year for five years, attorneys' fees of $200,000, a 10-year retirement plan calling for $50,000 a year, a $1 million life insurance policy on himself and a $25,000 insurance policy on each of his two children. The sources said they believed the Yankees agreed to that package or something very close to it.

Hunter said that one or two other teams had flashed similar figures at him, and there was one club, believed to be San Diego Padres, which offered more. But when it came to deciding time, Hunter said he chose New York because he wanted to be a Yankee.

"Ever since I was a little boy I wanted to be a Yankee," Hunter said. "I think it's the goal of every ball player to be a Yankee."

Meanwhile, Finley said he still plans to go to court to keep Hunter with the A's.

Hunter was declared a free agent by a board of arbitration which ruled that Finley had defaulted on Hunter's contract by not paying him the second half of his $100,000 salary for 1974.

Lawyers for Finley said Tuesday that their next court argument would be based on the theory that if Finley had paid the $50,000 in the manner Hunter had asked, he would have been comitting tax fraud.

A hearing on Finley's suit is to be held Friday in Alameda County Superior Court in Oakland but Hunter's lawyers have said they are confident the suit will not be successful.

Flyers Blank Canucks For League Points Lead

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Philadelphia Flyers, defending Stanley Cup champions, are the new points leaders in the National Hockey League and goalie Bernie Parent has his seventh shutout of the season.

The Flyers emerged 2-0 victors over the Canucks at Vancouver Wednesday night after Parent won a goaltending battle with Vancouver's Gary Smith who gave up Bill Barber's winning goal late in the third period.

The win put the Flyers at the top with 55 points in 37 games, and gave them a 13-point lead over second-place New York Rangers in the Patrick Division. Buffalo Sabres, the overall points leader the last few weeks, now is second with 53 but still has a seven-point lead over second-place Boston Bruins in the Adams Division.

In other games Wednesday, the Rangers beat Chicago Black Hawks 6-2 and Toronto Maple Leafs tied California Seals 3-3.

Tuesday night, Los Angeles Kings beat Chicago 3-1 and Detroit Red Wings ended an eight-game winless streak by beating California 4-3.

Barber's 16th goal of the season broke the scoreless battle at 16:16 of the third period.

Philadelphia captain Bobby Clarke set up Barber's goal when he out-muscled a Canucks forward along the boards and kicked the puck to Barber who let go a 20-foot shot to catch Smith on the short side.

Clarke also set up Ross Lonsberry's empty-net goal in the final minute.

At Toronto, the Leafs, who a few weeks ago were criticized by owner Harold Ballard for lack of hustle, were further berated by a member of the Seals, who are only four points behind the third-place Leafs in the Adams Division.

Seals forward Dave Hrechkosy, who scored once in the game, said afterward that he and his teammates still believe they can overtake Toronto for the division's third playoff spot.

"Don't be surprised if Toronto finishes out of the playoffs," said Hrechkosy. "They got a lot of great talent on that team but they just don't seem to hustle like the Leaf clubs I used to know and admire.

"A tie on the road was great for us tonight. If we stay close to them this month, we can catch them later because of all the home games we finish with."

Hrechkosy's goal midway in the first period gave the Leafs a 2-0 lead but Toronto tied it before the period ended. Rookie Charlie Simmer put the Seals back in front in the second period but Errol Thompson's goal gave Leafs the tie and California goalie Gilles Meloche withstood an 18-shot Toronto rally in the third period.

At New York, goals by rookies Rick Middleton and Ron Greschner started a four-goal Rangers outburst in the second period that prompted the Black Hawks to lift goalie Tony Esposito in favor of Mike Veisor.

Also scoring for New York was Rod Gilbert with his 20th of the season, the 10th time in his career he has scored 20 or more in a year.

Canada One Win Away From World Junior Title

WINNIPEG (CP) — Ed Stanlowski of Regina Pats recorded the first shutout of the world junior hockey tournament Wednesday and moved Canada to within one victory of the world junior hockey title.

Canada scored two goals in the first period and went on to beat Czechoslovakia 3-0 for its fourth straight triumph. In the other game Wednesday, Sweden defeated Finland 5-3 to grab a solid hold on third place in the six-team, round-robin competition.

All teams are idle today with the United States meeting Czechoslovakia Friday in Minneapolis and Sweden going against the Soviet Union in Winnipeg.

"The reason there was a shutout is that everyone gave 110 per cent. Everyone was keyed up and all the guys were coming back," said Stanlowski, who kicked out 29 shots to backstop the Western Canada Hockey League representatives to the victory. The only time he was severely tested was early in the first and second periods and in the final minute of the third when the Canadians were playing two men short.

Mel Bridgman of Victoria Cougars and Bryan Trottier of Lethbridge Broncos, the two leading scorers in the WCHL, each picked up their fourth goals of the tournament. Mark Davidson opened the scoring with his third.

Canada needs only a victory against the defending champion Soviet Union in their final game Sunday to win the championship.

Sweden picked up its second win in three games by scoring a pair of goals less than a minute apart late in the third period. The goals came after Finland had tied the score in the first minute of the period. Sweden then had a goal disallowed midway through it.

The shot by Joergen Pattersson seemed to pass through a hole in the net but the goal was not counted. With both teams on edge, tempers flared soon afterwards with Anders Steen of Sweden and Finland's Tapio Levo squaring off and receiving major penalties.

Rolf Eriksson scored twice for Sweden with Torbjoern Nilsson, Bjoern Johansson and Kent Nilsson getting the others. Matti Hagman, Jari Laiho and Kari Makkonen scored for Finland.

The bigger and more powerful Finns, who held Canada on even terms through almost 60 full minutes on Monday, were continually beaten to the puck by Sweden.

Miroslav Kubera, coach of the Czechoslovakian team, said he was "pleased with the output of the players, but not with the outcome."

"Shooting is a problem of hockey in Czechoslovakia and Europe, not just with this team," he said when asked about his team's production of just two goals in three games.

"We haven't got the punch in front of the net. In the first period we shot at the net 14 times and in the second period eight times, but bore no fruit. It seems Europeans need about 10 shots on goal to put one in.

"However, Canadian players only need about five shots to score."

Kubera said the problem is that Europeans often need time to get set for their shots while Canadians and Americans shoot the puck almost instantly.

"And Canadians use the wrist shot more and it doesn't give the defence, mainly the goalie, time to get ready."

CNFL Gives Junior Football Shot in Arm

TORONTO (CP) — Junior football in Canada is undergoing a popularity revival and proof of the revamped program can be found in the new interest being generated by its exponents.

Jerry Joynt of Regina, commissioner of the new Canadian National Football League, explained this week purposes of the CNFL and its goals.

The CNFL was established at the recent annual gathering of junior football teams in Vancouver and comprises 26 teams representing four conferences—British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan-Manitoba and Ontario.

"We want to work closer with clubs in the Canadian Football League (CFL). We want to improve the calibre of play in junior football and to make the public more aware of the junior game, Joynt said.

He explained that an all-out effort would be made to give juniors the best coaching possible to prepare him for a professional career, adding:

"If a boy that age (22) isnt ready for the pros, he'll not likely ever be. So we should supply him with all the necessary tools to prepare him for the pro game."

Joynt said that while the CNFL plans are to work closely with the CFL, the group would continue to operate within the Canadian Amateur Football Association (CAFA).

"We will just have more autonomy, he said, suggesting the CAFA was mainly interested in mass participation rather than supplying the professional teams with players.

Joynt suggested that while Canadian professional teams draw their homebrew talent from three sources—Canadian colleges, U. S. colleges and juniors, juniors are obviously low man on the system.

"We want more CFL teams to realize the juniors can supply top-notch players. At the present time there is no Canadian junior draft (similar to what the CFL now participates in at the university level), but we hope to have one in three to five years.

Joynt said the only way to ensure a ready supply of well-qualified junior graduates is through improved coaching.

"We no longer will be satisfied with taking just volunteer coaching from men who can find the time. Coaching programs have been set up in Ontario. We hope to put junior coaching at a level with college coaching in Canada."

He said that while junior teams on the Prairies have been a source of Canadian talent for CFL teams in that area, other centres of the country have overlooked the juniors programs, particularly in the East.

Joynt says the CNFL intends to upgrade the junior fottball program in the country by closer communication and co-operation among the various conferences.

"We previously were concerned mainly with regional problems, he admitted. "We now are worried more about the national product."

Newcombe Wins Australian Open

MELBOURNE (AP) — Veteran Australian John Newcombe, three-time Wimbledon champion, saying he was "well psyched up" for his grudge match against Jimmy Connors, beat the American star 7-5, 3-6, 6-4, 7-6 Wednesday and won the men's singles crown at the Australian Open tennis championships.

Newcombe, seeded second, won the fourth set tie-breaker 9-7 to end the three-hour battle, billd as a clash of champions culminating six months of verbal warfare as to who was the better player. A capacity crowd of 12,500 at Kooyong Stadium watched the struggle, played in 90-degree heat.

Earlier, defending champion Evonne Goolagong of Australia needed just 46 minutes to whip Martina Navratilova of Czechoslovakia 6-3 6-2 in the women's singles final.

Connors won the Australian, U.S. Open and Wimbledon titles last year and was generally rated the No. 1 player in the world. Newcombe, meanwhile, was widely recognized as the top player of 1973. He had beaten Connors in their only two meetings of 1974 and has bristled at the suggestion that Connors had surpassed him as No. 1.

Despite the defeat. Connors was not about to concede his top ranking.

"Just because I lose one match does not mean I am not the best," the young American said. "You can't win all of them all the time. Over the past three months I have won four or five tournaments, so one loss does not make me a bum."

Newcombe, the 1973 champion here, said he had no plans to shoot for the Grand Slam of tennis, since his commitment to World Team Tennis will prevnt him from competing in the French Open. But he does aim to win Forest Hills, and particularly Wimbledon.

Quebec Two Shy of Toros

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Toros, who have often complained of the pressure they face in playing at home where they are still trying to lure more fans into Maple Leaf Gardens, are facing even more pressure this weekend.

The Toros, idle during the New Year's holiday break, saw their World Hockey Association Canadian Division lead dwindle to one point when second-place Quebec Nordiques beat Indianapolis Racers 6-3 Wednesday.

And moving up into third place, just four points behind Quebec, was Edmonton Oilers who beat San Diego Mariners 3-2.

The pressure situation comes this weekend when the Toros try to protect the slim lead with three games in as many days, starting with a home stand against New England Whalers, the East Division leaders, on Friday night, and then going to Quebec on Saturday and Cleveland on Sunday.

On New Year's Eve, Chicago Cougars edged Cleveland 4-3 and Phoenix tied Michigan 1-1.

At Quebec, Buddy Cloutier and Rejean Houle scored two goals each to lead the Nordiques. Marc Tardif, with his 20th of the season, and Robert Guindon were the other scorers.

Bob Whitlock scored twice and Bob Fitchner added one goal for the Racers who twice rallied to tie the Nordiques but never pulled ahead.

At Edmonton, Rusty Patenaude's goal at 5:26 of overtime gave Edmonton the win and vaulted the Oilers into third place, one point ahead of the idle Winnipeg Jets.

Murray Kennett, playing in his first game for Edmonton after he was purchased from Indianapolis Racers, helped set up the winning goal.

The Oilers got only one penalty in the game, a minor to Jim McCrimmon midway in the third period, and San Diego took the power play opportunity to tie the game on a goal by Gene Peacosh, forcing the overtime.

Ted Hampson scored two goals and assisted on another to lead Minnesota Cleveland. Mike Walton added a goal and two assists and goalie John Garrett kicked out 36 Crusader shots.

It was the Saints' seventh win in their last eight starts.

Cleveland goalie Bob Whidden was a prominent figure throughout the game. He protested Rick Smith's goal which closed out the scoring in the third period, claiming the Minnesota defenceman had deflected the puck with a stick above shoulder height.

Whidden later got into a fight with Saints forward Kevin O'Shea, skated out of his goal crease and fell down several times and one time carried the puck all the way to the centre red line.

The game was marred by a stick fight between Smith and Cleveland's Steve Cardwell. Both were given slashing majors, and Cardwell well was later assessed a game misconduct for attempting to go through the penalty box area to get at Smith. Minnesota defenceman Ron Busniuk also earned a misconduct when he chased Cardwell.

The Saints announced Wednesday they have signed defenceman Bill Butters to a contract starting next season.

Butters, property of the Na- Maple Leafs, had been playing for the Leafs' Central League farm club at Oklahoma City and left that club last week after a dispute over a $375 fine.

Panasiuk Golfer Of Year

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Long-hitting Bob Panasiuk has been voted Canadian golfer of the year for the second consecutive year.

The 33-year-old Windsor, Ont., native, was a landslide winner in voting by the Golf Reporters' Association of Canada, amassing 145 points to 41 for Sandra Post.

Five points were given for a first-place vote, three for a second and one for third.

Panasiuk, who decided against trying for his Professional Golfers' Association card which would allow him to compete on the United States tour because he figured to make more money at home, was named on everyone's ballot.

He placed first on all but five of the ballots.

Miss Post, a native of Oakville, Ont., who now makes her home in Florida, had her best year ever on the Ladies Professional Golf Association (LGPA) circuit since joining the tour in 1968 when she won rookie honors.

She won over $40,000 in LPGA events then capped the year by winning $13,000 first-place money in the Far East women's championship at Melbourne, Australia, last month.

Third place in the voting went to Doug Roxborough of Vancouver, the Canadian amateur champion, who collected 27 points, three more than pro Moe Norman of Gilford, Ont.

Panasiuk won three provincial championships-the Quebec, Saskatchewan and Alberta opens—and pocketed nearly $40,000 in both Canada and the United States. One title that eluded him, the Canadian PGA, was won by Norman. Panasiuk had won it in 1972 and 1973.

Others receiving votes in the cross-country poll of golf writers:

Dan Hollderson, Winnipeg, 8; LPGA veteran Jocelyn Bourassa, Shawinigan, Que., 5; Ben Kern, London, Ont., 5; Leon DeCaire, Buttonville, Ont., ; Gary Cowan, Kitchener, Ont., ; Dick Borthwick, Hamilton, 3; Bill Tape, Kitchener, 2; Greg Pidlaski, Stouffville, Ont., 2; Nick Weslock, Burlington, Ont., 1; Marlene Stewart Streit, Stouffville, 1; Adrian Bigras, Montreal, 1.

McCarron Finishes With 547

LAUREL, Md. (AP) — Apprentice jockey Chris McCarron wound up 1974 with a one-year record 547 victories, his last two coming at Laurel Tuesday.

The 19-year-old McCarron, who didnt ride his first winner until Feb. 9, easily outdistanced the pevious record of 515, set only a year ago by Canadian champion Sandy Hawley of Mississauga, Ont.

McCarron was the leading rider at every track where he competed for the meeting, including Pimlico, Delaware Park and Bowie.

At Laurel, he set a track record with 125 winners in 59 days, breaking the mark of 90 set by Vince Bracciale in 1972.

SAINTS SIGN BUTTERS

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota Fighting Saints of the World Hockey Association announced the signing Wednesday night of defenceman Bill Butters. Butters, 23, signed a multi-year contract starting Oct. 1, 1975, a club spokesman said.

Parseghian Ends Career With Orange Bowl Win

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Notre Dame upset Alabama 13-11 in the Orange Bowl on Wednesday night, spoiling Crimson Tide coach Bear Bryant's shot at college football's national championship for the second straight year and virtually assuring that Oklahoma will be No. 1 when the ballots are counted in The Associated Press' final rankings.

Oklahoma, the nation's top-ranked team at the end of the regular season, could not go to a bowl game. The Sooners were ineligible for post-season competition because of a National Collegiate Athletic Association probation for recruiting violations.

But the Sooners aren't ineligible for the No. 1 ranking and the mythical national title that goes with the final poll. Oklahoma, with an 11-0 record, became the only undefeated and untied team when No. 2 Alabama bowed to Notre Dame in a rematch of the game a year ago which gave the Fighting Irish the national title after they beat the Tide in the Sugar Bowl.

No. 3 ranked Ohio State also lost Wednesday, bowing 18-17 to fifth-ranked Southern California in the Rose Bowl. No. 4 Michigan didn't play in a bowl.

The AP's final poll will be announced on Friday. A nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters does the balloting.

Earlier Wednesday, Penn State crushed Baylor 41-20 in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas. And on New Year's Eve, in the first of the four oldest post-season games, Nebraska beat Florida 13-10 in the Sugar Bowl.

Notre Dame, No. 9 in the last poll, had the nation's best-rated defence despite two losses—one a 55-23 shellacking by Southern California late in the season. And it was that defence that throttled Alabama recovering a fumbled punt that led to the first Notre Dame touchdown. It came on a four-yard run by Wayne Bullock.

And in the second quarter, the Irish got another one on a nine-yard run by Mark McLane. They missed the extra point, but it turned out they didn't need it.

Alabama got a field goal late in the second quarter but the Crimson Tide touchdown, on a 48-yard pass by Richard Todd, didn't come until there were a little more than three minutes left in the game.

For Notre Dame coach Ara Parseghian, it was a farewell present from his players. He had announced his resignation last month and said he would take a six-month sabbatical from the sport. Rumors have circulated that he will become coach of the new Tampa franchise in the National Football League.

And for Bryant, who walked off the field looking as though he had lived every one of his 61 years over and over again during the 1974 Orange Bowl, it was yet another frustration. The third winningest coach of all time with 242 victories, Bryant's teams have not won in a bowl game since 1967 although they've made eight post-season appearances since then.

Pat Haden, the brainy Southern California quarterback who won a Rhodes scholarship to study at Oxford, made two key passes—one for a touchdown and the other for a two-point dog Trojans to victory over Ohio State in the Rose Bowl.

Haden passed 38 yards for a touchdown to John McKay Jr., son of the Trojan coach, with 2:03 left in the game. He followed with a two-point conversion pass to Shelton Diggs.

"We felt we weren't going for a tie," said USC coach John McKay of the go-for-broke try for the two extra points. "With Ohio State's offence, we were afraid we wouldn't get the ball again."

In the final seconds of the Rose Bowl, Ohio State's Tom Skladany tried a desperation 62-yard field goal. It fell short in the end zone as the gun sounded.

Until the Haden heroics in the final two minutes, the Buckeyes appeared to be 17-10 victors, with quarterback Cornelius Green scoring from the three for Ohio State's final touchdown.

Penn State, ranked seventh, was ahead only 10-7 in the Cotton Bowl when it had a 64-yard touchdown pass in the second half nullified by a penalty. Then No. 12 Baylor went in front 14-10 on a 37-yard touchdown pass by Bear quarterback Rick Thompson.

That was too much for the Nittany Lions, who took umbrage and exploded for 24 points in the fourth quarter.

"We got fire in our eyes after that big penalty," said Penn State's Jimmy Cefalo, a freshman flanker.

Bart Starr -- Cleans House

7 Coaches Gone

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Bart Starr, the new coach and general manager of Green Bay Packers, has virtually cleaned house, asking for and receiving resignations from seven of nine assistant coaches who had served under Dan Devine on the National Football League team.

Hank Kuhlmann, Red Cochran, Rollie Dotsch, Burt Gustafson, John Polonchek, Perry Moss—former head coach with Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League—and Johnny Roland, and the teams pro scouting director, Bill Tobin, all tendered their resignations Tuesday.

Spirit Takes Germantown

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Canadian-owned Selari Spirit, with jockey Gunnar Linberg aboard, romped to a five-length victory Wednesday in the $34,050 Germantown Handicap at Keystone Race Track.

Before a crowd of 6,980, Lindberg, from Fort Erie, Ont., guided Selari Spirit to the win in 1:43 4-5 over the 1 1-16-mile distance on a muddy track. Mo Bay finished second, a neck before the tiring pacesetter, Big City Blues.

It was the second added-money triumph at Keystone for Selari Spirit, owned by Ernie Samuel's Sam-Son Farms of Hornby Ont. He also won for the Hessian Handicap on Nov. 30.

Selari Spirit rewarded his backers with payoffs of $7.20, $3.80, and $2.80. Mo Bay returned $5 and $3.40 while Big City Blues paid $3 to show.

Elsehwere in New Year's Day racing, Snurb, a five-year-old son of Stratmat, won $37,000 in the $63,000 William McKnight Handicap at the Calder winter meeting, coming between horses in the stretch and winning by three quarters of a length.

Jockey Gene St. Leon, who had just come off a 10-day suspension, took Snurb over the 1⅛ miles on the grass in 1:46 to pay $16.80, $5.60 and $3.60. Buffalo Lark was second, Lord Rebeau third, and El Tordillo was fourth.

Zografos and Lord Rebeau were 1-2 down the backstretch, with Buffalo Lark third and Snurb sixth. On the far turn, Lord Rebeau took command as Snurb moved up along the inside.

At Aqueduct the favored Old Bombast Farms' Funalon won easily in the $56,900 Jamaica Handicap. The three-year-old daughter of Francis S.Alondra II covered the mile in 1:35 4-5 to earn $34,140.

Funalon, $3.80, won by 3½ lengths over Sigmond Sommer's Busy Saxon.

Lucky Spell, $38.20, won the $35,200 feature at Santa Anita, beating Modus Vivendi, who later was disqualified by stewards for drifting in near the stretch and interfering with Tizna and Impressive style, second and third respectively.

Lucky Spell ran the six furlongs in 1:093-4, earning $21,700.

Robert Hogtom's Gallant Bob, $1.20 romped to a whopping nine-length victory over Sgt. Hunt in the $26,625-added six-furlong Fairmount Park Stakes at Garden Statens at Garden State Park in a time of 1:11. The victory avenged an earlier loss to Sgt. Hunt, ridden by Toronto's Hugo Dittfach and owned by Larry and Jim Regan of Toronto.

Pinehurst Wins Feature

WINDSOR, Ont.(CP) — Pinehurst won the featured $3,000 sixth race at Windsor Raceway Tuesday, beating Gallant Fin by more than three lengths.

Pinehurst paid $11, $6 and $3.70 and covered the mile in 2:10 2-5.

The daily double of Melissas Boy and Edgewood Brietta paid $19.90.

The triactors of Midnight Frisco, High Pockets and D Rs Rhythm, in the fourth race, and Cat Balou, Victoria Key, and Saucy Swinger, in the seventh race, paid $816 and $96.80, respectively.

The ninth-race exactor of Forsees Dream and Indo Hanover paid $114.50.

A crowd of 4,907 wagered $372,751.

All Glitter—No Gold

This is the time of year when adages really come into their own. You open your Christmas presents and you find that 'good things do come in small packages. Or your relatives come visiting over the holiday season and it's surprising to see that loneliness does make the heart grow fonder.

Which brings about the reason for this column. 'You can't tell a book by its cover'. The relation between that particular old saying and the holiday season is purely coincidental, but, the true meaning of the adage was revealed on the weekend, at least to me.

At the Quinte Cup Snowmobile Races on Sunday there were about 4,500 people. Out of that total almost all fell into the category of racer, crew member or spectator. The rest were comprised of track officials, runners, organizers and statisticians.

What the spectators saw Sunday they were very happy with. The ones I heard went away from the races feeling they got their money's worth. What the racers and crew members saw they were very happy with. One driver, Wayne Thomas, who finished third in the races overall standings, summed up the majority of the drivers feelings this way.

"I normally run in A Sanctioned event. The only reason I came to Belleville was to ready myself and my machine for the Kawartha Cup this weekend. I figure I'll come back next year though. This is one of the best organized races I've been to and it's one of the best tracks I've raced on," he said

Well, Thomas was right on target when he said the Belleville track was good. It is, in fact, one of the best in the Ontario Snowmobile Racing Federation's A or B class circuits.

When he said that it was well organized he wasn't wrong either. At least, he wasn't wrong from what he saw. The track officials, runners, etc., are almost all old hands at running snowmobile races. They kept Sunday's Quinte Cup moving along quickly with little if any delay between each heat. They kept the racers moving on and off the track quickly between races. Those two things kept the fans and the drivers happy. So what Wayne Thomas and the other drivers saw was very organized.

What neither the fans nor the drivers really got a look at was organization behind the scenes And it is just as well that few people did get a look at it because the behind the scenes picture looked like it was painted by a two-year-old

Statisticians had a slow and sporadic feed of information from the track. The races got under way at 12.30 p.m. and by 4 p.m. they still only had the results of the first race. By that time about eight others had been completed. The people keeping statistics couldn't be blamed.

Racers who didn't make their heats because of engine trouble or something else kept running to the statisticians for refunds. The statisticians by the way had to collect all entry fees and register all racers in their classes as well. The funny thing about that is that there were only three statisticians. They also had to work out prize money percentages.

By the time the statisticians collected the entry fees and filled out the registration forms they didn't have time to make up the race forms properly. A racer's name and his race number were on the form for the starters, but his address was not on the sheet. And the kind of machine he was running was left for the spectator to guess.

Getting back to refunds. There was one man authorized to hand them out and he was so involved with track matters he appeared to be giving them away like candy on Halloween. A driver could get one for any old excuse. It's just a good thing more drivers weren't aware of the easy-refund-system or the Quinte Cup would have been in the hole again this year.

This isn't the first time this has happened at the Cup Races. Last year was just about the same. Maybe even a little worse.

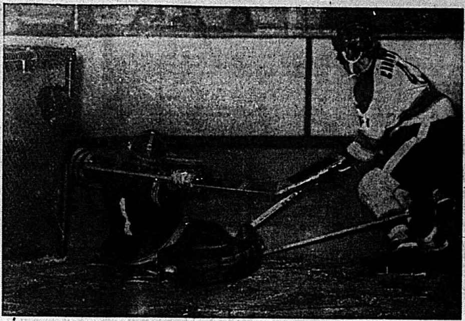
When it came time to select the winner of the Quinte Cup no one knew who should get it. As it turned out there were three names in the hat.

It's too bad that things weren't organized better. If they were perhaps Belleville could have one of the bigger snowmobile races in the province.

The Benson and Hedges Tobacco Company feels it has definite potential. They even tried to convince officials to apply for A Sanctioning by the Ontario Snowmobile Racing Federation. That was before they knew to what kind of organizers the event succumbed.

But don't worry, there's still hope. Look at the Kawartha Cup. They became the largest in the country with organization that was on the same level as Belleville's. A couple of things they do have over Belleville, though, are top notch publicity and promotion men. They're the ones that have really made the Kawartha the biggest.

Oh, yes. One more thing the Quinte Cup might need is an investor who isn't afraid to spend a little money to make a whole lot.



Swede Kept Busy

Sweden's Berhl Ogren sprawls to turn back threat from Trenton Birt's Dave Lewis during Wednesday's International exhibition juvenile match. Ogren was tested often as Trenton team skated to 9-6 win. Swedes opened up early 3-0 lead but couldn't hold off the home team.

Birt's Team Trips Swedes 9-6

TRENTON — Swedens tourirng Bjorkloven juvenile hockey club exploded twice for three consecutive goals here Wednesday night but Roger Drake's Trenton irts Handy Stand skaers went on a spree of their own to chalk up a 9-6 win.

The exhibition match at the Community Gardens drew a large crowd in spite of the holiday activities which have been keeping many hockey fans busy for the past few days.

Swedens Tore Orvist may have had visions of sending the home side packing all by himself.

Orvist rattled in three goals in the first period before Birts could find the mark.

But with just 28 seconds remaining in the opening frame, Dave Lewis put the Trenton team on the board and it was the signal for more to come from Birt's.

The Swedes owned the first period but Birt's more than made up for their early reluctance to assert their prior claim to Gardens ice by counting the only four goals of the second 20 minutes and move in front 5-3.

And the Trenton team made it 6-3 early in the third before the Swedes came to life again.

Orvist and Hans Larsson connected for goals just 36 seconds apart and the Bjorkloven club was right back in the game. An unassisted goal by Crister Karebrant put the teams on even terms.

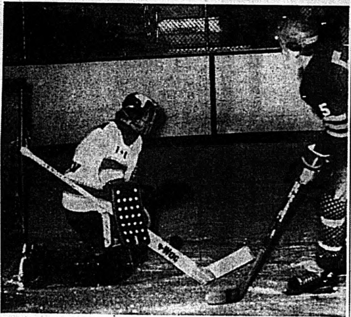
It was Birt's turn to rebound, then.

In the last four minutes of play, the Trenton team rapped in three goals to wrap it up.

Rick Matheson and Brian Mackintosh each shot a pair of Trenton goals. The second Mackintosh goal was the winner.

Other Trenton marksmen were Lewis, Bob Cameron, Scott Poole, Jeff Peckitt and Bruce Leedham.

With the emphasis on scoring plays, the teams declined to go on a penalty kick. Sixteen minors were evenly divided.



Not This Time

Trenton Birt's Handy Stand goalie Gord Beall eyes puck while Sweden's Par Sandgren has ideas of his own, Beall made the save, one of many, as teams put on end to end show, Wednesday, at Trenton's Community Gardens. Birt's team scored 9-6 win.

8-team Tourney

BRIGHTON (Special) — Eight teams will compete in the annual Royal Canadian Legion Branch 100 Bantam Hockey Tournament here, Saturday.

The hosts Brighton club hooks up with Campbellford to get the action started at 8 a.m.

Other teams entered are Colborne Stirling, Fort Henry Heights, Napanee, Cedar Hill and Picton.

Games continue through the day with the A final set for A 6.30 p.m.

House League Teams Tops in Exhibitions

Belleville Minor Hockey Association house league teams were busy with exhibition games recently.

In novice play, Belleville Signs Unlimited shaded Frankford 7-6. Leading the winners with a goal and two assists each were Paul Hounslow and Gord Spureon.

Duby Brothers of the Peewee division topped a Trenton team 6-3. Jeff Birch and Brian Lasher each scored twice with singles for Billy Hull and Dave Barlow. John Reeve and Bill Reis each drew a pair of assists.

In house league action, Signs Unlimited turned the tables on Reid's Plumbing 5-3 with two goals and an assist from Paul Hounslow and singles by Dale Wood and Billy Jacklin. Duby Brothers Painters earned a 3-3 tie with T and C Construction. Dave Barlow's two goals sparked the Painters.

Other games saw Local 1000 top Credit Union 4-1; Stephen Licenc trip Manpower 4-3; Dixie Lee edged Whitley Rentals 3-2, and Beaver Lumber got by Uniroyals 5-1.

Tim Murphy was tops for Local 1000 with two goals and two assists. All three Manpower goals in the loss to Stephen Licence went to Jim Wright. Two counters by Allan Wilson led Dixie Lee.

B Team Wins Two

Belleville's recently formed Juvenile "B" team picked up a pair of wins in exhibition contests over the holiday.

Playing at home, the Belleville squad defeated Kingston Township 5-2 and in Frankford, recorded a 5-1 win.

Leading the charge in the win over the Township team were Paul Murray and Gord Male with two goals each. Dan Murray had the other Belleville tally. Replying for Kingston were Dave Page and Keving Pocha.

Murray clicked for another brace of goals in the defeat of Frankford. Also potting a pair was Jim Aitken. Glen Woodley rounded out the scoring for the winners. Phil Probst accounted for Frankford's only goal.

Friday, the Belleville team is in Kingston for a return match with the Township squad.

Boston Unimpressive to Portland Coach

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Boston Celtics managed to beat slumping Portland Trail Blazers Wednesday night but they failed to impress Portland coach Lenny Wilkens.

"Boston has been playing great, but I didn't think they played that great tonight," said Wilkens after his Blazers dropped a 108-94 National Basketball Association decision.

The Celtics stormed to a 14-point lead early in the third quarter before Portland retaliated with a 16-6 burst to close to within four points at 68-64. That was as close as the Blazers got, however, as Boston upped its lead to nine points at the close of the period and won going away.

Elsewhere in the NBA, Atlanta beat Kansas City-Omaha 102-97 and Seattle surprised Washington 123-118 in overtime.

In the only American Basketball Association game played, San Diego downed Indiana 118-100. In the only pro game Tuesday, San Antonio beat Indiana 140-105 in an ABA match.

John Havlicek was the big man for Boston with 31 points while Dave Cowens and Don Chaney had 17 apiece. Sidney Wicks scored 23 points and Geoff Petrie 20 for Portland.

The Celtics have won three straight and now are tied with Buffalo for first place in the Atlantic Division. The Blazers now have dropped four straight.

Spencer Haywood scored 32 points as Seattle ended Washingtons four-game win streak. Wes Unseld had 20 points for the Bullets.

Marlboros Increase Lead As Generals Upset Petes

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bruce Boudreau scored four goals and assisted on two others Marlboros to an 11-1 victory over Kitchener Rangers in Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A action.

In other games Wednesday, Ottawa '67s defeated Hamilton Fincups 5-2, St. Catharines Black Hawks beat Sudbury Wolves 6-3 and Oshawa Generals dumped Peterborough Petes 5-1. In the only game today, London Knights travel to Peterborough.

At Toronto, Mark Napier scored two Marlboros goals. John Anderson, Craig Crawford Bill Wells, Mike McEwen and John Smrke got the others.

Barry Duench scored Kitchener's only goal after 27 seconds of the first period.

Toronto outshot Kitchener 54-29 and led 5-1 after the first period and 7-1 after 40 minutes.

'67s 5 Fincups 2

Ottawa goaltender Jim Fraser, who kicked out 61 shots on goal, was the key to the visitors' victory over Hamilton which moved the team into a third-place tie with the Fincups.

Peter Lee scored twice for Ottawa. Tim Young, Jim Roberts and Tom McDonnell scored one goal each.

David Norris and Mike Keating scored for the Fincups in the third period.

Black Hawks 6 Wolves 3

Bill Hamilton scored three goals to lead St. Catharines to its third consecutive win. Greg Craig, with two goals, and Dave Salvian were the other marksmen.

Sudbury's scorers were Bob Russell, with two goals, and Dave Farrish.

Sudbury outshot the Black Hawks 40-29 at St. Catharines.

Generals 5 Petes 1

Brian Dillon, with two goals, Greg Malone, Larry Wagner and Paul Heaver scored for Oshawa.

Gary McMonagle scored a powerplay goal for Peterborough in the third period.

Oshawa, which outshot Peterborough 45-29 before a home crowd, led 1-0 at the end of the first period and 2-0 after 40 minutes.

Glasgow's Youth Gangs Now Seen in Retreat

GLASGOW, Scotland (AP) — Glasgow's youth gangs cling to a pattern of relentless violence but they appear on the retreat for the first time in half a century.

The credit, by most accounts, belongs to a police force with a blend of firmness and patience laced with uncommon imagination.

"It's no good telling kids not to commit a crime because it's against the law," said Chief Inspector Archie MacKenzie. "You have to probe a lot deeper than that.

"The old idea of crime prevention was to advise people to lock their doors and windows. But that didn't stop the wish to commit crimes. Our method is to get policemen individually involved with the whole community, particularly in the rougher areas.

"We think it may take four or five years to show real results, but the prospects are encouraging."

The latest official figures, covering 1973, show a drop of more than 10 per cent in overall crime from the previous year. The police say the total number of reported crimes was 43,109 in this port city of more than a million inhabitants on the busy Clyde River. Crimes of personal violence numbered 2,312, a decrease of 192 on the 1972 figure.

Glasgow long has offered some of the best and much of the worst housing in the United Kingdom and gang warfare used to be a way of life for the boys of the Gorbals, Maryhill, Townhead, Govan and other slum districts, now mostly pulled down.

But in some of the vast new housing projects on the city's perimeters such as Easterhouse and Castlemilk the gangs remain, although seemingly less ferocious than their forerunners of the 1920s and 1930s.

Sgt. Andrew Love, who has spent nearly two years detached from the police force to work among the Easterhouse youngsters, said: "We still have a considerable problem with such groups as the Drummie and Aggro gangs. The lads enjoy their daily or weekly skirmish. Going to court afterward is just a day out for them".

The Glasgow police force's community involvement branch was set up at the end of 1971 and soon became a thriving operation with a special staff of more than 50.

It organizes the youngsters into a wide range of sports and competitions, stressing such slogans as "Don't be a fool, the gang don't rule" and "Think before you go and steal, how're your parents going to feel?"

The biggest problem is what to do about the hard core of delinquents who lounge on street corners hoping for a crack at rivals who may have strayed out of their own strictly defined reserve. The gangs nearly always draw their names and members from specific streets or small localities.

Their weapons are razors, hammers, knives and steel combs sharpened to a deadly point. Some boys ring their fingers with beer-can pulltops, which can inflict severe injury.

The game is to "chib" the other boy, meaning to stab or slash. "Ripping" is different, because the blade of the razor is turned in the wound.

Price Goes Down

EDMONTON (CP) — Yesterday's newspapers are worth even less than they used to be. Local salvage companies report that the international demand for used paper has dropped and firms that were paying as much as $23 a ton for used newsprint early in 1974 now are dishing out $12. One of the major reasons for the change is that the Japanese, instead of buying used newsprint, suddenly have begun to sell it.

STAY UP, DRINK MORE

MELBOURNE, Australia (CP) — A survey in Melbourne shows that heavy cigarette smokers tend to stay up later at night and drink more alcohol, tea and coffee. The Medical Journal of Australia gives details of the survey which was conducted on 200 men and women in Melbourne's Alfred Hospital.

CAN SMOKING AFFECT SEX?

Is smoking dangerous to your sexual health? Science has long known that heavy smoking can cause miscarriage and stillbirth — smoking mothers have a significantly greater number of unsuccessful pregnancies. Now it appears that heavy cigarette smoking may also impair sexual performance, for men as well as women. January Reader's Digest tells why many sex counselors and drug researchers are convinced that a link does exist between sexual response and smoking. Be sure to read IS YOUR SEX LIFE GOING UP IN SMOKE? One of 30 articles and features in the January Reader's Digest. At your newsstand today!

IN MEMORIAM

WOODCOX — In loving memory of a dearest daughter Sharon, who passed away January 2nd, 1967.
Just a thought of sweet remembrance,
Just a memory sad and true.
Just the love and sweet devotion,
Of one who thinks of you.
—Sadly missed by Mom and Dad.

KOLLAR — In loving memory of a devoted husband, Mike Kollar who passed away Jan. 2, 1972, aged 54 years.
"...h has separated us but beautiful memories and kindness will be cherished forever."
—Sadly missed by his wife Millie, son Michael Jr. and daughter Carroll Anne and husband Martin and granddaughters Rebecca Anne and Faith.

DAFOE — In loving memory of a dear father Harry Dafoe who passed away January 2, 1949.
Nothing can ever take away.
The love a heart holds dear,
Fond memories linger every day,
Remembrance keeps him near.
—Always remembered by daughter Myrtle and family.

MUNNINGS — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Edith, who passed away on January 1, 1968.
—Sadly missed but beautiful memories remain with us.

CARD OF THANKS

Sincere thanks to all our friends and neighbors for their kindness and sympathy at a time when it was needed and appreciated. We will never forget. Special thanks to the Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 99.
Mrs. Durand and Family.

The family of the late Mrs. Annie Bateman of Springbrook, Ontario wish to convey their gratitude to relatives, neighbors and friends for the many floral tributes donations to charitable organizations and messages of sympathy. A special thank you is extended to Rev. Snelgrove and the Howden Funeral Home.
The Bateman Family.

I wish to thank Dr. McIntosh and assisting Dr's. and the nurses in the intensive care unit of the Belleville General Hospital who were responsible for saving my life when I had my heart attack on Dec. 2, 1974. Many thanks.

Saturation Technique Used to Stop Smoking

VANCOUVER (CP) — The University of British Columbia saturation smoking clinic is saturated with smokers.

Prof. Allan Best, a psychologist at UBC, announced recently that a government-supported quit-smoking clinic, which had been run on a pilot basis since September, would open its doors in mid-January.

Lois Groves, co-ordinator of the clinic, said more than 200 applicants called within a week.

"My arms are sore and my ears are sore," Ms. Groves said, adding that the clinic, set up to handle about 300 patients a year, might try to handle them in small groups rather than individually in order to accommodate the demand.

Mr. Best said smokers will be made to smoke so much they won't be able to face the thought of another cigarette.

The aversion technique is virtually 100-per-cent effective in getting people to give up cigarettes he said. The hard part is staying off

"The therapy just takes care of the craving. For most people, smoking for the nicotine is only part of it."

For many, smoking relieves tension or boredom, is a reward for working hard or a social lubricant.

Mr. Best said most people find that when they quit smoking it leaves a void in their world. The clinic would try to find alternatives to fill that void.

He said people smoking to relieve tension can be taught relaxation exercises while those who get bored could substitute a walk or read a novel. Those who can't refuse a cigarette offered them should prepare a polite or witty turndown.

Mr. Best has done previous smoking studies at UBC and at the University of Waterloo in Ontario.

He said that even with psychological help, about 40 per cent of smokers relapse after six months.

Mr. Best explained two of the saturation techniques.

In one, smokers increase cigarette consumption to about five times their normal level for about three days before quitting. In another, they chain-smoke as many cigarettes as possible, with only a few getting to about 10, and repeat the process after intervals of a few minutes.

Mr. Best said the smokers get headaches, nausea and sore and puffy eyes.

Patients attending the clinic are advised to check with their doctor before starting the saturation technique. Patients who have been told to quit smoking for medical reasons must have a checkup before starting the program.

He said the technique had been used with hundreds of people without any complications but he doesn't recommend people trying the aversion method on their own.

Resource Issue Divides Ottawa and Prairies

By JOHN DODD
The Canadian Press

Worry and anger marked the year for the governments of the three Prairie provinces, despite their relatively healthy economies.

Ottawa promised the west what Finance Minister John Turner called its "place in the sun," but the three Prairie governments saw mainly dark clouds from the east.

Alberta did the most complaining, accusing the federal government of trying to undermine its powers, take away its oil revenues and violate its agreements.

Saskatchewan took the same line while Manitoba more often supported Ottawa.

Premier Ed Schreyer of Manitoba said he could not support the position that the provinces are entitled to exclusive rights to resource tax revenue.

But all three provinces were united in putting forward the view that the west gets short shrift because Ottawa answers only to Central Canada, where the votes are.

They protested such federal proposals as the lifting of the freeze on railway freight rates and abandonment of the traditional Crowsnest Pass rates for grain.

The federal election in July did nothing to dispel the feeling of western alienation.

Only 28 per cent of the votes cast in Western Canada went to the governing Liberal party. Alberta gave all 19 of its seats to the Progressive Conservatives.

Since the election Alberta and Saskatchewan's relations with Ottawa have worsened in disagreements over what the two oil-producing provinces saw as a federal attempt to take over control of provincial resources.

Don Getty, Alberta minister responsible for negotiations with Ottawa, said his province should forget about bargaining with the federal government and begin an "outright battle for our future."

Premier Allan Blakeney of Saskatchewan said the federal budget penalizes his province perhaps more than any other.

"It challenges the very spirit of the constitution . . . and the basic rights of ownership of natural resources," he said.

After the federal budget was released in mid-November, Canadian and multi-national oil companies stepped up their rate of withdrawal from the oil-producing provinces.

Companies such as Imperial Oil cut exploration expenditures sharply, saying the budget no longer made it worthwhile to devote so much capital to looking for oil in Canada

Premier Peter Lougheed's reaction was to promise an estimated $200 million for exploration incentives and reduced royalties to ease the effect of the budget on oil companies in Alberta.

Oil companies were pleased but remained non-committal about how much difference it would make to their plans.

The budget, combined with problems of inflation and uncertainty about the future price and supply of oil, shook up plans for development of Alberta's Athabasca oil sands.

Atlantic Richfield Canada Ltd. withdrew its 30-per-cent interest in the huge Syncrude project, already under construction at the sands, Shell Explorer Ltd. dropped its 50-per-cent interest in a proposed $2-billion oil sands plant and Petrofina Canada Ltd. announced a reassessment of its own $1.8-billion proposal.

While hostility often prevailed in the Prairie governments' relations with Ottawa, co-operation prevailed among the provinces themselves.

They joined with British Columbia to develop a joint industrial development strategy to curb "mindless competition" for the same investment dollars.

All three provinces had firm electoral mandates for their actions, although both Alberta and Saskatchewan were expected to call general elections by the spring or early summer.

Premier Lougheed's Conservatives, who hold 49 of the 65 legislature seats in Alberta, had already nominated more than twice as many election candidates as the opposition parties combined.

The Social Credit party, with 24 seats, was reported to be split over policies. Its new leader, Werner Schmidt, failed to gain a legislature seat.

The New Democratic Party, with one seat, and the Liberals, with none, were scrambling for position the Liberals under new leader Nick Taylor who opposed Premier Lougheed's industrialization plans.

The premier said the oil revenues must be used now to develop secondary industry to keep the Alberta economy buoyant when the oil is gone in perhaps 10 years.

CANDIDATES NAMED

While the federal-provincial dispute over resource revenue political rhetoric during 1974, political action was concentrated on preparing for the next election.

New Democrats and Liberals each had two-thirds of their candidates nominated before December and even the Conservative party, which has no legislature seats, had more than a third nominated.

The 1971 general election gave the NDP 45 seats and the Liberals 15.

At year end, the key election issues appeared to be how to develop rural Saskatchewan, how and whether to attract large industrial projects, how to curb population loss and whether the provincial government has become too much of a meddling bureaucracy.

Unlike the other Prairie provinces, Manitoba has until 1977 before a provincial election must be called. Nevertheless, provincial politics remained lively.

There was a real possibility that all three major political parties would have new leaders before the next election.

Liberal leader Izzy Asper announced he will retire from politics by the spring of 1975. Conservative leader Sidney Spivak was expected to face a strong challenge to his leadership.

It was not known how much longer Mr. Schreyer would be around to lead the NDP. He himself raised the possibility of stepping down, then committed himself only to finishing his term of office.

During the year, his government announced a new mining policy to increase public involvement in natural resources and prevent private companies from realizing huge windfall profits as metal prices rise.

Adverse spring weather and early frost produced a harvest well below the 10-year average for all Prairie grains. While grain producers enjoyed high prices, the situation worked to the disadvantage of livestock producers.

Cattle men were also hit with severe import restrictions imposed by the United States. And federal action was taken in an attempt to stabilize beef prices.

The year saw lengthy delays in grain movement for export because of strikes at the terminals. This generated renewed emphasis on plans to modernize the grain-handling and transportation system.

Urban Sprawl Hits Moscow Making Commuting Wearying

MOSCOW (AP) — Huddled under umbrellas, about 20 commuters waited in the rain for the bus which would start them on their one-hour trip to work.

Millions of other suburbanites throughout the huge Moscow metropolitan area were pouring into buses, trolley cars, trains and subways for their journey into the city.

Urban sprawl has hit Moscow. As apartment developments creep further into the countryside, Muscovites are increasingly forced into the hassle of daily commuting.

Moscow commuters must depend more on public transportation than do people of large Western cities because of the relative scarcity of private cars. The Soviet capital has more than seven million residents.

Another six million live just outside the city limits and many commute to the city for work or shopping.

The subway's 2,278 cars transport about 5½ million each day over 96 miles of track. There are no figures on the number of passengers carried on other forms of public transportation.

BETTER THAN NEW YORK

New York City with a population of about eight million, has 7,000 subway cars, 769 miles of track and 4,500 buses. The subways and buses there collect an average of 6.1 million fares each working day.

Commuting is not much fun, no matter where you live. The Soviet weekly newspaper Literaturaya Gazeta has complained:

"The modern buses and subways are great burdens to our nervous systems."

But in riding recently with Moscow suburbanites into the city centre, this correspondent drew the conclusion that it contrasts favorably with riding buses and subways in New York.

The trip started at the bus stop in Typoly Stan, a new suburb about 12 miles southwest of Moscow where raw vacant fields still outnumber buildings.

It was 8 a.m. and men and women were hurrying from a grey brick apartment block to the stop.

Despite the rain, several buses stood empty just a few feet away, waiting for the exact time to start their rush-hour run. They pass by every three minutes, a waiting white-collar worker said.

Finally, a bus lumbered over and the 20 people clambered aboard for a 15-minute ride to the recently built Belyayevo subway station.

The ride cost five kopeks, about 6.5 cents at the official exchange rate. But most people had cards costing six rubles ($7.80), entitling them a month's unlimited rides on subways, buses and trolleys.

The bus became crowded but there was relatively little pushing or shoving. Everyone moved slowly, as if still trying to wake up.

When the subway station was reached, the commuters filed off the bus and through the station door, paid another five kopeks and rode down the escalator. About half a minute after they reached the platform of the spotless, white-marbled station, a train roared in. During rush hours, trains are usually spaced about one minute apart.

The conductor clearly announced the next stop and the passegers settled themselves on the benches and pulled out their reading material.

They had no graffiti or advertisements to inspect. Moscow subway cars are without ornamentation.

As the train raced from station to station, a man said that in his many years of commuting, he had never been on a train which stopped between stations or experienced any other mechanical difficulty.

He added that the recent fire in a downtown subway station, which injured scores of people, was the first he had ever heard of.

After a quick and easy transfer to another line, the final destination was reached, one block from work. It took one relatively painless hour to get from suburban apartment to job.

Although crowded, the buses and subway were never as jammed as often happens in New York. During rush hour, however, one does see buses, especially in the centre of the city, with people squeezed in tight and long lines waiting to get aboard.

As one goes farther out, commuters must rely on sometimes-unreliable trains to bring them within range of a subway stop.

A man who lives near the suburb of Mytischi, 21 miles southeast of Moscow, says he often arrives at the station only to hear an announcement that the next scheduled train has been cancelled or will be late due to mechanical difficulties or track construction.

Pardee Takes Bears Reins

CHICAGO (AP) — Jack Pardee, a former linebacker in the National Football League with Los Angeles Rams and Washington Redskins and coach of Florida Blazers of the World Football League, returned to the NFL Tuesday when he was named head coach of Chicago Bears.

Pardee succeeds Abe Gibron who was fired after a 4-10 record this season, his third year as head coach.

The brief annoucement was made in Chicago by a Bears spokesman in a statement quoting Jim Finks, general manager of the NFL team.

Finks said Pardee is the "type of man who can lead Bears back to where they belong."

Pardee, 38, played from 1957 to 1970 with the Rams. He later played with Washington before taking the head coaching job this year with the Blazers. The Blazers finished with a 14-6 record and lost 22-21 to Birmingham Americans in the WFL's championship game.

No contract terms were announced.

Donahue Quits

HAVANA (CP) — Coach John Donohue says he will quit as coach of the Canadian women's basketball team early in the new year.

Donohue, who kicked one player off the team Monday, said Tuesday that he will be head of the men's and women's basketball programs but will not coach.

He also said that Liz Silcott, 23, of Montreal, was thrown off the team because she was unwilling to work hard. He had had a problem with her attitude since last summer.

Donohue's decision to stop coaching the women's team was not abrupt. He said it had been made earlier and he had hoped that Silcott, a guard on the team since 1973, would not have to be dropped before a new coach was picked. However, he said her attitude was causing problems for other team members.

The women's basketball squad is one of eight national teams here for 10 days of winter training and competition with the Cubans. They return home Jan. 6 and Donohue said Miss Silcott will not be sent home earlier.

Wins Barrie Feature

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — Problem Drinker won the featured $2,500 pace at Barrie Raceway Wednesday, beating Brown Parker and Rusty McKlyo.

Covering the mile in 2:07 1-5, Problem Drinker paid $4.50, $3.30 and $2.40 and combined with Brown Parker foran exactor worth $41.20.

The daily double of Gaelic Charm and Panache was worth $111.20 and the third-race exactor of Bobby Tar and Scarlet Harvest paid $144.20.

A crowd of 1,106 wagered $67,052.

Order Robot

LONDON (CP) — A robot detector, capable of defusing bombs by remote control, has been ordered by Scotland Yard. The device, already in use in Northern Ireland, has a television camera for inspecting the bomb and a shotgun for destroying the mechanism or carrying out a controlled explosion.

What Would Happen to Marilyn Monroe? Today She Would Be Called Stereotype

LOS ANGELES (AP) — What would happen if Marilyn Monroe came into the film world today?

The question was put to a Hollywood high lama who handed down his decision from a mountaintop:

"Today Marilyn Monroe would be denounced by Gloria Steinem forper petuating sexual sterotypes, picketed by the gays for unfair competition and relegated to the role of serving beer to Robert Redford and Paul Newman as they planned their next caper."

Times and fashions change and the sex symbol seems to have disappeared from the film scene.

Where does that leave a gorgeous female like Valerie Perrine?

"The only parts for women in films nowadays are whores and hookers," she sighs.

Valerie is stunning enough to be a Las Vegas nude dancer. And she was. She changed careers when an agent asked her two questions: "Have you ever acted? Do you think you can act?"

Her answers were no and yes. A meeting with director George Roh Hill brought her the role of Montana Wildhack, the sexpot movie star in the fantasy sequence of Slaughterhouse 5.

Next she played an auto race track groupie in The Last American Hero. She gives a remarkable performance in Lenny as the late comedian Lenny Bruce's stripper wife. It is the kind that seems to make an Academy nomination imperative.

Valerie Perrine is "26 or 27, somewhere around there," blonde and perfectly proportioned. She was born in Galveston, Tex., and spent her early years in Japan, where her father was stationed as an army officer. She attended convent school in Yokohama.

She studied psychology for a year at the University of Arizona, dropping out after an attack of mononucleosis. Then she decided to study a different kind of psychology, in Las Vegas.

"I had to break out of there, and Las Vegas seemed like a good change of pace," she said. "My dad disowned me. Mother was more understanding."

Valerie started in the dance line at $175 and rose to be a lead dancer at $800 a week.

She is surprised when interviewers inquire, "How did you feel about dancing in the nude?"

"Somebody asked me that the other day—such a dumb question. How did I feel? I didn't feel anything at all. It just becomes part of the job. My own mother saw the show and said, 'You know, Valerie, there's so much happening on the stage that I didn't notice you had no clothes on.'"

Clothed or not, Valerie proves herself an accomplished actress in Lenny, portraying the downward slide of girl addicted to men and dope. Her problem is what to do next. She observed that Barbra Streisand stands alone among today's film actresses in having vehicles groomed for her.

"The problem is that men write the scripts for movies and they write about men," she said. "There are no Camilles nor Scarlett O'Haras for actresses to play.

"So I guess I'll go on playing hookers. It doesn't bother me too much; I'm only in it for the money.

"Why money? So I can be free. You need money to do the things you want to do, like take off for Paris for two weeks."

Showbiz Briefs

DENVER (AP) — Singer Pearl Bailey was released from hospital Monday, two days after she was admitted with chest pains.

A hospital spokesman said Miss Bailey, 56, suffered from chest pains related to fatigue, previous heart problems and perhaps the altitude.

Miss Bailey, who was to have opened a four-night stand here Saturday, was admitted to the hospital before the first performance.

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Dustin Hoffman, critic Clive Barnes and others demonstrated for about two hours near the Soviet mission to the United Nations Monday to protest against the imprisonment of Vladimir Bukovsky.

Bukovsky is a Soviet dissident who, the demonstrators said, has been imprisoned in his homeland for most of his adult life on charges of circulating anti-Soviet propaganda. He is said to be gravely ill.

Red Army Wins Third Straight

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — The Central Red Army team from the Soviet Union scored four goals in the third period Wednesday night to defeat Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds 11-7.

It was the Russians third straight victory on its current Canadian tour.

Red Army had a 4-2 lead against its Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series opponent and a 7-6 margin at the end of 40 minutes before 3,403 fans.

The Greyhounds surprised both the crowd and the Russians with their ability to skate with the visitors. Coach Jim Farelli of the Greyhounds refused to add any players from other teams.

The Greyhounds, however, did come up with a new forward line that was the top unit on the ice for both teams. Bruce O'Grady centred a line of Paul Woods on left wing and Cary Farelli on right wing. They accounted for five of the seven goals, with Woods scoring three and Farelli and O'Grady one each.

Other Sault Ste. Marie scorers were Gary Gill and Ed Smith.

Sergei Glazov led Red Army with three goals. Boris Mikhailov and Vladimir Petrov scored two goals each with others going to Victor Zhluktov, Juri Blinov, Vladimir Popov and Alexandrov Kavanov.

The crowd was disappointed when left winger Valery Kharlamov didn't dress for the game and highly-rated goaltender Vladisav Tretiak only played the third period.

Murder Record

CHICAGO (P) — A record 968 homicides were committed in Chicago in 1974, and within two hours after the new year began, four more persons were dead of gunshot wounds

Homicide investigators speculated New Year's Eve that the city's death toll by violence could reach 1,100 for 1975.

The toll put in the shadow of the homicide record of Detroit, sometimes called the murder capital of the United States, where 801 persons died violently in 1974.

Profits Rise

ILFORD, England (CP) — Plessey Co. Ltd., one of Britain's largest telecommunications and electronics firms, reported pre-tax profits of &7.9 million for the quarter ending last September, compared with &6.4 million for the same quarter of 1973. It credited improved overseas business, particularly in Australia and South Africa, for the increase.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Friday, January 3

Aries (March 21-April 19) You ideas are far better than the techniques you'll use to try to implement them. Careful or you'll rub others the wrong way.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) If you want to keep subordinates happy today, don't stare over their shoulders issuing a barrage of orders.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Don't mix business with pleasure because the results will be disastrous if you try. Keep the line between the two clearly divided.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You're not likely to get all the cooperation you want from your family today, especially if you're cranky with them.

Leo (July 23-Aug 22) You're overly-critical of work or services performed for you by others. This attitude will not inspire them to perform their best efforts.

Virgo (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22) Your budget isn't elastic enough at the present to meet your obligations and cater to your indulgent whims at the same time.

Libra (Sept 23-Oct 3) You tend to serve your self-interests now without having adequate regard for the needs of others.

Scorpio (Oct 24-Nov 22) Don't use information told you in confidence to another's disadvantage. It would be like opening Pandora's box.

Sagittarius (Nov 23-Dec 21) You're going to let your trusting nature overrule your practical judgment where friends and finances are concerned today.

Capricorn (Dec 22-Jan 19) Your personal ambitions will be thwarted because you're too secretive about your motives. This makes others suspicious.

Aquarius (Jan 20-Feb 19) Pals will dissuade you from taking care of responsibilities you should attend to in order to participate in fun and games with them.

Pisces (Feb 20-March 20) Keep persons, who have no direct involvement in them, out of your personal affairs. Especially business and financial dealings.

When a bridge expert talks about dummy reversal he isn't referring to a dummy meeting with reverses. He is referring to a play that consists of declarer making an extra trick by ruffing so many of dummy's cards in his own hand that dummy winds up with the long trump.

Today's hand shows an extreme example of this play. Normally South will be able to ruff his last diamond in dummy and make his contract but West is unkind enough to open a trump and East shows out. South can still bring the contract home but he must start reversing the dummy immediately.

He wins the first trick in dummy, ruffs a heart, leads a spade to the king ruffs a second heart, leads a spade to the ace, ruffs a third heart, leads a diamond to the ace, ruffs the last heart, gets back to dummy by leading his next to last trump; ruffs dummy's last spade with his own last trump and has 10 tricks home, while there is dummy with one more trump for the 11th.

Beets Can Cause Blood Symptoms

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is your reaction to the thought that eating beets will cause red coloration in the stool remarkably similar to the presence of blood?

I had it and my wife said it was due to the beets (lots of them). My doctor says this is ridiculous.—Mr. N.F.D.

It's the beets.

But don't fault your doctor on this one. Early in my practice I too was fooled by this phenomenon.

I am not aware of what makes beets red, but if you eat enough of them the stool will appear red. The chromoplasts, color-carrying substances in all plants, contain matter that is not affected by the body's digestive system, something similar to plant cellulose, which also is not digested.

Small amounts will make the stool dark. Large amounts will color the toilet water.

But true bleeding will usually persist with subsequent bowel movements, and a little detective work usually solves such mysteries as it did for me in my early practice.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you please settle an argument?

What is your opinion of reaching when you have a heart attack? I have had two major attacks requiring hospitalization of three weeks each.

I want to do some painting and some tree-pruning this winter. My wife says I can't. My doctor is evasive.—G.B.

The general rule is simple. It is not what you do but how much. Thus, it is not a question of reaching, but of how much reaching you plan to do.

If your doctor is evasive, he may have reason. He may know, as indeed your wife may know, that you might tend to overdo yourself again and land back in the hospital a third time.

But there is nothing intrinsically dangerous in the process of reaching. If you could go about it sensibly, a little at a time, there seems no reason why you shouldn't do your painting (in a well-aired room) as well as your pruning.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: A friend of mine drinks wine on the rocks before going to bed at night, about a gallon in a week to 10 days. Will this be harmful to health?

He works eight hours a day, five days a week, has no ill effects or hangover.—T.W.

Let's see—a gallon. That's four quarts, or 128 ounces. Giving your friend the benefit of the doubt (10 days) that would be around 12 ounces a night.

I could not recommend it as steady fare, because that is a substantial amount of alcohol.

Dear Doctor: I am nearly 78 years of age, but I can still achieve a sexual orgasm Is this activity injurious to my health?—C.S.R.

No. Hats off.

Hundred Drug Arrests Just Touch Surface

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — More than 100 persons have been arrested on drug charges in Niagara Falls this year but the head of the intelligence branch of Niagara regional police says only the surface of a serious drug problem has been touched.

"It's frustrating for us because we no sooner put these people away than they are back on the streets," Inspector Frank Parkhouse said in an interview. "Under the Bail Reform Act we can't hold people any more. They are on the street again two or three hours after they are arrested."

He has eight officers involved full-time in drug investigation, twice as many as three years ago. They spend 50 per cent of their time in Niagara Falls and Inspector Parkhouse said he could use twice the number.

His drug staff work closely with the RCMP, which has about 10 officers working on drugs in the area, but a recent change in law allows Niagara regional police to process their own drug arrests and seizures instead of handing everything over to the RCMP.

Most drug arrests in Niagara Falls this year were made between June and September and many of them were on Clifton Hill, the centre of the tourist area.

"There are a lot of transients in the Clifton Hill area," Inspector Parkhouse said. "Kids these days are prone to put a bag on their backs and go off for the summer and if they are in the drug scene and they come to Niagara Falls, they filter into the Clifton Hill area for their supplies."

He said police used to come across a few heroin users but now it is in common use, with many switching from speed because heroin is more available.

"Also they found that with heroin you can exist whereas speed takes you down pretty fast," Inspector Parkhouse said. "It has been shown that heroin addicts can live a fairly normal life."

He said narcotics officers have found that almost invariably hard-drug users started on marijuana "but there are lots of people who use marijuana and probably never use anything else."

The price of a capsule of heroin in Niagara Falls has risen to $25 from $15 with recent heroin seizures.

Inspector Parkhouse said the stiffening of drug laws in New York state has added to the problem in Canada, especially in Niagara Falls.

"Within the past two years, the flow of drugs has reversed," he said. "Now it is from Canada to the United States and Americans with long criminal records are showing up in Niagara Falls to buy bundles of drugs to take back across the border.

"Also, the heroin sold here is of better quality than that available over the border. It can be cut several times (the use of additives reducing the amount of heroin in a capsule) thus increasing the profits."

Inspector Parkhouse said his officers are picking up 12 and 13-year-olds using marijuana in Niagara Falls.

"Society is forcing changes in the drug laws, making the penalties for use of soft drugs more lenient, and yet society is suffering," he said. "Many thefts from cars and break-ins are attributable to drug addicts.

"It's not unusual for a trafficker to accept stolen goods in payment for drugs so the drug problem and the increase in general crime go hand in hand and I don't see an end to it."

Trudeau's Solid Majority Early Christmas Present

By R. J. Anderson
The Canadian Press

Pierre Elliott Trudeau got what he wanted in 1974—a solid working majority in the House of Commons.

The victory of his Liberal government in the July 8 general election ended 18 months of touch-and-go minority rule. It was a period that pleased no one—not Robert Stanfield's Progressive Conservatives, needling futilely, nor the socialist New Democratic Party, which had to compromise on many an issue to avoid another election nor—as the election proved—the voters.

They returned 141 Liberals to Parliament, 95 PCs, 16 NDPers—and NDP Leader David Lewis was not among them—11 Social Crediters and one independent member.

It was thumbs down on Mr. Stanfield's campaign proposal that what was needed in a time of inflation was a policy of wage and price controls. Some in the PC party itself didn't go along with that and the election result gave him the message: It was time to go.

So on July 14, eight days after the election, Mr. Stanfield told a party caucus he will step down before the next election and no later than March, 1976.

What brought down the minority government May 8 in an historic 137-to-123 vote was Finance Minister John Turner's budget. It had a little of everything for everybody but not enough for the NDP which, for once, gave its support to the Progressive Conservatives.

Solidly back into power, Mr. Trudeau obviously was confident—the opposition called it his 1968 "arrogance"—as he set about putting the country's affairs in order, which meant trying to cope with inflation, a continuing energy crisis and rebellious provinces which felt Ottawa was not giving them a fair shake on many constitutional points in dispute.

Inflation, at a 12-per-cent-a-year rate of increase, was not the worst among Western countries but it was bad enough for Canadians as interest rates on loans and mortgages hit record levels along with the sale price of houses. The price of basic foods went so high that a quart of milk cost 45 cents—not top grade, at that—and a loaf of bread "discounted" at 40 cents.

The farmer was not reaping the benefit of high retail prices. Cattlemen, in particular, protested. While the price of beef in the stores went up, that for beef on the hoof went down in the livestock market.

As a protective measure, Canada set a quota system on cattle imports from the United States and Washington objected. On Nov. 16, the U.S. imposed restrictive import quotas on Canadian cattle, beef hogs and pork retroactive to Aug. 12, 1974.

The prime minister saw President Ford in Washington to explain the Canadian problem and at the same time sought to explain why it was necessary for Canada to begin a program of progressive reductions in its export of petroleum to the energy-short U.S.

By 1982, the national energy board had announced, Canada would have only enough reserves to look after its own needs.

In the meantime, on Nov. 18, Mr. Turner had put before Parliament a budget that was essentially the same as the one turned down in May. Among other things, it cut personal income taxes but its most controversial point was that no longer would the oil companies be able to deduct from federal income taxes royalties paid to the provinces for exploration rights.

Alberta and Saskatchewan, source of most of Canada's oil, cried foul and Premier Peter Lougheed of Alberta announced Dec. 12 his province would increase the price of domestic oil from the present $8.50 a barrel—$5 under the world price—as one means of compensation. He didn't say when or by how much.

The increase was welcomed by oil companies, some of which had been cutting down their exploration programs because of costs.

Worrisome also to Canadians was talk of a possible economic recession spreading from the United States where massive layoffs in the auto industry had wide economic repercussions. Canada's unemployment rate in November was 5.5 per cent with nearly 500,000 persons out of work.

Labor unrest was vented in strikes of varying intensity across the country throughout the year but increased wage packets won through strike action never, labor said, seemed to catch up with prices.

Dr. Morton Shulman, an NDP member of the Ontario legislature, let go a shocker early in December when he said the Seafarers' International Union had contributed to the election campaign funds of some federal cabinet [illegible], Labor Minister Munro among them. Mr. Munro admitted getting $500 but said he had returned it.

Quebec in November reached a settlement with its native Indian people. It agreed to pay Indians in the James Bay region, to be transformed by the multi-billion-dollar hydroelectric project there, $150 million and rights to large land areas in return for allowing the project to be completed.

The prime minister got a new official limousine, an $83,530 armor-plated, bullet-proof job. Its optional extras included not one but two telephones just in case, as some commentators noted when the purchase was announced Dec. 11, the PM was wanted on another line.

Brando Gives 40 Acres Of Land to Indians

AGOURA, Calif. (Reuter) — Film star Marlon Brando stood on an oaktopped hill looking over a spectacular stretch of hilly grass land Monday and handed over the title of 40 acres of his land there to a local Indian tribe.

Brando, 50, told reporters that the gift is part of his project to give up all lands he owns in the United States to the Indians in the hope it will start a move by others to restore Indian lands as part of the United States bicentennial celebrations in 1976.

The deed to the land was accepted by Chief Semu of the Redwind Association of West Coast Indians. The land is to go eventually to the Chumash Indians, a basketweaving tribe who originally wandered over California coastal lands, but now have been reduced to a small group of 91 purebreds living on a government reserve.

"It is our hope that an Indian tribal village will be built here," Chief Semu said. Brando's land abuts a new development of expensive tract homes on the western fringe of Los Angeles.

Brando, a worker for Indian causes over the last six years, said he believes he owned the land for about four years but does not know how much he paid for it.

The actor, who drove to the ceremony with California's Democratic Senator John Tunney, son of former world heavyweight champion, Gene Tunney, lost his way trying to get to his own land. He admitted he had not visited it very often.

Brando originally announced that he also plans to donate his home in the Hollywood Hills, an apartment block, and his part of the family estate in Illinois which he owns jointly with two sisters.

Chief Semu led a small group of drum-playing Indians in a ceremonial chant. He said the ceremony was impromptu: "I don't think there's a regular ceremony for this, because we've never had this situation where a white man gave back our land before.

Air Traffic Booms

FORT McMURRAY (CP) — Traffic at the airport in this oil sands town has tripled in the last five years from 50 landings or takeoffs a day to 150. Dick Dohnt, telecommunications station manager at the airport, says most of the traffic is related to the oil sands development. He estimates that as many as 40 per cent of the planes landing are company-owned executive jets.

Factory-Build Houses

LONDON (CP) — Factory-built houses which can be erected in a day have been developed by Britain's Timber Research and Development Association. Wooden room units, taken to the site by truck, can be built into bungalows, two-or three-storey houses or multi-storey flats at a cost well below that of traditional methods.

Study Population

LONDON (CP) — A centre for overseas population studies will be set up in Britain during the next three years. It will be funded by the ministry of overseas development which is providing some £180,000 ($414,000). The centre, to be organized by the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, will provide a focal point for training and research into vital statistics of human population.

Protest Succeeds

LONG EATON, England (CP) — Mr. and Mrs. Ken Watson left two of their five children in the office of the Erewash borough council in protest against conditions in their municipally-owned home. Council responded by giving them a new four-bedroom house.

Employers and Employees
New Employment Standards Act

Effective January 1, 1975 the new Employment Standards Act covers the existing standards: minimum wage, vacation pay, overtime pay, termination pay, collection of wages and provides for:

Public Holidays
Employees are entitled to seven paid statutory holidays; New Year's Day, Good Friday, Victoria Day, Dominion Day, Labour Day, Thanksgiving and Christmas Day. (Conditions and exceptions apply in certain situations.)

Overtime Pay
Overtime pay at time and one-half the regular rate for hours in excess of forty-four in a week.

Equal Benefits
The Equal Benefits provision will be brought into force at a later date.

Pregnancy Leave
Pregnancy leave is extended to seventeen weeks for employees with one year's service or more and covers all employers having one or more employees.

Transportation
The Act no longer requires an employer to provide transportation for female employees finishing or starting work between the hours of midnight and six o'clock in the forenoon or prohibits females under 18 working after midnight.

These are the principal amendments and changes to the Act.

For detailed information regarding exemptions and application of the standards contact your nearest Ministry of Labour office.

Mackenzie King Diaries Opened

OTTAWA (CP) — The diaries of William Lyon Mackenzie King, spanning 13 years of his political career from 1932 to 1944, were opened to the public for the first time Wednesday.

Kept in the public archives of Canada, they are a vast and meticulously detailed storehouse on the political and personal life of King who was prime minister for a record 21 years between 1921 and his death in 1950. His diaries from 1893 to the end of 1931 were open to the public previously.

A glimpse into some of the thousands of handwritten and typed pages gives no startling revelations about major political events of the 1930s and early 1940s.

But it does reveal a fascinating juxtaposition of high matters of state with details of King's mystical visions, encounters with spiritualism and the love he lavished on his pet terrier, Pat.

For example, in September of 1938, when war threatened in Europe and King was suffering from arthritic pains, pencilled diary notes about a seance have King asking his deceased mother: "Will I be able to sleep tonight?"

His mother replies from the spirit world that he will and adds: "Canada needs you. Long ago God had a plan for you. God will help and guide you."

When Britain declared war on Germany on Sept. 3, 1939, the diary records that the bachelor prime minister called a cabinet meeting for that morning, but first "had little Pat come for his walk with me to our little trysting place on the moor" near his summer home in the Gatineau Hills, north of Ottawa.

During the walk he meets neighbor and close friend Joan Patteson. He remarks in the diary that "Little Pat always seems to me a sort of symbol of my mother, as Joan in her tender way also makes me think very often of her. . . ."

The complete diaries, spanning 58 years from 1893 until his death in 1950, include about 25,000 pages of material in about 100 volumes, says Carman Carroll, head of the prime minister's section of the archives.

The 13 years of diaries opened Wednesday are assembled in loose-leaf binders and enclosed in large grey cardboard document cases.

Truck Rescued

LONDON (CP) — A radio-controlled recovery service for trucks has gone into service in Britain's industrial Midlands. Operated from four control service centres by the government-operated National Freight Corporation, the service is available to private and publicly-owned truckers who suffer highway breakdowns.

Church Group Plans To Aid Migrants Here

TORONTO (CP) — A group of Toronto clergymen who have been active on behalf of California migrant workers plans to become more involved with the plight of Canadian migrant farm workers in southwestern Ontario.

Rev. Brad Massman, a spokesman for the Roman Catholic archdiocese of Toronto and a member of the group, said in an interview Tuesday that the clergymen have been criticized for concentrating on the California situation and ignoring problems closer to home.

The priest and a number of United Church clergymen went on a tour last summer of farm communities in southwestern Ontario to examine working conditions for migrants. Their concern was aroused by a federal government report that condemned working conditions there as inhumane.

The 1973 report by officials of the federal department of manpower and immigration found conditions "inhumane and intolerable" for Canadian migrants from Quebec and the Maritimes and only slightly better for laborers imported from Mexico and Jamaica.

Father Massman said the clergymen have supported the production of two CBC films depicting the plight of Canadian migrants. The films, produced by Gary McKeehan of Stratford, Ont., and scheduled for broadcast in January, were made with financial assistance from various groups, including the United Church.

A United Church spokesman said no attempt was made to influence the editorial content of the film because the clergymen are seeking to avoid direct confrontation with farmers in southwestern Ontario.

The spokesman stressed that the Ontario situation is different than problems in California where migrants are dealing with large, multinational corporations, while in Ontario migrants are employed by farmers whose profit margins are often precarious.

Organized Crime Stain on Honor

VATICAN CITY (Reuter) — Pope Paul Wednesday denounced the spread of organized crime in the world as a stain on the honor of civilized living.

Speaking at a New Year's mass for peace in St. Peter's basilica, the Pope also warned of dangers to world peace and called for spiritual reconciliation among men.

The first of January is celebrated by the Roman Catholic Church as a world day of peace.

He alluded to the wave of kidnappings that has swept Italy over the last year and directly referred to the Mafia and its "secret and pitiless laws."

It was difficult to remain optimistic about peace since "is not the barometer of peace today pointing to bad weather?"

True peace was to be found in men's hearts and minds, not in treaties and armistices, the Pope said.

He asked whether love could succeed in purifying the underworld, overturning vendettas and placating nationalist and racial pride.

"Yes, love will succeed, because Jesus Christ has taught us so,," he said.

Water Skiers Brave Winter

TORONTO (CP) — Several adventuresome persons plunged into Lake Ontario's 38-degree water Wednesday from the beach, from water skis and from ski kites.

Brian Cullingford, 25, water-skied 30 miles to Ontario Place, on Toronto's lakeshore, from Hamilton. Larry Henry, 24, who started out with him, was pulled into the boat near Oakville.

Mr. Cullingford said they did it "probably because we're mad fools."

Power Loss Said Cause Of Alarms

TORONTO (CP) — The defence department believes the false alarm in the emergency warning system in south-central Ontario Monday was activated by a power loss, a spokesman said Tuesday.

Lt.-Col. Bev Totman, Canadian Forces spokesman in Ontario, said there was a power loss in a main Ontario Hydro line south of Barrie at 3:06 and 3:08 Monday morning, caused by 32 insulators that had been damaged by vandals.

He said the power loss caused an induction of current in Bell Canada lines which might have tripped the siren system which is connected by Bell lines.

Thousands of residents in Toronto, Hamilton, Barrie and St. Catharines areas were awakened shortly after 3 a.m. Monday when defence department sirens wailed for up to 15 minutes.

New Year's Eve Generally Quiet

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

New Year's eve was generally quiet across Canada, although a youth was struck by a subway train in Toronto and in Saint John, N.B., police investigated two shooting incidents and helped rescue a man who had climbed an industrial crane.

Police in Saint John said the man, plucked from the top of the crane by policemen and firemen, is in custody and will be charged.

They also said three persons were arrested after shots were fired in an uptown residence and another man is to be charged after a weapon was fired in a northend house shortly after midnight. There were no injuries.

Toronto police reported a normal New Year's Eve with 34 persons injured in 172 traffic accidents and 32 impaired driving charges laid among 2,139 motorists stopped.

A Toronto youth is in poor condition in hospital after he fell onto a subway track and was hit by a train before his friends were able to drag him back onto the platform. A friend said he had been partying before the incident.

Thousands took advantage of free transit service in Toronto New Year's Eve, provided for the third year by a distillery.

Across Ontario, police reported four traffic fatalities by early Wednesday. One man was killed in a snowmobile accident, one drowned when his car plunged into a drainage canal and two died in a head-on collision.

Canada's first baby in 1975 is a seven-pound daughter born to Mr. and Mrs. Gerbaise Robias of Degras, Nfld. The girl was born at midnight Wednesday night Newfoundland time. Her given name is still undecided.

Demeter To Appeal

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Lawyers for Peter Demeter filed an appeal Tuesday against his Dec. 5 conviction of murder punishable by life imprisonment.

Demeter, 41, a Mississauga, Ont., builder, was convicted of hiring someone to kill his 33-year-old wife, Christine, in July, 1973.

His lawyers listed 34 grounds for appeal in their application and more grounds are expected to be filed before the appeal is heard.

Following the 11-week trial this fall, Demeter's lawyers said they would appeal the conviction, adding that they thought it would take about six months before a full trial transcript could be completed and the appeal heard.

Toronto lawyer Edward Greenspan, who together with Joseph Pomerant conducted the defence, said the grounds for appeal include the charge to the jury by Mr. Justice Campbell Grant, the admission of evidence obtained by wiretap and the failure of the court to obtain testimony from the man charged with the actual killing.

About halfway through the trial, police charged Imre Olejnyik, a native of Hungary, with the murder. Olejnyik now is believed to be living in Hungary and extradition proceedings have been started.

Goods Not Delivered But Firm Seeks Pay

TORONTO (CP) — Roberta Allan, a spokesman for the province's consumer protection bureau, says Neptune Acceptance Ltd., a Toronto finance company, will take at least 100 persons to court within the next few weeks for refusing to pay for food they purchased under contract but did not receive.

Mrs. Allan says Neptune purchased contracts from three bankrupt food supply companies without knowing that about half — or $80,000 worth — of the food signed for in the contracts still was undelivered.

"Since Neptune Acceptance says they paid the food plan companies the face value of the contracts, Neptune expects consumers to continue their payments despite the fact the contracts have not been fulfilled," Mrs Allan said.

The case will be the first test of a new section of the provincial Consumer Protection Act aimed at protecting people from having to pay for contracted obligations that have not been fulfilled.

Donald Goudy, head of the consumer protection bureau, says he interprets the section to mean that finance companies which purchase sales contracts face the same obligation to provide services contracted as firms from which the agreements are bought.

Murray Borth, Neptune president and owner, and Jim Ross, Neptune manager could not be reached for comment.

Oil War Is Said Last Resort

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States State Secretary Henry Kissinger has declined to rule out the possibility that the United States would use military force against Middle East oil producers "to prevent strangulation of the industrialized world."

"I have said repeatedly that I did not think it would come to that point. I'm confident the problem will be solved without the use of force," Kissinger told reporters Thursday night.

But, he added, "I'm not saying there is no circumstance where we would not use force."

After Kissinger returned from a vacation in Puerto Rico, reporters questioned him about an interview he gave Business Week magazine.

In the magazine interview, Kissinger said of the possible use of force in the Mideast, "We should have learned from Vietnam that it is easier to get into a war than to get out of it.

I am not saying that there's no circumstance where we would not use force. But it is one thing to use it in the case of a dispute over price, it's another where there's some actual strangulation of the industrialized world."

He told reporters he had "warned against military action. For oil prices it is too dangerous."

Previously, Kissinger had refused to discuss the possibility of U.S. military action against the oil producers.

In the Business Week interview conducted Dec. 23, Kissinger said he doesn't anticipate another oil embargo unless there is another Mideast war.

"I am not even sure of an oil embargo in the event of a war," he added.

And he said the danger of another Arab-Israeli war "is talked about much too loosely."

BOTH LOST

"Both sides lost grievously in the last war. Neither side really won. I think the readiness of either side to go to war is often exaggerated."

He repeated his position that the energy crisis cannot be solved "without a substantial reduction in the price of oil." He also said, "It is also our view that the prospects for an immediate reduction in oil prices are poor."

Maritime Gale Halts Ferries

HALIFAX (CP) — Northern Nova Scotia and parts of Newfoundland began digging out today after a storm packing snow and high winds extended the New Year's break for most people.

Affected by the weather were ferries operating between North Syndey, N.S. and Port aux Basques, Nfld.

A CN spokesman in North Sydney today said two ferries, the Marine Nautica and the William Carson, left this morning after waiting overnight for calmer seas.

The two ships were carrying a backlog of passengers and freight.

U.S. Army Books Give Bomb Tips

LONDON (CP) — Two field manuals published by the United States Army giving technical tips for making homemade bombs, boobytraps and incendiary devices using everyday materials, are openly on sale in Britain, The Guardian wrote today.

The manuals were both published in the 1960s by the department of the army.

The first, entitled Boobytraps, has 134 pages of precise details for nearly 100 different sorts of boobytraps, the newspaper said. It includes diagrams on how to boobytrap everyday objects like "kettles, whistles, televisions, beds, cars and roads and how to make a book boobytrap".

Another section deals with time fuses and explosive caps—"clothes-peg timers, alarm clock timers and watch timers, all methods used by IRA are shown," the newspaper said.

The second manual, Unconventional Warfare Devices and Techniques, is a reprint of Boobytraps but with 234 pages.

A spokesman for the U.S. Embassy said he was unaware of the sale of the books, which he said were prohibited in the United States.

FBI Fears Terrorists May Get Atomic Arms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Bureau of Investigation is warning of the possibility that nuclear weapons may fall into the hands of terrorists and about continued activities of Communists in the United States.

The FBI said "publicity concerning the possibility of nuclear blackmail by terrorists has made available to the public detailed information" relating to nuclear weapons.

Consequently, there has been "an increase in the number of investigations involving possible violations of the Atomic Energy Act," it said.

The report said that by July, 1974, "the official Soviet bloc presence had increased to 1,492," compared with 557 in 1960. It added that China had 86 staff members at its United Nations mission in New York and 66 at its liaison office in Washington as of July 1.

Reds Score Gains

SAIGON (AP) — Radio Hanoi said today that Communist-led forces captured Phuoc Binh's airstrip and inflicted heavy casualties on government defenders in the battle for the isolated provincial capital.

Specialists Slow Down

LONDON (AP) — A slow-down for higher pay by a fourth of the doctors in Britain's National Health Service is threatening to spread to the rest of the doctors manning the state medical program. The 12,000 specialists who serve as consultants at hospitals announced Thursday that they would work only their contracted 38 hours a week.

James Bay Port Possible

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government announced Thursday the formation of a consortium to conduct a $70,000 feasibility study for a deepwater port on James Bay. A news release said the consortium comprises two Toronto consulting firms — Hedlin Menzies and Associates Ltd. and Acres Consulting Services Ltd.

Air Canada Has Loss

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada will show about a $9-million deficit for 1974 because of inflation and higher aviation fuel costs, Yves Pratte, chairman of the board, said Thursday. While domestic traffic showed a strong growth rate, North Atlantic traffic was weak.

Ford's Holiday Over

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford, nursing a stiff knee after a skiing holiday, planned today to sign a foreign trade bill and confer with advisers on the CIA controversy and energy problems.

U.S. Role Alleged

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The guerrillas who held some of Nicaragua's top diplomats hostage last week charged Thursday that the United States is helping the Nicaraguan government track down leftist guerrillas, according to the Cuban news agency Prensa Latina. The news agency said members of the Sandinista Liberation Front told a news conference in Havana that U.S. helicopters from the Panama Canal Zone were used to transport Nicaraguan soldiers to areas where the government believes the guerrillas are hiding, and an American official identified as Gunter Warner has organized a "death squad" charged with tracking down leftist guerrillas.

Six Million Jobless in U.S.

110 Union Heads Called to Parley

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment in the United States passed six million persons last month for the first time since the great depression of the 1930s and organized labor has indicated it will make its first determined effort to do something about the loss of jobs.

Presidents of all 110 unions in the AF-CIO will hold a rare meeting Jan. 23 to consider what President George Meany called a program "designed to stabilize the economy and put Americans back to work."

U.S. labor department figures show a rise in the jobless rate possibly exceeding seven per cent in December from a level of 6.5 per cent in November when 5,975,000 workers were unable to find employment.

Not since 1940 when the U.S. was still shaking off the effects of the great depression were more than six million unemployed. About 8.1 million were jobless then, about 14.6 per cent of that era's smaller labor forte.

The grim job report comes as President Ford returned from a 12-day skiing vacation to prepare for a meeting Saturday of his key economic policy advisers. With the jobless rate rising and other signs that the recession is deepening, the administration is reported to be considering tax cuts to help stimulate the economy.

Two other indications of the economic sag came Thursday when the commerce department reported that new orders for factories declined two per cent in November and new construction slumped 2.7 per cent that month.

The December unemployment figures, which reflect layoffs in automobile-related industries as well as those resulting from a coal strike, were based on data gathered before the middle of the month. Layoffs have coninued to spread since then and will push the jobless rate for January still higher

To help cushion the recession's impact on workers, Ford signed into law this week legislation creating additional public service jobs and extending jobless benefits from a maximum of 39 to 52 weeks for the 80 million workers previously covered. The measure also made 12 million other employees eligible for the first time for 26 weeks of benefits.

Administration economists predict unemployment will continue rising until it reaches about 7.5 per cent by midyear, but some private economists forecast a rate of eight per cent by summer, a level not approached in 25 years.

In calling the Jan. 23 meeting of union leaders, the first in more than six years, Meany said, "Massive, immediate government action is imperative."

The recession is turning into a depression and organized labor has an obligation to work for programs "that will end these hard times and restore the prosperity destroyed by governmental policies begun in 1969 and continuing today," he said.

Simon Finally Persuaded Ford Ought Cut to Taxes

NEW YORK (Reuter) — All of President Ford's key economic advisers, including Treasury Secretary William Simon, are agreed on the need for a tax cut to stimulate the economy, the New York Times reports today.

In a dispatch from Washington quoting administration officials, The Times adds that the president was apparently moving towards such a decision.

The report says no final decision has been made and the size of any such cuts still is being debated. It quotes one high official as saying that the over-all cost of a cut would fall between $10 billion and $20 billion.

It says this would be offset by an increase in the duty on imported crude oil and higher taxes on domestic oil.

Such a cut, if decided, would be a complete reversal of the Ford administration's previous economic policy which concentrated on combating inflation rather than dealing with the problems of recession. Earlier this week, Ford dropped a proposal for a five-per-cent surtax on most individuals and corporations to pay for proposed unemployment programs.

U.S. Auto Industry Facing New Cuts

DETROIT (AP) — United States auto makers have closed the books on their most tumultuous year since the Second World War and opened 1975 with announcements of new production cuts and hints of more to come.

They also confirmed estimates that new-car output in 1974 sank to its lowest level for a non-strike year in more than a decade.

Additional bad news is expected Monday when the industry reports its year-end sales totals. Deliveries since September trailed 1973 levels by 30 per cent.

Another sale drop in December, as anticipated, would trigger a new round of production cuts and layoffs.

U.S. passenger car production in 1974 stood at 7,340,373 units, a 24-per-cent drop from a record 9,660,819 in 1973.

It was the lowest output since 1962, with the exception of 1970, when General Motors was hit by a 67-day strike.

December production was 357,429 units, off 31 per cent from 517,955 in December 1973 when production and sales had just begun to tumble in response to effects of the energy crisis.

The most hard-pressed of the companies, Chrysler Corp., said Thursday it will shut down three plants for at least a week, beginning Monday, and eliminate second shifts at two of those facilities when they reopen. One of the shift eliminations was announced previously.

The new shutdowns will force the layoff of 10,800 hourly workers, 2,600 of them for indefinite periods. About 50,000 of Chrysler's 117,000 hourly workers have now been given indefinite layoffs.

Ford Motor Co. also announced new production cuts Thursday, saying reduced operations at two Michigan trim plants will result in the layoff of 1,100 workers, beginning Monday. That will boost Ford's indefinite layoffs to 29,000.

Ford has 85,000 of its 178,000 hourly workers slated for layoff this month, 56,000 for temporary periods.

GM is laying off 132,000 of its 370,000 workers this month, 91,000 of them indefinitely. American Motors Corp. is laying off 15,150 of its 23,000 workers for a week this month.

Steel Mills And Banks To Hire More

TORONTO (CP) — Despite the economic slowdown, steel mills, furniture makers and banks plan to do more hiring this year.

A survey by Manpower Temporary Services, a private firm, indicates 30.8 per cent of foundries and steel rolling mills plan to add to their payrolls in the first three months of this year.

Nearly 25 per cent of the banks contacted by the firm forecast sizable increases in staff.

Metals and metalworking manufacturers, furniture and fixture manufacturers also had plans for staff additions

The firm, which specializes in temporary help and business service, asked more than 1,100 firms across Canada about their employment plans for January, February and March.

Bomb Kills Indian Minister

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Railway Minister L. N. Mishra died today of wounds from a bomb that exploded while he was inaugurating a new rail line in his native Bihar state.

Mishra, 51, was the first cabinet member assassinated since India became independent 27 years ago.

Bihar has been rocked by political violence since last March. And Mishra, a close associate of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi since she came to power in 1966, has been under attack in the national Parliament for his handling of a rail strike last May and for alleged corruption.

Twenty-three others were injured in the blast Thursday night at Samastipur, in remote northern Bihar. Authorities said several of the injured, including two members of parliament from the ruling Congress party, were in serious condiiton.

Record Litter

Bluebell, a Persian cat, is surrounded by her litter of 14 kittens. According to the Guinness book of records Bluebell's bountiful bundle is a record. The cat's owner, Mrs. Elenore Dawson of Wellington, South Africa hopes to find a foster home for some of the kittens because she believes Bluebell will only be able to feed six of them.

Easy Tips For Safe New Year

A new year is always a good time to start something new. And what better way to start a new year than to be fire safe in your home. During the next three weeks I will outline dozens of ways to prevent fire from marring your 1975.

LIVING ROOM

1. Keep plenty of deep grooved ash trays in the room and make sure they are emptied often, if they are emptied after a party dump them in the toilet to make sure the butts are all out.

2. Be sure inflammable curtains or drapes cannot blow over ash trays, electric bulbs, kerosene lamps or candles.

3. Have a fireplace screen to check sparks and make sure it is used at all times.

4. Watch for breaks or wear in lamp and appliance cords, and replace when needed.

5. Be sure electric circuits are sufficient to carry peak loads — lamps, radio, electric heaters, T.V. etc. Consult a good electrician if in doubt.

DINING ROOM

6. Use electric candles to avoid the hazard of open candle lights near combustible decorations at parties.

KITCHEN

7. Consult an electrician when you want to extend or alter existing circuits.

8. Don't leave electric iron with current on. Use automatic cut-off type, if possible. Put it in a safe place to cool.

9. Snuff matches carefully. Don't throw them into waste baskets, garbage pails, or cardboard boxes of any kind.

10. Don't use or keep inflammable cleaning fluids in kitchen — or anywhere in the house.

11. Guard against spontaneous ignition fires by keeping oily rags, or cloths saturated with furniture polish, paints or wax, in closed metal containers.

12. Be sure coal or wood stoves are at least 18 inches from walls and cover wall with a sheet of asbestos, or other approved insulating material. Place an insulated metal base on the floor under the stove. Watch your stove-pipes, pipe collars and flues closely for defects.

13. Don't let grease accumulate on stove — keep grease containers away from stove. Smother grease fires in pans by using tight lids or covers.

14. See that window curtains and hanging towels cannot blow into gas flames or over hot stove.

15. If you use a coal or wood stove don't pour kerosene on stubborn fires to get them going.

16. Check automatic gas water heater regularly. Turn off non-automatic type before leaving house unoccupied for any length of time.

17. Don't throw flower, uncooked cereals or dust from your vacuum cleaner or dustpan into a lit stove — or into a burning incinerator. Dust is explosive. Wrap up dust and dispose of it safely in your garbage container outside.

Next time I will carry on with the bedrooms.

Experts Lost

WASHINGTON (AP) — Armament deals with Iran have cost the United States about $35 million and seriously depleted the U.S. pool of military advisers the General Accounting Office (GAO) says.

The report by the GAO, a watchdog agency of Congress, said 500 to 600 U.S. experts, some critically needed here, are currently instructing Iranian military personnel in the operation of advanced U.S. weaponry and in related fields.

More Smokers

OTTAWA (CP) — Smoking is on the rise among both men and women, although the increase is slight and nonsmokers still outnumber smokers, the health department reported Thursday.

The department said in a statement that 53 per cent of Canadians 15 years of age and older did not smoke at all in 1973 and 60 per cent did not smoke every day.

Old Texts Sought

A BCI math teacher has sent out an appeal for old mathematics textbooks — any over 15 years old.

David Handley is offering an enrichment course in math next semester, at BCI, beginning Jan. 29. Some of the topics to be studied will be from "old" math and Mr. Handley is anxious to get the appropriate texts. Any book used in Grades 11 through 13 more than 15 years ago will be acceptable.

Some of the texts Mr. Handley would like to obtain are Higher Algebra by Hall and Knight, MacMillan, 1887; A New Analytic Geometry by Durrant and Kingston, MacMillan, 1940; Advanced Algebra by Miller and Rourke MacMillan, 1947; Elementary Trigonometry by Hall and Knight, and Trigonometry and Statics by Miller and Rourke, both published by MacMillan.

Mr. Handley can be reached at BCI.

THE NEW YEAR BRINGS HOPE

80% of the prescriptions we now dispense contain ingredients unknown less than ten years ago. We still use a few of the old reliables, but most of them are being rapidly replaced by better new products.

Research scientists and pharmaceutical chemists are devoting their lives to this purpose. Meanwhile, each year brings new drugs, that alleviate pain and distress, so that the patient can live as comfortably as possible. As soon as new medicines are released we stock them. Do not despair if any member of your family seems hopelessly sick. Any day, a new discovery may give the needed help.

Pet of the Week

Sandy, a three-month-old part spaniel male, is a casualty of Christmas. Given as a present to people who are unable to keep him, he was taken to the Quinte Animal Shelter on Avonlough Rd., for adoption. A quiet pup, he will make a good pet for the right family.

1,500 Children Aided By Annual Toy Drive

Belleville firefighters have concluded another successful Christmas toy drive.

They provided toys for about 1,500 children this year, 200 more than last year. Children in 400 families were looked after by the firefighters. They prepared boxes for toys for families as far away as Marmora, Madoc and Napanee, but delivered boxes only in Belleville.

Pat Barrett, in charge of the program this year, said no request was turned down. The firefighters bought 300 hockey sticks, 24 dozen pairs of socks, 20 dozen pairs of panty hose, 12 pairs of mitts and 12 dozen paint by number sets, 12 dozen candy canes, and 500 pounds of candy.

The purchased articles were paid for by cash donations. The HiC club in Cannifton contributed $250, the proceeds from a dance for which the Friendships, a group, played free of charge.

The toys were delivered the Friday before Christmas, using nine pick-up trucks staffed with two off-duty firefighters in each. Delivery was made to 400 families within three hours.

Mr. Barrett said calls came for toys Christmas Eve and Christmas Day. An off-duty fireman delivered toys to five families Christmas Eve and Mr. Barrett delivered three boxes Christmas Day.

"We couldn't do it without the public's help," said Mr. Barrett.

Funerals and Obituaries

MRS. ANNIE OLIVIA BROWN

RR 3 Frankford

Funeral service for Mrs. Annie Olivia Brown, RR 3 Frankford, who died in Trenton Memorial Hospital Dec. 31, was held Thursday.

Mrs. Brown, 67, died after a six-month illness.

She had lived most of her life in the Frankford area. A registered nurse, she retired from active work some time ago. She was a graduate of Brantford General Hospital and her last nursing post had been with Bata Industries.

Born in Odessa, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Norman Young, she had lived previously in Trenton and on Sidney township's fifth concession.

She was a member of Trinity Anglican Church, Frankford, and had been active in lodge work. She was a past president of the LOBA Lodge 367, Frankford.

The wife of George Edward Brown, Mrs. Brown is immediately survived by a daughter, Mrs. G. (Dorothy) Joice, of Barrie; three grandchildren — Shekley, Bradley and Drew Joice — and a brother, Walter Young, RR 1 Trenton.

The service was held at the Jones-Rowe Funeral Home, Frankford, directed by Rev. Fred Gosse. Entombment was in Frankford cemetery vault. Bearers were Harold Vosbourgh, Kenneth Roote, Francis Frost, David McConnell, Robert McDonald, Harry Phillips.

THOMAS GERALD (Jerry) DORAN

A railroad conductor who had worked 35 years for Canadian National Railways, Thomas Gerald (Jerry) Doran, 55, Montrose Rd., (RR3, Belleville) died Wednesday in Trenton Memorial Hospital.

He was the son of Henry and the late Elizabeth Doran. He was educated at St. Michael's Academy and was a parishioner of Holy Rosary Church.

Mr. Doran was a member of the Canadian Legion and the United Transportation Union.

He leaves his wife, the former Shirley Jean Wessels, two daughters — Nancy and Rose Mary, both of RR3, Belleville; three brothers and a sister, Vincent, and John of Belleville, Charles, of Toronto; Sister Mary Clare, Edmonton.

He was predeceased by a brother Arthur.

Resting at the O'Brien — Steele Funeral Home, Mass will be held at Holy Rosary Church Saturday, at 11 a.m. with burial in St. James Cemetery.

Moocher Has New Home

PICTON — A stray cat dubbed The Moocher who has roamed Picton streets for almost six months has been adopted

After his story appeared in The Intelligencer last week two calls of inquiry promptly followed. One caller expressed interest in the cat but questioned if he would adapt readily in her home as she is away each day at work.

The second caller, a Picton woman, inquired on behalf of her brother and his wife, a retired couple living in a Millhaven trailer park. The couple had instructed her to adopt The Moocher.

Legacy of Forgotten Career Lives On

By CHRIS ALMEY
Staff Correspondent

STIRLING — The only concession Murn Stapley gives to the 20th century is a transistor radio and a telephone. Entering his home, two miles east of Stirling, you are greeted by the relaxing glow of a coal oil lamp.

Mr. Stapley is one of the last of the original Hastings County pioneers and one of the first to lose his job due to mechanization. He was born in 1883, and went to work with his father when he was 13.

Mr. Stapley points to a photograph of a stone-moving machine, just like the one at the Ameliasburg Museum. The museum has preserved the ungainly looking wooden crane, which straddles boulders three-feet high and five-feet long.

What the museum cannot preserve, however, is the effort and co-ordination of the horses which moved the tremendous burden.

His father was in the business of clearing the immense limestone rocks and other types deposited on the surrounding countryside by the glaciers centuries ago. It was about 1896 and young Murn joined his father in the hard work.

"It took a special team of horses to handle a stone machine," the 91-year-old gentleman said.

"The massive weight would swing back and forth. When the stone swung back, the horses could hardly move, and ahead, the two beasts trotted the length of this room (about 15 feet).

"Just imagine, we got 15 cents a stone," Mr. Stapley said. "Once in a while we would get a limestone that was too big. We would let it back down and light a fire around it, and the heat would crack it in half. It was a big laugh, since we then got 30 cents."

Seven years later, age 20, Mr. Stapley found himself out of a job. Bulldozers had appeared on the scene. The 20th century had arrived.

He worked on a thrashing machine that was hand fed, and powered by steam. This too, succumbed to the gasoline engine.

His hobby is fixing clocks. They tick round his home. They take you back in time . . . "The biggest pine tree I ever saw was at Beaver Creek. It was about 18 feet around, and didn't branch out until about 48 feet above the ground, and those branches were like big trees themselves," the geneleman remembers.

Mr. Stapley sand he hunted deer until two years ago at a camp he and seven others established at Aylen Lake near Algonquin Park 30 years ago.

Only two other men survive. "There are more wolves now, and fewer deer."

While his chosen profession no longer exists, his legacy is all around Hastings County, piled neatly, fencing farmers' fields three-quarters-of-a-century later.

Original Pioneer

Murn Stapley, 91, feeds his wood stove for warmth. He lives in the north end of Sydney Township, and helped build stone fences throughout Hastings County, using a team of horses and a giant stone-moving machine, a type of which can still be seen at the Ameliasburg Museum.

Foreign Students Sample Canadian Life

TRENTON — In St. Louis-de-Kent, New Brunswick, late in 1974, Costa Rican Marco Meneses taught classes to children of the primarily francophone community in English, heavily accented with his native Spanish.

And they understood, said the 17-year-old youth in an interview here Thursday.

Confusing? Not really. He explained that the few things students didn't comprehend during his history, geography and Spanish classes, the regular teacher would translate into French.

He taught classes about what life was like in Costa Rica, a small Central American country north of Panama.

He wasn't alone, however. With him in the village of 3,000 residents was a group of 16 Canadians and fellow Costa Ricans under the sponshorship of Canada World Youth.

The three-year-old program, financed by the federal government, promotes exchange visitsbetween Canada and Costa Rica, only one of ten other countries. In all, 25 Costa Rican teen-agers have stayed in Canada during the last four months.

With him Thursday was his countryman Williams Chacon and former Bayside Secondary school student Leslie Miller.

During their five-week stay in New Brunswick, Marco said he sensed a pressure upon its French-speaking people.

"They have to know English," he said.

In Costa Rica, a country predominately Spanish but with 25 per cent of the population English - speaking, no such problem exists. It is bilingual, he said.

Unlike in Ear Falls, north of Kenora, where the group first lived, Marco said St. Louis-de-Kent gave them the opportunity to truely immerse themselves in the culture of its people.

Leslie Miller said the New Brunswick village was better suited to the near complete immersion intended by the cultural exchange program.

During the five weeks, the group of 16 teenagers stayed with local families in small two or three member groups. By comparison, in Ear Falls, where they built eight homes, they lived together in two vacant houses.

In New Brunswick they also did some building — a co-operative restaurant owned by 200 families.

Such projects illustrate the purpose behind the exchange program, said Miss Miller.

"We're not getting a tourist concept," she said. She leaves for Costa Rica this weekend for her four-month stay and expects to enter the same "work project" concept there.

During the holidays, which the two 17-year-old boys spent at Miss Miller's parents home, the two learned the sport of curling.

A shock it was, said Marcos. Never had the boys encountered the sport in Costa Rica, an equatorial country.

Home Nears Completion

PICTON — An open house at the new H.J. McFarland Home for the Aged probably will be held this month says Allan Anderson, chairman of the building committee.

He added the date of the two-day open house will be contingent on the contractor's progress, in completing "lots of little odds and ends."

An official opening of the 84-bed home will be held this summer with Minister of Social and Family Services Rene Brunelle in attendances.

At the December meeting of Prince Edward County council, Wellington reeve Robert Boyce suggested the home for the aged should be officially opened before Jan. 7, when a new council takes office.

He said this way retiring councillors active in promotion of the new home would be permitted to participate in the opening.

Mr. Anderson, reeve of Bloomfield in 1974, said a special bylaw was passed last fall to permit all members of the 1973-74 social services committee to continue as members of the county home building committee.

This allows a continued and close association with the project for those who have been active in it since its inception.

Although Mr. Anderson has stepped out of municipal politics succeeded by new Bloomfield reeve Ben Prinzen, he will continue as chairman of the building committee for the county home.

Women Gather

PICTON — The Prince Edward Women's Hospital Auxiliary will hold its annual meeting Friday, Jan. 10 at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute.

Guest speaker will be Dr. Edith Peterkin who will discuss The Goals of Education.

The meeting will be preceeded by a potluck supper.

Mail Gets Through

Strike-prone as it has been in the past, this is a time to say "hats off" to Canada Post.

Inevitably there are stragglers in the mail over Christmas, even if sent in what should have proved plenty of time — such as a couple of letters mailed overseas Dec. 12 which drifted in shortly before New Year.

The movement of Christmas mail is a heroic effort, all the way to finding a destination for those pieces that have been inadequately addressed. There is a home in Prince Edward for instance which in old-country tradition has a name — in this case a Polynesian name. And there was this Christmas card with the receiver's name, the rural route, even Belleville without its middle 'e' all misspelled or incorrect. Only the house name was spelled correctly, and it was delivered safely.

The postal people do a good job.

Sporting Prowess

Congratulations to Apollo Barbell weightlifters Ron Hayes and Terry Murphy for the silver and bronze medals they won at the Ontario Winter Games in Thunder Bay.

Active too these days are the Walt brothers — Norm, one of four club members entered at Thunder Bay, and Art and Gary who competed in a recent Ottawa Invitational event. Gary of course will be remembered as the heavyweight exponent who had the misfortune to injure a leg just prior to a scheduled trip to the Commonwealth Games "down under" last February. Back almost to his former peak, Gary took second place in his event in Ottawa. It has been quite a long haul for him, and a triumph against adversity.

Another notable effort at the winter games at the Lakehead was the silver medal won by the Central Ontario boys' volleyball team which boasted three youngsters from Madoc, as well as team coach Carm Donato.

A Community Uprooted

The mass evacuation of the people of Darwin will provide sociologists with enough study material to last a lifetime and beyond.

For one thing a good many of the people who now must establish themselves in other Australian communities will likely remain there.

By the same token, if and when Darwin is rebuilt, it will be an entirely new city with a completely different character and a population that may include only a small proportion of people from the old community.

It will be a situation similar to, only on a much larger scale, the evacuation of Tristan da Cunha some years ago. Volcanic eruption drove the people from their island homes in the South Atlantic to new homes in South Africa and Britain. It was an exodus that was to bring inevitable problems — disaffection among the younger people and unhappiness for others in strange new environments.

For the people of Darwin it should be comparatively easy to adapt to life in other parts of their own country, but nonetheless it will be a trying experience.

Monetary Clout

One of the great political ironies of our time is the big economic stick the Arabs wield for a people whose way of life in some respects has changed little since Biblical times.

Arab money is appearing in the most unlikely situations — from the purchase of Daimler-Benz car shares in Germany to the possibility of the purchase of a similar interest in Pan-American Airlines.

Yet, far from engendering fear of a massive Arab takeover of western interests, the Arab deals are seen as both economically and politically sound.

Germany reportedly neither fostered nor tried to hinder the sale of shares to Kuwait, and a Bonn spokesman is quoted as saying "a country that invests in our economy would not want to harm the firm in which it buys shares of stock."

Similarly, Kuwait's oil minister has been quoted as saying the oil-rich sheikdom would never reduce oil production to the point of harming Britain or the United States, because that is where it keeps its money.

As ever, money talks.

Processed Canned Goods Do Well

European Markets For Ontario Food Manufacturers

Ontario Bulletin

New markets in Europe for specialty foods produced in Ontario are being won by companies from the province, in spite of high EEC tariffs and strong local competition.

Cash sales of £80,450 pounds with estimated follow up orders of nearly £869,550 pounds have been marked up by representatives of 13 food manufacturers exhibiting last month at the sixth International Food Products Exhibition (SIAL) Paris, France..

Processed canned goods accounted for all on-the-spot sales, and there is the fascinating prospect of pending orders worth £4,350 pounds each for spaghetti, made in Toronto and seriously sought by buyers in Portugal and Italy.

Agency agreements covering sales of Ontario foods in many European and middle-east countries were concluded or in the process of final negotiation after the show.

The Ontario section of the Canada stand (shared with Quebec food manufacturers) was sponsored by the Ontario Food Council, Toronto, and organized through the provinces Agriculture and Food Branch, Ontario House..

Products on show ranged from canned vegetables, pickles, wheat biscuits, pastas, and whisky to tinned hams, roast beef, ketchup, fruit cocktail, freeze dry foods and deep frozen fish. The Ontario Bean Producers Marketing Board mounted a special display at the stand and seven export dealers visited SIAL to seek likely buyers..

From contacts with a U.K. company made at the exhibition, Mykola Plawiuk, president of Essex Packers Ltd., Hamilton, made a quick visit to London and completed a sale of processed canned goods worth £75,000 pounds. It was the company's first venture into the European market and resulted in agency agreements for Spain and France..

'Its like selling refrigerators to Eskimos, said Joe Vitale, export manager, Primo Importing and Distributing Co. Ltd. Toronto. He was speaking of a firm enquiry by an Italian importer for a container load of pasta products - mainly spaghetti - for delivery next year..

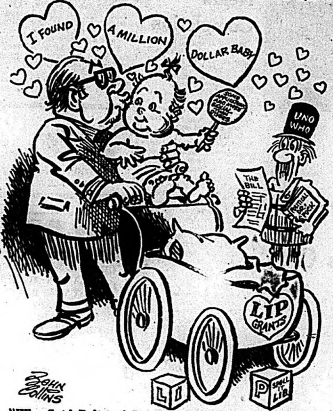
Explained Mr. Vitale, 'we make the best spaghetti in the world, and quality comes from the fine hard wheat we use in manufacture. In Italy there was a 'top-of-the-table market where quality mattered, despite the 19 per cent tariff. 'We hope to be the first company to sell pasta to the pasta makers, he said.

E.D.Smith and Sons Ltd., Winona, which began exporting to France earlier this year, was able to promote many of its canned and bottled foods - tomato ketchup, and garden cocktails, pie fillings, and fruit nectars - both with existing contacts and among new ones..

'We hope to get 173,900 pounds in sales in Europe next year, said export manager, Lew S. Smith. A good proportion would be outside France. For instance he had made cash sales of £4,350 to a company in Kuwait, and good contacts had been established that would soon lead to appointment of distributors in Belgium, Austria, Ireland, Denmark, and Spain, he claimed.

Other companies reporting good sales activity included Weston Foods Ltd., Toronto, whose vice-president Kevin Doyle contacted six potential agents for the companys stoned-wheat thins (cracker biscuits). He hoped to have the product on the market early in 1975, and envisaged sales of up to £75,000 during the first full year of marketing. Canada Packers Ltd., through their U.K. representative, received a firm enquiry from a British company for the 'Omstead range of frozen lake smelt, perch and bass. Roger Robbins said he estimated this could amount to £14-22,000 annually, and the Omstead line would be a new account for Canda Packers..

Other exhibiting companies were: L.J.McGuiness and Co. Ltd., Gold-Brook Foods Ltd., Norda Ltd., Rieber Distillery Ltd., and Protein Labs., all from Toronto; Signet Food Products Inc., Mississauga, Freeze Dry Foods Ltd., Oakville.



"Who Said Political Baby Kissing Was Out Of Date"

Social Pressures And Alcoholism

The Christian Science Monitor

Among New Year's resolutions for many Americans should be an earnest consideration of ways to reduce the social pressure that encourage social drinking and the hazards associated with it.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration reports that social drinking now poses an alarming accident threat to American youth. A recent study showed that, at least once a month, one out of three teenagers is in a car driven by a heavily drinking driver. One-fourth of the youths studied had themselves driven three or more times while drunk. When one considers that highway fatalities total more than 50,000 a year, and that fully half of all fatal auto accidents involve alcohol, the seriousness of drinking trends among the young is evident.

Unfortunately, such scary statistics alone do not seem to carry much weight in discouraging the dangerous mixing of drinking with driving. And those who prepared the teen drinking study also think that "no amount of legal action" will correct the problem. They look to "encouraging social pressures against drinking and driving" as the most promising route..

In some countries such as Finland, where penalties for driving after drinking are severe, hosts take care to provide nonalcoholic drinks for guests who must drive. Indeed, Finnish nondrinkers find that driving to a gathering is a surefire way to cut off any pressures to drink. American hosts could help break the dangerous drinking-driving tie by respecting the nondrinking guest's position and not making alcohol central to social occasions.

The highway safety study found that the teen-age students in contact with alcohol-related situations are not "farout, dropout, alienated, or underachieving types." They are "mainstream" youths. It should be clear, then, that change must come in the mainstream culture's thinking and practices.

In recent years, great progress has been made in challenging the primacy of the smoker over the nonsmoker in social and public settings. The start of the new year 1975 is a good time similarly to challenge the assumption that alcohol is essential to good times or celebration - an assumption that is posing a grave hazard to a new generation.

More Hotels Under Construction

Canadian Tourism

Knowing that tourists spent over $5 billion in Canada last year, the country is building numerous major hotels from coast to coast to accommodate even more visitors. Among the builders is virtually every major hotel chain in the world. A leader is Holiday Inn, with upwards of 20 hotels opening this year or by 1976 when Canada plays host to the Summer Olympics in Montreal.

Almost all major new hotels are including elaborate convention facilities, banquet and ballrooms readily convertible into any type and size of convention accommodation.

The latest audio-visual equipment is routinely installed in many hotels and bilingual and secretarial services are becoming customary features at convention-designated Canadian hotels.

To further suit the needs and wishes of convention-goers is a trend to convenience. Hotels built in conjunction with office-residential-shopping complexes, clustered together within short, weatherproof walking distance. Many include giant exhibition halls. Complexes of this type are open or near completion in Calgary, Winnipeg, Halifax, Quebec City and Montreal and several other cities have plans for similar complexes. By late 1976 there will be more than 20,000 new units in about 80 hotels across Canada.

Not surprisingly, a major push towards new guest accommodation is taking place in the province of Quebec whose largest city, Montreal, is the site of most Olympic competitions. A dozen major hotel projects will soon be altering the Montreal skyline: six are scheduled to open in 1975 and six more, the next year..

Although the Olympics provide the impetus for much hotel construction, Montreal's regular convention trade (over 250 conventions a year) has a great deal to do with the hectic activity.

Bible Digest

by H. B. DEAN

But we must never forget that there is a penalty for trying the patience of God. "He that being often reproved hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed and that without remedy."

Government And Gobbledegook Go Together In This Country

By DON OHEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

All across Canada today governments and most politicians complain about bad communications.

They say the public really doesn't know what they are doing. They claim they are misunderstood. And they usually say it with rancor.

By inference, and sometimes publicly, they blame the press. The inference is that it isn't doing its job.

And to try and meet their problem they hire hosts of publicity men, put out millions of publications and set up organizations such as Information Canada.

In the process they have looked everywhere for reasons why they are not getting through better to the public.

Everywhere except perhaps the most important area of all.

For seldom have they looked at themselves.

If not the biggest, certainly one of the major causes of the breakdown in communications between government and the public is that government, politicians, at least at the senior level, and senior civil servants have got in the bad habit of talking over the head of the public.

They have forgotten that their big job is to talk to the man on the street.

They dont keep in mind that when he talks about a spade he calls it a spade not "a tool for digging.

Government has developed a lingo all of its own and when its spokesmen and other politicians talk they are really talking to each other rather than to the public.

They dont take a look at anything. They take an "overview.

They don't have a chat. They have a "dialogue.

They don't have skeletons. They have "infra-structures.

They don't have a political system in which everybody gets to play a part. They have "participatory democracy.

And these are only mild examples of the jargon through which government expects to be understood by the man on the street.

Treasurer John White is one of the most lucid men in the Ontario government (also a onetime newspaperman).

Yet in a recent speech he had this paragraph, talking about his new taxes:

"I would like you to consider three particular new measures which are part of the mosaic of government policies and programs having as its objective the maximization of human happiness here in Ontario."

The "maximization of human happiness."

What would the guy in the corner bar have to say about that?

"Is he trying to tell me his government is trying to make me as happy as possible?"

And, once again, this is only a mild example, very mild, of the over-blown and affected language which government uses in its attempts to communicate.

There are two obvious reasons why there has been this trend.

One is that in recent years academics have swarmed into government. And academics are notoriously bad in talking or writing simple English.

And they naturally swing a considerable influence over their bosses, the cabinet ministers, who often are former merchants or from other fields where they have not had to talk to the public.

Then today we are living in an atmosphere of a snobbery of words.

Politicians making speeches generally are more concerned with "oratory" rather than being understood. And to them oratory means using the biggest words they can think up or dig up.

As a consequence they are often nearly incomprehensible. As a press man can add, also unreportable.

And how's this for closers:

"In my view there is a need today for reassertion and expansion of what might be called the moral authority of leadership in public affairs."

Whatever it means that is the way Ontario's premier Bill Davis said it.

Ulster Economy Up Two Percent

Ulster Commentary

Northern Ireland's economy was firmly placed in the 'basically healthy' category by Professor James A. Bates, head of the Department of Business Studies at Queen's University, in a speech to Belfast Rotary Club.

The growth rate of two per cent was faster than that of the rest of the United Kingdom, he said, and was likely to be maintained during the rest of this year and at least part of 1975.

After that it would probably slow down but then that was a universal trend to be accounted for by a world-wide shortage of material.

The oil crisis this year was one manifestation,' said Professor Bates, 'but if it hadn't been oil it would have been something else sooner or later because of the pace of developmnt.'

Northern Ireland, he went on, had certain strengths and resources that did not apply, at least in an equal degree, in Britain.

'On the whole everyone engaged in productivity and marketing here is trying to make things better,' he said. 'No one is sitting back in Northern Ireland."

This was to be seen very clearly after the workers' strike in May last. He had calculated the potential loss caused by the stoppage at about 100 million pounds, 'I still hold by that as a potential figure,' Professor Bates commented, 'but because of a fire fighting-spirit a miracle happened and it didn't cost anything like that: the realistic cost was around 20 million pounds.

Overtime, hard work and increased productivity had made up for much of the potential loss.

A similar recovery had been made in Britain following the three-day week. The potential losses there had been mostly made up.

The economy of the Province depended largely on the British economy and he agreed with forecasts that the United Kingdom faced a difficult period in the next three years. These were brought about by inflation, the possibility of a slump in world trade and oil prices.

The actual growth rate in the three year period would be very low and could even be zero. There could be 1,000,000 out of work by 1976.

Professor Bates said that in his view it was difficult to see what any government could do in the present situation..

One happy aspect of Northern Ireland's economy was the man-made fibre industry, the biggest in Europe and possibly the world. There was also the re-shaping of older industries and pretty good industrial relations.

Until the start of the troubles Northern Ireland was the success story of United Kingdom regional policy and while the troubles had had a serious effect on confidence with a holding back of new industries and decline in retail business, his belief was that this was only temporary and the maintained increase in productivity was notable..

The weaknesses that must be met were the shortage of skilled manpower at both management and worker level, lack of marketing orientation and an old-fashioned attitude to human relations in some industries.

Canada Defence

The Globe and Mail

Canada need not be one of the world's great military powers. But it does need a well-equipped, if comparatively small, body of armed forces to perform vital domestic services and meet the requirements of statehood at home and abroad.

It must be prepared to carry on a modest but efficient military participation in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, to meet the commitments this country has so eagerly made to international peacekeeping, to patrol one of the largest land masses in the world, to be ready to assist in keeping domestic peace, undertake search and rescue missions and perform emergency duties when disaster strikes.

Car Pool Or A Bus Service?

Montreal Gazette

Garlene Zappitelli, a patriotic American mother, just wanted to help President Ford save energy and WIN, so she formed a car pool. Her pool, alas, has drained into a swamp of red tape.

Mrs. Zappitelli's car is too big, even for southern California. It is a 12-passenger van that Mrs. Z. says she bought because she has six children. That leaves ample room for expansion, in case in the future she might want to save even more energy by carrying around even more children.

In the meantime, Mrs. Zappitelli drives 77 miles to work and back every weekday, and the car pool is a natural. By charging her riders $8 a week, she says, she just manages to break even.

But there is no pleasing everyone. A local bus company has hauled Mrs. Zappitelli before the California Public Utilities Commission, demanding restitution on the grounds she is operating an illicit bus line. The distinction is a fine one, and the commission is thinking it over.

Judging by contemporary standards, Mrs. Zappitelli's could not have been a very good bus line because it was not losing any money. That will be quickly remedied, however, since the commission has temporarily ordered Mrs. Zappitelli not to share her gas expenses. At that rate she will soon be able to lose her shirt (blouse?) and become a real bus line. Then perhaps California can expropriate her and operate it itself.

Health And Food We Eat

Montreal Star

'Tis the season for politicians to make fools of themselves and Eugene Whelan could hardly be expected to miss the opportunity to add his contribution.

The minister of agriculture was busy recently casting innuendos about health hazards, and even foot and mouth disease, in the cheap boneless beef that Canada imports from Australia and New Zealand.

Within 24 hours the minister was forced to back down and admit that there is no foot and mouth disease in Australia and New Zealand. But Canadians should stay on guard against further phoney health scares whose chief purpose is to make them pay more for their meat.

Cow Thief Pays Debt

SAGNAW, Mich. (AP) — Holiday spirits moved a cow thief of bygone years to settle a debt with Jed McCormick, 61.

He opened an envelope the other day and found a $100 bill and a note on faded pink paper which said:

"This is for a heafer we ate which might have been yours 20 years ago. Merry Christmas."

McCormick, who hasn't raised cattle in 15 years, said he doesn't know where the money came from.

"I know we lost one, but I have no idea of who did it . . . we thought it had got lost," he said.

Drug Arrests

MIAMI (AP) — United States drug agents arrested five persons Thursday on charges of smuggling nearly $714 million worth of coccaine and marijuana into Florida Seven other persons were arrested previously in the U.S. or South America and six others were being sought in south Florida in connection with the case, a U.S. drug administration spokesman said.

Reports Denied

OTTAWA (CP) — Lorne K. Lodge,, president of Toronto based IBM Canada Ltd., denied reports Thursday that its U.S. parent had blocked a $2-million sale of typewriters to Cuba by the Canadian subsidiary for fear of running afoul of the U.S. Trading with the Enemy Act.

Costs Rise

OTTAWA (CP) — Since 1950, the cost of shipping live cattle by rail from Edmonton to Montreal has increased 67.4 per cent to $2.59½ a hundredweight and the cost of shipping dressed meat has risen 47.6 per cent to $4.01½.

The gap between freight rates for live cattle and dressed meat has widened to $1.42 from $1.35 in 1950 and Alberta packing house representatives have expressed fears about the future of their businesses.

Peak Lower

OTTAWA (CP) — More than 300 feet have been lopped off Mount Logan, the highest peak in Canada.

The height of the mountain was unofficially lowered following surveys by federal scientists which set its height at 19,520 feet, 330 feet less than the official height.

More Layoffs

DETROIT (P) — Chrysler Corp . announced Thursday it will lay off an additional 10,800 workers next week at plants in Michigan and Missouri.

Atomic Body Admits Plutonium Is Missing

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) acknowledged Thursday that some of its nuclear plants are unable to account for all the plutonium and highly enriched uranium they have produced.

The AEC said it is seeking national security guidance on how to publicly discuss the unaccounted for material.

The AEC announcement followed publication of a New York Times story that said the nuclear industry is unable to account for thousands of pounds of nuclear materials that might be fashioned into crude nuclear bombs.

The AEC specifically denied one portion of the story that said there were two known instances where government employees were discovered to have smuggled out enough special nuclear material to make a nuclear weapon.

Nuclear materials unaccounted for usually result from measurement inaccuracies, the AEC said. Some materials also are missing because they adhere to plant processing equipment, it added.

Takeover Approved

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says the federal cabinet has reversed a decision and will permit a previously-barred foreign takeover of a Canadian company for the first time since the Foreign Investment Review Agency was established last year.

In an Ottawa dispatch, the newspaper says J. H. Corbeil Ltee., a school bus assembly plant in St. Lin, Que., will be taken over by Canadian Blue Bird International Inc., an affiliate of the Blue Bird bus company of Fort Valley, Ga.

The agency announced Nov. 11 that the proposal did not meet "the test of significant benefit to Canada."

The Quebec government decided to join Blue Bird in the takeover of the family - held firm, the minister is quoted as saying. Through the Societe de Developpment Industriel, it will purchase something less than half the shares, with Blue Bird obtaining majority control.

The newspaper says the Quebec governmnet will be a major customer of the company.

Amnesty Denied Man Charged After Accident

HAMILTON (CP) — The United States attorney's office in Lexington, Ky., says Thomas James Martin, charged in connection with the traffic death of a Hamilton boy last month, will not be granted amnesty from prosecution for draft evasion.

Assistant attorney James Cook said in a telephone interview the decison to deny Martin clemency was made because he faces the charges in Hamilton.

Martin, 29, a native of Coldspring, Ky., has been given until Jan. 16 to decide whether to return to Canada or stay and face prosecution for draft evasion in 1969.

Teachers and Trustees Invited To Marathon Bargaining Talks

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Education Minister Thomas Wells has invited school boards and teachers in seven areas to a marathon weekend bargaining session in Toronto to try to avert teacher walkouts scheduled for Monday which would affect 100,000 separate school pupils.

Ministry officials said they contacted some board and teacher negotiators Thursday about the proposed eleventh-hour meeting. The others are to be contacted today.

Mr. Wells is to act as unofficial mediator at the weekend session if both sides in the contract dispute agree to attend.

L. W. Steele, an official in the ministry's supervisory services branch, said Thursday the minister's invitation is being or has been issued to teacher and board representatives in the London and Middlesex, Elgin, Sudbury, Ottawa, Carleton, Wellington and Durham areas.

A spokesman for the English Catholic Teachers Association (OECTA) said teacher negotiators are being advised to accept.

About 4,000 teachers have resigned to back up demands for higher salaries and better working conditions. Students are on a Christmas break and are scheduled to return to classes Monday.

Meanwhile, teachers and boards in some areas held last-ditch meetings Thursday night in an attempt to reach a satisfactory settlement.

In London and Middlesex, the school board held a closed session to decide whether to go to mediation. The board's negotiating committee had proposed Tuesday that provincial mediators be brought in on condition that teachers would go back to work Monday. Teachers said Thursday they would accept mediation but would not withdraw resignations until a settlement is reached.

Sudbury's board also met Thursday evening to elect a chairman and vice-chairman but did not discuss the contract dispute.

In Ottawa, board and teacher spokesmen met for eight hours but failed to reach agreement on money matters. Teacher negotiator Doug Knott said Mr. Well's invitation had not yet been exteded to Ottawa and Carleton and that those areas had not set any date for further discussions.

Watergate Case Nears Conclusion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although the Watergate cover-up trial has ended, except for up to a year of appeals to keep the convicted defendants out of jail, the Watergate trauma itself is not over.

But special Watergate prosecutor Henrf Ruth is looking forward to the day when he can close the office that was spewned by the scandal.

Unfinished business remains, but Ruth said in an interview Thursday he has no intention of trying to extend the terms of the two special grand juries still considering Watergate matters.

The 18-month term of one of those juries expires in mid-February. The other runs out in June.

In San Clemente, Calif., an aide to Richard Nixon said the former president, while "deeply anguished by Watergate," would not comment on the conviction of his former aides, John Mitchell, H. R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman and Robert Mardian.

The four will remain free during the next 30 days while the probation office of the U.S. District Court in Washington prepares a report to Judge John Sirica on how severely the men should be punished.

Sirica has set no sentencing date pending completion of the probation report. Within a month after sentencing the appeals process is expected to go into motion. It is expected to continue for at least a year.

The day after the verdict in the cover-up was returned, there was no sign of the lawyers who had worked on the case from the start.

Chief prosecutor James Neal resigned immediately after the trial to return to law practice in Nashville, Tenn. In an interview there, Neal said he believed Nixon was deeply involved in the Watergate cover-up, but he said President Ford was correct in pardoning Nixon.

But Ruth said his office still is awaiting a resolution of the dispute over access to White House tapes and files left behind when Nixon resigned last August and moved to California. Nixon has sued to block access by the prosecutors.

OUR YEARLY WONDER WINTER

"We may achieve climate but weather is thrust upon us." — O. Henry (1862-1910).

A HAPPY NEW YEAR, EVERYONE!

Can you imagine —
A race without a winner?
A needle without an eye?
A New Year without a winter?
Neither can I.

At first glance winter is an abhorrent, unruly season. All sleet, slush, mud, ice, snow, gloom, gray skies. Depressing.

But on second glance — admiration begins to take over . . .

Here as I write by the window, falling snow etches trees and the roof-tops of our neighbor's houses. Behold a white vision within minutes. Soon a row of icicles will form along the tall hedge and they will sparkle as brilliantly as clear crystal in the sunlight when the sky is blue again.

Winter spells beauty.

Down the street are school boys just out of school, with skates flung over their shoulders eager to reach the skating rink. Magic is an essence of winter whereby immobility changes into exciting activity. For where but in a land inert with ice and snow, does one skate, ski, curl, play hockey, toboggan, snowshoe, sleigh-ride, sail "ice-boats" across ice-covered lakes or fish from holes cut in its frozen lengths?

Winter-sports-loving Canadians are indebted to winter.

Nor are the creative people forgotten; the artists, musicians, writers with Winter's gift of solitude, whereby the snow prison is unlocked by "art time."

But is "art time" and art important?

"Art is power," states one writer in answer to its importance. "It influences the mind, the nerves, the feelings, the soul. It carries messages of hope"—and transmits the ideals of a community now living, long past or soon to be born — Art is deemed universally important because it helps men to live and to remember."

All of which speaks well for an exhibition of paintings by George Ackerman which the Canadian Federation of Belleville and District are sponsoring at Glanmore House, Hastings County Museum. Tea will be served at the opening, the 2nd of February.

Barbara Cass, a member of the committee says:

"There will be eight paintings on disolay.

A painting of the old Hastings County Court House that now hangs in the Canadiana Room of the Corby Public Library.

'Painting in Canada' published by Harper has an illustration of a painting of Picton Harbour (actual size 20½" x 26½") which is now display in the Bank of Montreal in Picton and which will be loaned to the Museum for this exhibition.

'Early Painters and Engravers in Canada' also published by Harper says that George Ackerman lived at Roslin, Ontario. He was a painter in the 1850s and 1860s and became an art teacher at OSD from 1870-77.

It is thought that he was deaf and unable to speak. He taught drawing and was a special instructor to male students in mechanical drawing and to girls in water-color.

The exhibit will run for 6 weeks, ending March 14..

Engagement

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gannon, of Belleville, are pleased to announce the engagement of their daughter Barbara Ann, to Pierre Paul Aube, St. Claire, Quebec. The marriage will take place in St. Michael the Archangel Church on Saturday, February 15, 1975, at 3 p.m.

Official Unworried

ST. ALBERT, Alta. (CP) — A recent outbreak of German measles at an elementary school didn't upset the medical officer of this Edmonton suburb. Dr. James Howell said: "We like everybody to have German measles at that age, especially the girls.". A childhood bout of the disease helped immunize the youngsters later in life.

Golden Anniversary Celebrated at Napanee

Lieut.-Col. W. D. Graham and Mrs. Graham celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary December 22 with an open house at their former home on the Newburgh Road, three miles north of Napanee.

The couple was married on December 19, 1924, by Rev. H. B. Kenny of Tabernacle Methodist Church, at the home of the bride, 72 Geddes Street, Belleville. They left immediately after the ceremony in a borrowed model T Ford along the gravel No. 2 Highway during a sleet storm and had a flat tire just outside Kingston.

A long-time militia officer, Col. Graham enlisted in the 49th Hastings Rifles, C Company from Wallbridge in 1912. He served overseas with the 47th Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force from Aug. 16, 1916 until June 6, 1919. On his return he served with the Princess of Wales Own Regiment in Kingston from 1924 until 1946. During World War II he was a senior commander with the Veteran's Guard of Canada, in charge of prisoner-of-war camps.

Col. Graham became an optometrist after World War I, practising in Kingston from 1921 to 1931. In 1931 he moved to Napanee where he continued to practise, with the exception of the six war years, until 1970.

Mrs. Graham, the former Norma Nicholson, was an elementary school teacher, beginning her career at Van Kleek Settlement near Bancroft in 1914. She taught subsequently at Milltown and at Queen Mary School in Belleville.

After World War II, Col. and Mrs. Graham moved to Camden East township, where they still live.

IMPORTANT CHANGES
CANADA PENSION PLAN
EFFECTIVE JANUARY 1st, 1975

Equal Protection for males and females

Survivors and dependents of female contributors also to be eligible for benefits.

Several changes were recently made to the Canada Pension Plan. These will result in substantially increased monthly benefits for 1975 and subsequent years. There are other important changes, too. One of these is equality for the spouses and dependent children of male and female contributors.

This means that for female contributors, in addition to being eligible for a retirement pension and disability protection for themselves, and a death benefit payable to their estates, as has been the case in the past, their spouses and dependent children are now eligible for benefits as follows:

Benefits for Surviving Spouses
A monthly pension payable to the widower who at the time of the death of the contributor is over 35 years of age, or under 35 years of age but is disabled or has dependent children; that is, a benefit similar to that which has always existed for widows.

Benefits for Orphans
A monthly benefit payable to unmarried dependent children under 18 and to unmarried dependent children between 18 and 25 attending school or university on a full-time basis.

NOTE:
In order for survivors to qualify, the contributor must have died in January 1968 or later and must have contributed for the minimum contributory period, which is three years for deaths occuring before January 1, 1975.

Benefits for Children of Disabled Contributors
A monthly benefit payable to unmarried dependent children under 18 and to unmarried dependent children between 18 and 25 attending school or university on a full-time basis, where the contributor concerned is in receipt of a CPP Disability Pension.

NOTE:
In all cases, it is necessary to make application for benefits. If such applications are approved, payments can only be made currently—that is, from January 1, 1975. No payment can be made for any period prior to that date.

Other Changes:
- You no longer have to retire to obtain your CPP retirement pension at age 65.
- CPP retirement pensioners may work without having their earnings from January 1975 onwards reduce their pensions.
- The earnings ceiling—that is, the maximum amount on which contributions can be paid and on which benefits can be calculated—is being raised to $7400 in 1975 and to $8300 in 1976. The initial amount of earnings, on which you are not required to contribute, will be $700 in 1975.

MAXIMUM MONTHLY CPP BENEFITS
Effective January 1975

Retirement Pension	$122.50
Disability Pension	$139.35
Surviving Spouse's Pension—under 65	$88.31
over 65	$81.67
Orphan's Benefit	$37.27
Disabled Contributor's Child's Benefit	$37.27
Death Benefit (Lump Sum)	$740.00

Wife's Secret Affair Keeps Marriage Going

Dear Ann Landers: I'm sure my problem is a common one but no one has ever had the guts to write to you about it. Here goes.

I love my husband very much. Our marriage is great except for when it comes to sex. He is unable to satisfy me after four years of marriage. Please don't get me wrong. I'm not a nymphomaniac. Just a normal 27-year-old.

Because of this I am having an affair with a great guy who has the same problem with his wife. Our relationship is purely sexual. Neither of us wants to hurt our families. All we want to do is enjoy all aspects of life.

Since I DO love my husband, I would like to pass on to my husband my lover's techniques for turning me on. Our marriage would then be complete.

The problem is how do I teach him without arousing his suspicions? Is it worth the chance?—Loving But Not Adequately Loved

Dear Loving: Most love-making "techniques" are instinctive. People with imagination think of them on their own. Don't be afraid to guide your husband subtly. But for heaven's sake, don't come up with too many new ideas all at once.

Dear Ann Landers: This past week my grandson was suspended from school (he's a 10th-grader) because he arrived on Monday morning so drunk he couldn't see straight. He fell out of his seat. Just as someone was about to help him off the floor he got sick and vomited all over the room.

When my daughter-in-law was called by the principal to come and take her son home she said "Thank God he's not on drugs."

The boy's dad phoned that evening to tell me about the incident. He was greatly annoyed because the school didn't "handle it better." He thinks it is their problem and instead of sending the boy home and suspending him for a month they should have offered him counselling.

In the meantime, my son and his wife see nothing wrong with a 10thgrader getting a few kicks from alcohol because "after all, it's not against the law, and we have a few cocktails every night at home before dinner."

Will you please print this letter and express your views? If my college-graduate son and his wife have such ideas, other so-called "educated" people in your reading audience might also benefit from what you have to say.—Grandma

Dear Grandma: So alcohol is better than drugs, eh? Doesn't that foolish woman realize that alcohol is a drug—and the most abused of all?

Your grandson is going to have a very difficult time in life unless someone gets to him with help. His parents sound like a couple of losers. I know the type. They expect the school to do the job they failed to do. Moreover, they are setting a very poor example by their own behavior.

Suggest to your college-graduate son that he put that boy into therapy at once. A 10th-grader who arrives at school drunk is in very serious trouble.

Dear Ann Landers: My cousin who lives in England tells me there are about 500 abortions performed in that country every week. (She is a nurse and has access to the figures through her husband who is a health statistician.)

Surely these are not all English women. Where do they come from?—T.L.

Dear T.L.: Of course many English women are included in that number but a large percentage of abortions in England are performed on West Germans, French and American women—in that order.

Frustrated Lovers Wanted for Murder

BOMBAY (CP) — The two-year-old women's lib movement in the Himalayan kingdom of Nepal has taken a bizarre turn.

Manju Kumari, an 18-year-old girl of Biratnagar, has been charged with killing her parents, two brothers and a sister for their refusal to accept her boy friend.

Police say Manju was going steady with Shiv Narain, a college student, and wanted to marry him. But her parents and other members of the family ruled that the marriage could not take place as Narain belonged to a different caste.

Frustrated and angry, Manju and Shiv allegedly hatched a plot to do away with Manju's entire family.

The Nepalese weekly Rashtrapukor says the lovers are wanted for poisoning the victims. Police in New Delhi, Bombay, Calcutta and other Indian cities have begun a hunt for the alleged killers.

The tragedy is seen by elderly Nepalese as a heinous crime. Many citizens of Biratnagar have appealed to the government to track down Manju and Shiv.

But many young people in Nepal and India view the crime as the result of excessive parental authority, especially over girls.

Naresh Thapa, a college student in Kathmandu, capital of the mountain kingdom, blamed it on "a society which does not tolerate its women choosing their husbands."

Rupwati Adhikary, wife of a Kathmandu businessman, has asked the Nepalese government to show mercy to Manju and her lover.

"This is the way many responsible people interested in the modernization of our nation feel," she said.

Mrs. Adhikary said the Biratnagar murders will not slow down the movement for the emancipation of women as some women's lib campaigners fear.

"On the contrary," she said, "parents who exercise too much control over their daughters now will relax their grip. I say this after talking with many of them after the tragedy."

'Creative Aggression Good for Marriage'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Creative aggression is not, as it sounds, thinking up ingenious new ways of fighting.

It is, in itself, a new way of fighting, a way that a Vancouver clinical psychologist is using to help couples derive some benefit from their aggressive tendencies.

But what of the old maxim about controlling one's temper?

It merely leads to explosive violence, overwhelming frustration and marriage breakup, says Dr. Lee Pulos who teaches the techniques of creative aggression.

"People who fear conflict store up their anger—store it up and store it up until, balooey, some gets hurt or killed.

"People who are basically conflict-phobic, who fear conflict, need a technique to mobilize their aggression."

Dr. Pulos tries to provide that technique through his workshops in fair fighting.

"Fair fighting is really fighting in slow motion," he said. "You ritualize aggression to allow for change to take place."

Dr. Pulos gave a typical example of where fair fighitng could be useful.

A man comes home after a hard day at the office and is greeted by a late supper and screaming children. He blows up at his wife and his wife responds in anger. After a screaming exchange of insults, the evening ends in strained silence.

But in fair fighting, things are different, said Dr. Pulos.

First of all, the wife can realize that the husband is only letting off steam and no response is required. Or she can blow up herself.

Insults can be hurled back and forth and anything can be dragged in as long as it has not been designated out-of-bounds for fair fighting. Then, when the anger and frustration is relieved, the couple sit down to discuss changes.

"You cannot fight fairly when you're mad," he said.

The fair-fighting discussion has rules. Only one issue can be discussed at a time and each person must repeat what the other person says to make sure there are no misunderstandings. And each person gets a chance to speak in turn.

"Aggression can have a very bonding effect on couples whereas hostility can be a weakening thing," said Dr. Pulos.

"Yelling and screaming can be very creative. I knew one couple who purposely bought cheap china so that when they became angry they could throw it at one another."

"They'd go through a set of china a month."

Law Society Appoints First Women Benchers

TORONO (CP) — Reginae Tait of Toronto and Roseanne Sutherland of Sudbury are the first women named benchers of the Law Society of Upper Canada since its incorporation in 1822. They also are among the first four persons other than lawyers to be appointed to the bench, the society's management body.

J. D. Carrier of Toronto and Noel Ogilvie of Grimsby are the other lay benchers, who have the power to disbar or punish lawyers or refuse admission to the society.

The Law Society Act was amended a year ago to include lay persons as benchers, an unpaid position.

Mrs. Tait is a former president of the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire. Mrs. Sutherland works with the Council of Women and the Canadian Red Cross. Mr. Carrier is a shoe company executive and Mr. Ogilvie is with a construction firm.

Doris Clark

Winter Poetry Rings Bells of Memory

Catherine Buckaway, whose book of miniature poetry has won the attention of the Canada Council, as well as the Carling Community Arts Foundation, has given us free leave to share her lines with our readers.

This one about winter will probably ring bells (though perhaps not sleighbells) for most us:

WINTER
FIRST COLD WINTER NIGHT — the hint of snow and ice ...
The winter wind is blowing;
across the chill sky northern lights
Winter:
growing out of blizzards landscape of snow
the sound of sleighbells and laughter.
In the snowdrifts covering the prairie ...
winter

Dear Doris: I am at the ripe old age of 25. I have never been married because I haven't found "Mr Right". Nowadays, from what I understand, sex is considered to be part of a relationship with a man.

What I'm worried about is my reputation. For example, I met this one guy. We hit it off perfectly, then we went to bed. Now I feel that all he wants is sex. I don't want to ask him how he feels because he might think I'm being possessive. Should I give in on a first date — or even before marriage — or not?

Confused.

Dear Confused: Your dilemma is shared by many young women. The problem with sex before marriage is that it does create these doubts and barriers. It also created feelings of guilt.

Sex on first dates could lead to promiscuity so I'd say a firm "no" to that. As for sex within a deeper, more meaningful relationship, you've got to make up your own mind. Physical satisfaction in itself is not worth while. Think about it carefully and don't agree if you think it is going to make you feel less respectful of yourself as a person.

Dear Doris: I have a five-year-old son, he is bedwetting. His problem is deep sleep; he can't wake himself up to go to the bathroom. I tried waking him up but it doesn't work. Help Please!

Dear Help: About 10 to 15 per cent of children do wet their beds after the age of four. Many of them just never attained bladder control.

Usually bedwetting is considered an indication of some kind of upset emotionally If there is disharmony in your home, or if you scold him too much for misbehavior, his system may react with the bedwetting.

Then there is the child who sleeps very heavily anyway. He is so relaxed he just lets everything go!

If your doctor finds no physical problem, protect the mattress with a plastic sheet, resign your self to diapers and extra laundry for a while. If nothing works, ask your doctor to direct you to psychotherapy.

Mass Media Limits Women's Role

NEW YORK (Reuter) — The mass media are among society's greatest oppressors of women and even the English language itself excludes women, a conference of women in communications was told Sunday.

Women are "unwelcome intruders in mass media where men form a monopoly," ABC television producer Marlene Sanders told the 500 women attending the meeting.

She said that images of women portrayed in the media are "severely" limited by the imaginations of men.' They are shown as prostitutes, victims, an occasional ingenue, "but we are many things in this life including governor (Ella Grasso of Connecticut) and lieutenant-governor (Mary Ann Krupsak of New York), but you'd never know it from the media."

Alma Graham, a dictionary executive editor, with McGraw-Hill publishers which recently issued guildelines to eliminate sexism from their books, said: "The English language excludes women."

"The noun is man and the pronoun is he but man is not the entire human race," she told the conference, sponsored by the New York University School of Journalism and the Media Women's Alliance.

Words like "poetess" and "aviatrix segregate women from the mainstream of activity and trivialize their contribution, she said.

"Language affects the way we are treated and only when people understand the way it limits perception can we truly have equal opportunities.'

AROUND TOWN with LANA ROBINSON

(. . . an advertising feature designed to keep you better informed of what's new around town.)

A Great Year for Downtown

Murray Atkinson, our Front St. guru, has a few predictions for the coming year regarding the future of the merchants of our downtown core: in brief, things look 'go' and 'great'. Murray says there is definitely a new spirit of enthusiasm and commitment on the part of the downtown businessmen. He says that patrons of shopping downtown have illustrated their faith in the downtown area and that the merchants are encouraged by this and will take up the cause with greater vigor. That's the kind of spirit with which to enter a new year isn't it? and rest assured, Murray will be right in there doing his part. Good luck to Belleville's downtown in '75.

An Apology

The Booth family of Booth's on the Market Square got quite a shock last week when they read my column and found out that they had lost the eldest member of the Booth family quartet who run the business and he had been replaced before their very noses with somebody else. I had eliminated Gordon who is the general manager of the company. Mr Booth, however, showed his good humor and sportsmanship by laughing at my error, which I appreciate. Once again, my apologies Gord.. But no one is going to apologize for the great January clearance which Booth's are now offering. Everything in the store is on sale including the fine appliances by Maytag and Simplicity and the superb Quasar television sets. That's really a sale as you'll see when you visit Booth's now.

What a Number!

968-3032 — 968-3032 — 968-3032 . . . I'm repeating this number because it's definitely a number worth repeating, and filing at your house if you have used anything in good condition which you'd like to sell. This is the number for the Mary-L Boutique on Highway 2 just past Towers. They have plenty of things for you to see and buy and plenty of space for you to walk around in while you're looking. But they'll take that lovely children's coat which doesn't fit anyone at your house anymore, sell it for you, and if they don't sell it by the end of three months, they'll donate it to charity. This is a great idea in merchandising and the great thing about it is that everyone benefits. Keep this number and use it.

Avis at Hand

We all know the name of Avis when it comes to the car rental business. And we should all know that we have an Avis Rent-A-Car outlet close at hand — Ed's Esso, 112 Station St. Renting with Avis means you'll have all the resources available to you of this well-known and reputable company; it also means you'll have a choice of the size of car you want too from large to economy, with special weekend rates. Esso is a well-known company in oil circles and with consumers of gasoline products and so is Avis in its field. Put them together and what do you have? Ed's, that's what!

Attention Ice Fishermen

Bob Blaind of Bob's Sports and Repair, 46 South Front St., tells me that they are catching fish in four feet of water through the ice on Moira Lake. And really catching them! He also predicts that we are going to have some cold weather so that we'll have many spots from which — or through which to fish. And that means you need ice-fishing equipment such as ice augers, jigs and jiggers, snowmobile clothing to make sure you're warm and cosy, ice hut heaters, not to mention that all-important ingredient: MINNOWS. Bob says he can give you everything you need except the fish. Take him at his word and go catch yourself some

Seeing Is Believing

I can tell you about how good the service is at Trenton Optical until the cows come home or 'til the swallows come back. But that's really not going to mean all that much unless you go and see for yourself. Trenton Optical offers a complete optical service and can even arrange an eye examination for you from a reputable specialist. You need no appointment to visit Trenton Optical. And because this is an independent firm, the only one in the area, you have a selection of glass frames from many different firms and at prices that are better than competitive. But as I said, these are just words. If you need glasses, go and see Trenton Optical and then you'll believe too.

A Great Product

I've mentioned before that ServiceMaster is now in a great partnership locally with the G. H. Woods Company. You have the benefit of the varied and effective lines of home cleaning products which both these companies have developed. One such product is called ICE-OFF, a Woods product which is a pellet to melt ice. But this product has certain advantages over salt: it doesn't track in like salt and it doesn't kill grass and shrubs, but acts like a fertilizer. This product is available in 10 pound packets from the ServiceMaster retail outlet at the rear of 179 Pinnacle St., across from the Market Square.

Complete Service

You've heard me mention the complete printing service of Richard Ellis Printing, 10 Fahey St. many times. The motto of this printing establishment is "If it's printable, we'll print it". And that's true. Letterheads and envelopes, business forms, stationery, brochures, grocery bags, advertising folders, menus — anything that you could possibly want printed. And there's art service available too. Printing is one thing, but quality and good service are other things. You get all three with Richard Ellis.

Cruising in Style

Many of you are undoubtedly going to take your sun-starved bodies and souls on a cruise to the sun lands shortly. Well, you'd better take some cruisewear from Jean Smith's West Wind Boutique at Actinolite with you. That is, if you're interested in looking as smashing in your clothes as you do in your tan. Jean has fantastic imported casual and formal wear, not to mention her bathing suits and lounge wear. You'll have a smile on your face and you'll cause a few smiles yourself, with some help from the tasteful collection of cruisewear at Jean Smith's. Cruise up there now before your cruise.

An Expression of Appreciation

You can sometimes tell, I hope, how much freedom some of the advertisers in this column give me because of the way I write about them. I say things about them that their own modesy would prohibit. One such advertiser is the Four Seasons —This hotel gives a great deal to this area and I for one am certainly glad it's in our town. Perhaps it's a while since you visited it, or maybe you think the Mad Mechanic is still just for kids. Well, why not go and find out what's new at the Four Seasons, or even just what's old? It's a nice experience anyway you take it.

Everybody's Working

That's a comforting thought to know that when you deal with a firm, everybody's working to help you get what you need done. And when you deal with the W. Frank Real Estate Co., which has eleven offices in southern Ontario, everybody can get into the act to help you find or sell property. W Frank has a number of offices in our area, including the one at 243 North Front St. So when you list with them, you're listing with a whole lot of other offices too. You didn't know that you were so important did you?

Treasury Board Now Facing Wage Talks with 155,000

OTTAWA (CP) — Treasury board negotiators will be seeking new contracts in 1975 with about 155,000 workers—about two-thirds of organized employees in the public service.

The talks will be held amid increasing militancy in the public service. Among those seeking contracts will be several groups that have held legal and illegal strikes.

In 1974, when government and union bargainers negotiated average annual pay raises of 10.8 per cent, there were major illegal strikes involving postal workers and airport firefighters as well as unprecedented rejections by employees of tentative agreements.

Employees in 36 bargaining units in the public service will be seeking new contracts in 1975.

Among them are 35,000 letter carriers and inside postal workers, 2,500 electronic technicians, 1,500 airport firefighters, 2,700 dockyard workers, 2,000 primary product inspectors and 2,100 air traffic controllers, all of whom have held previous strikes.

Another 47,000 clerks, 15,000 stenographers and secretaries, 19,000 general labor and trades workers, 3,100 teachers, 8,200 postmasters and 1,100 radio operators will be looking for new agreements governing pay and working conditions.

The laborers and radio operators held scattered illegal walkouts in 1974.

In 1974, the government negotiated agreements with 35 bargaining units covering 101,000 employees. Only one—affecting the primary products inspectors—was agreed to after a legal strike.

Most federal employees also received $500 cost-of-living increases in annual pay rates, dating back to April 1, 1974.

As 1975 begins, the government is negotiating with 23 bargaining units representing 46,000 workers, including the laborers and tradesmen.

226 Hurt In New York Rail Crash

NEW YORK (AP) — The engineer of a Penn Central commuter train apparently failed to heed a signal Thursday and crashed into the rear of the train ahead, officials said. About 226 persons were injured, but only four were admitted to hospital.

A railway spokesman said a train from Hartsdale had stopped north of the Botanical Garden station in the Bronx, about 16 miles north of Grand Central Terminal, and was starting ahead when it was struck from behind by a train from North White Plains.

Most of the injured among the 1,500 passengers on the two trains suffered facial cuts or broken noses when they struck the windows or seat backs.

The impact of the crash caused four of the last five cars on the Hartsdale train to be derailed but they remained upright, the railway spokesman said. Earlier the railway had said nine cars left the tracks.

Forty other trains, carrying thousands of commuters from the affluent Westchester County and Connecticut suburbs, were delayed 90 minutes when power was shut off to allow rescuers to work on the tracks.

David Yunich, chairman of the Metropolitan Transportation Authority, said the accident was caused when the engineer "apparently ran a signal further up the track at 35 miles an hour and tried to brake."

Crippling Rail Strike Now Possible in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The threat of an economy-crippling rail strike in the United States this month became a possibility Thursday as an agreement between the railways and the Sheet Metal Workers Union expired.

Expiration of the agreement Jan. 1 freed the union to call a strike by its 5300 members on 14 days' notice. The union already has exhausted all mediation procedures under the Railway Labor Act and apparently would not be subject to the 60-day cooling off period that act requires before strikes can occur.

The union has not yet said it would strike, but its general vice-president for railways, J. W. O'Brien, said Thursday the union is prepared to call selective strikes starting Jan. 24 if its dispute with the railways is not settled quickly, Dow Jones reported.

O'Brien declined to say which railways might be affected but said he had "four or five" under consideration, Dow Jones reported.

O'Brien was not available for comment on the Dow Jones report, and his office declined comment.

Three Killed

ALLISTON, Ont. (CP) — Three Mississauga, Ont., brothers died Thursday when their car was struck by a CP Rail freight train near this community as they returned from a skiing trip.

Police said Hans Nielson, 24, and his two brothers Henning, 20, and George, 16, were killed when their car was struck at a rural crossing not marked by flashing lights.

Alliston is about 20 miles southwest of Barrie.

Big Family Life-style Protects from Cancer

NEW YORK (AP) — Some aspect of the life-style of small families may play a role in the cause of Hodgkin's disease, it is suggested in a study by the Harvard School of Public Health and the U.S. National Cancer Institute.

The researchers reported that a study of the distribution of Hodgkin's cases and of the general white population in the Boston, Baltimore and Washington, D.C., areas revealed a consistent increase in risk of the disease as the number of children in the family decreased.

"We're the first to speculate on this," Dr. Philip Cole, associate professor of epidemiology at Harvard, said Thursday. "But we really have no idea as to the reason."

The study, reported in the latest New England Journal of Medicine, began as an investigation into a reported link between tonsillectomy and Hodgkin's disease, a cancer of the lymph system, an association suggested by researchers at the New York state health department.

The study concluded:

"At present we can make no judgment about whether tonsillectomy increases the risk of development of Hodgkin's disease."

Further study is planned, Dr. Cole said in an interview, examining such factors as birth order and internal family factors.

Firm Owners Charged After Fire

TORONTO (CP) — Monek Micner, 64, of Toronto, and son, Manus Aron, 26, owners of Lorraine Leather Exclusives, were charged Thursday with conspiracy to commit arson in connection with an explosion and fire which caused about $100,000 to their downtown store Monday night.

Herbert Taylor, 22, and John Figliomeni, 28, both of Toronto, have also been charged with arson and conspiracy.

Work 2 Days

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — About 6,300 workers at passenger car plants of Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. in Talbotville, Ont., and Oakville, Ont., began two days of work Thursday following a 12-day, paid Christmas vacation and prior to three weeks of layoffs.

Vatican Urges Reconciliation Between Christians and Jews

NEW YORK (AP) — The Vatican called Thursday for specific steps aimed at developing "better mutual understanding and renewed mutual esteem" between Christians and Jews.

Conditions now are in sight for achieving a "new relationship" and "deep fellowship" said the Vatican's unity secretariat in a document obtained here offering guidelines for seeking that goal.

Various actions were urged, including:

Increased theological dialogue, greater teaching and preaching attention to shared scriptural and worship traditions modified approaches to commonly miscontrued New Testament passages and joint work for social justice.

The "spiritual bonds and historical links" make closer relationships obligatory, the document says.

However, to the disapproval of some Jewish leaders, it also says in connection with mutual dialogue that the church by nature "must preach Jesus Christ to the world" and adds:

"Lest the witness of Catholics to Jesus Christ should give offence to Jews, they must take care to live and spread their Christian faith while maintain ing the strictest respect for religious liberty. . . ."

Rabbi March Tannenbaum, co-secretary of the International Jewish Committee for Interreligious Consultations, welcomed the document as generally "constructive and timely" and said implementation of its guidelines would mean a "revolution in esteem between Catholics and Jews everywhere."

But he added that it also "contains regrettably certain formulations that no self-respecting Jewish person can live with in good conscience. . . ."

He said that while Jews acknowledge "the right of Christians to evangelize, the assertion of a conversionary intention within the framework of guidelines for the improvement of Catholic-Jewish relations cannot but cast doubts about the motivations of the entire program."

The Vatican guidelines, issued by the church's Christian unity secretariat which last October was expanded to include a special commission on Judaism, seek to implement in practice policies set by the second Vatican council.

Sentence Increased

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Appeal Court has increased the sentence of a 15-year-old boy convicted of the attempted murder of a Peterborough, Ont., policeman to 18 months in a reformatory and two years probation.

The boy was originally sentenced by Mr. Justice Patrick Galligan last March 26 to seven days in jail and three years strict probation.

Oil Firms' Practices Still Being Probed

OTTAWA (CP) — After almost two years of investigation the federal government is still trying to find out whether the big oil companies are enhancing their profits through price fixing and other illegal practices.

An investigation under the Combines Investigation Act was ordered in February, 1973, to determine whether the major oil companies should be prosecuted for conspiring to set prices or for improper business practices involving holders of service station franchises, a consumer and corporate affairs department official said Thursday.

So far no charges have been laid, the official said. But it is signifiant that the investigation is continuing, he said.

The investigators are prohibited from discussing their activities for fear of exposing suspected offenders to unfair publicity or alerting them to destroy evidence of wrongdoing, the official said.

He said the investigation covers "the whole cometitive situation in the industry," including the high degree of vertical integration which results in ownership or control by one company of oil wells, refineries, distribution facilities and service stations. It includes specific inquiries into complaints of price fixing.

The official said it also includes recent allegations made by service station and parts and accessories dealers that some oil companies encourage retail gasoline price wars and accept kickbacks from parts dealers on sales to service station operators.

The investigation began after the Consumers' Association of Canada said in a five-age complaint that it suspected the big oil companies of price fixing. The comlaint was based on identical price increases made by the oil companies in late 1972 and early 1973.

Rates to Drop

TORONTO (CP) — A monthly report prepared by two real estate analysts predicts mortgage interest rates for housing built under the National Housing Act are likely to drop to between 10.5 and 11 per cent during the next year.

Strike Ends

TORONTO (CP) — Air Jamaica, the Jamaican national airline, was to resume its regular service today between Toronto and Kingston, Jamaica after a two-day strike against the airline ended Thursday.

Marcotte: Lower Interest Rates Gobbled Up by Inflation

By COLIN BRUCE

Staff Reporter

Mortgage interest rates will likely drop to between 105 and likely drop to between 10.5 and 11 per cent during 1975, Toronto investment firm Canavest House Ltd. predicted Thursday.

While the drop seems optimistic in light of current rates of 11.5 to 12.5 per cent, Bob Marcotte, president of the Quinte Homebuilders Association, says prospective home buyers will lose more than they will gain by waiting for rates to soften.

Based on the average purchase price of $31,500 carried over 25 years at 11.5 per cent, the purchaser would save $217 a year if the interest rate declined one per cent. In the meantime, by waiting a year for the rate to drop, inflation will escalate the purchase price of the home by $3,150, said Mr. Marcotte.

"People just aren't going to get a better deal by waiting," he said.

"The major concern for the purchaser is the heading off of inflation ... to reduce the spiralling costs of home construction," said Mr. Marcotte.

The one-per-cent or half per cent of one-per-cent drop predicted is not substantial, he said. "It won't make a big difference."

A survey released by the real estate firm A. E. LePage shows new housing mortgage money selling for about 11.5 per cent with fund availability gauged at "limited to good."

Rental and townhouse accommodation mortgaging is moderately higher with ample funds available while presold and resale properties drawing 12 per cent mortgage rates.

Builder loans, industrial and commercial funds are selling for up to 12.5 per cent. Funds in these loan areas are limited, the survey states.

In synopsis, the firm says for the second consecutive month (November and December) "interest rates have lowered slightly."

Mr. Marcotte said the consumer will have to look for mortgage interest rate subsidy.

Barney Danson federal minister of state and urban affairs, said recently in Vancouver that such a subsidy is being considered but nothing firm has been established.

Thief Nabbed

A 23-year-old Marmora man has been charged with break, enter and theft following a robbery at Shannon's Drug Store at 16 Forsythe St early Thursday evening.

Provincial Police at Madoc have charged Timothy Theodore Auger of 41 Victoria Ave.

Police reported William Shannon part owner if the store, had closed the establishment at 6 p.m., and shortly afterwards observed a man looking through the front door.

From his vantage point on the street, Mr. Shannon told police he watched as the man broke the door, entered the building and then left. It was later discovered about $50 in small bills and change had been taken from the store's cash register, police said.

Ski Course Popular

A few vacancies still remain for youngsters who want to participate in the Belleville recreation department's 1974 ski instruction program.

The program open for beginners Saturday at Batawa Ski Club and is scheduled to run eight weeks.

Tuesday nights instruction will be held for advanced students.

Age range in the program is 10 to 18 years.

The beginners' class was organized for a maximum of 60 students. But, a recreation department spokeman said Thursday, three vacancies still are available. Interested students should phone the department.

All 40 student slots in the advanced are taken.

Saturday for beginners on the 9 a.m. — 12 noon course a bus pickup is run by the department with stops at the YMCA, the recreation offices on Pinnacle St. and Quinte Secondary School.

Vandals Sought

City police are investigating an incident of vandalism at Western Tire and Auto Supply in the Belleville Plaza about midnight Thursday night.

Chief Douglas Crosbie said vandals broke five windows in the north door of the garage. Damage was estimated at $50.

A Perfect Day

Silhouetted against dazzling sunshine, these youngsters were among scores who had a perfect winter's day for sport on the West Zwick's toboggan-ski slope Thursday. The weather — cloudless and crisp — drew many into the brisk outdoors. Later, sky clouded over, bringing snow to Belleville area early today.

Legal Honor Received Despite Political Ties

The lone Queen's Counsel award granted in the Belleville area this year goes to one of the oldest family law firms in Ontario.

It's also the second QC awarded the same family of lawyers in as many generations.

The award to John D. O'Flynn Jr., was among legal honors given this year by the provincial government with what reports termed "little regard for political ties."

It's a fact worth more than passing note in the Belleville award.

For generations the O'Flynns of Hastings County have produced determined Liberal candidates, campaigners and party organizers — in a political region of almost unshakeable Conservative domination.

The family practice was founded in 1886 by Mr. O'Flynn's grandfather, Francis.

Mr. O'Flynn's father, John D. Sr., joined the firm in 1924. The elder O'Flynn received his QC in 1960 and — after a half century since his law-school graduation — now is also a life member of the Ontario bar.

Mr. O'Flynn, who entered the firm in 1956, has long been active in community affairs. Inevitably, in the family tradition, he also has long been involved in local party politics.

The family's political stance was sown in Madoc more than a century ago in ground where it could also be sorely tested for survival — north Hastings County, still a core area of Conservative support.

Little grace was lost then. There were two labels. Conservatives were Tories. Liberals just Grits.

The intensity of political identity was such in bygone days, that one ancestral O'Flynn felt specific stipulations necessary when he willed money for his community's benefit. He emphasized in his bequest that beneficiaries be selected without regard to race, religion, or "political affiliation."

The family's Liberal tradition is traced to Mr. O'Flynn's great-great-grandfather Edward who moved over to Madoc from neighboring Lennox County in 1842.

The Second QC

John D. O'Flynn is the second member of the law-firm family in as many generations to receive the Queen's Counsel award. He is partner in legal practice that his ancestor first opened in Belleville in 1886.

Lucky Chain Beginning Of Unusual Collection

By HARRY MULHALL

Staff Reporter

Arnold Wessels is a collector who doesn't bother keeping his hobby under lock and key.

If he did, it's likely the key would have one of the most unique chains on the continent.

He has plenty to choose from. Hundreds in fact — from across Canada, the United States, even Europe.

Key chains are what Arnold collects with a determination amounting to dedication. He says he believes it's an unique hobby. At least, he says he has never heard of anyone with a similar interest.

It started five years ago in the basement of his home at 110 West Moira St. Arnold came across an old lucky-charm chain distributed by a Belleville jeweller in 1952. He had just retired from his job in the shipping department of a grocery wholesaler. With plenty of time, he decided to give collecting such curios much more attention.

By that time he was no stranger to collecting.

Some 10 years ago he started gathering match covers.

A recent count showed he had acquired about 2,000. Many he picked up himself. Others came from relatives and friends travelling abroad.

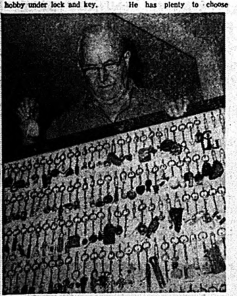
He uses much the same technique with the key chains.

Today he counts 400 key chains in his collection — adorned with a multitude of miniature decorations.

Pride of place, however, still goes to what probably is the plainest of them all — the key chain with his own initials which he bought 50 years ago for his first set of car keys.

Not all the chains are practical, he says. The adornments are so exotic they're too bulky to carry in a pocket.

As for himself, Arnold carries his keys in an undramatic fashion — on a chain in a standard leather case.



A Hobby in Chains

Arnold Wessels adds one more item to what he says is an unique collection — key chains. Since he started hobby five years ago, the retired Bellevillian has collected more than 400 chains from around Canada, the United States and Europe.

Inquest to Be Held Into Train Mishap

A coroner's inquest will be held into the Dec. 20, head-on collision of a Canadian National Railways passenger and freight train which took the lives of two Belleville engineers and a woman passenger.

Napanee coroner Dr. J. D. Alkenbrack told The Intelligencer Thursday there will definitely be an inquest but no date has yet been set.

The collision between the east-bound freight and the Ottawa-to-Toronto passenger train occurred 12 miles east of Napanee at 8.30 p.m. Rescue attempts were hindered as CN personnel, provincial police and local volunteers floundered through deep snow while crossing farm fields to the accident site. The bulk of the 187 passengers were ferried by snowmobiles from the crash site to ambulances which got no closer than 400 yards from the scene of the mishap.

CN and the federal board of transport began an immediate investigation into the accident.

CN's Rideau area manager J. R. Burns said Thursday the investigation is not yet complete. He confirmed that it is "unlikely" results of the CN investigation will be disclosed to the public. "CN results are seldom publicized," he said.

Dr. Alkenbrack refused to speculate when the inquest might begin other than saying, "hopefully it will all be over with by April."

Asked if the proceedings would be open to the public, he said "I wouldn't want to commit myself."

"Some portions of the inquest may be held in camera ... at least the results will be public," he said during a telephone interview from his Napanee medical office.

The coroner said provincial police are still gathering facts on the case. "The investigation is still going on ... may be quite a while with routine aspects," he said.

Early investigation of the crash centred on mechanical functions of the automatic switching apparatus along the line, said a company spokesman.

Dr. Alkenbrack said autopsies have been performed on both engineers but added "I don't want to release specifics" when asked for the cause of death.

"One of the reasons of the inquest is to determine the cause of death," said the coroner.

Stamps Honor Olympic Games

By JIM SMELLE

Staff Reporter

Postage stamps have come a long way in the last decade in Canada. No longer are they the subdued, monocolored pieces of paper. Instead they have become colorful and decorative.

The post office has issued its program of commemorative and special stamps for 1975.

On Jan. 22, three stamps will be issued on Olympic Action, Water Sports, while on March 21, two stamps will come out on Olympic Commemoratives, Sculptures. On April 4, four stamps will be issued on the Sub-arctic Indians.

Famous Canadian writers, Lucy Maud Montgomery, who wrote Anne of Green Gables and Robert Service, who recounted humorous stories of the Yukon, will be honored on stamps issued on May 15.

Party Planned

The Wanderers Snowmobile Club will hold its annual seasonal party on Jan. 12 at 2 p.m. Those planning to attend must pay the $1 admission by Jan. 11. In Stoco, area members may pay their fees to Gerald Johnston or leave them at Masterson's Store. In the Thomasburg area, members may contact Bryan Morton.

Seminar Set

A two-evening seminar, entitled You, the Mentally Retarded and the Community, will be held Jan. 15-16 at Loyalist College from 7.30 - 10 p.m. each night. The event is sponsored jointly by the social planning committee of United Community Services, the Association for the Mentally Retarded, the Ontario Ministry of community and social services and the college.

Hampers Welcome

Students at Centennial Secondary School in Belleville packed 40 hampers with Christmas dinner ingredients for needy families this year. Of these, 25 were distributed to families in Belleville whose names were obtained from the Christmas Sharing project. Another 15 were dsitributed in the Stirling area, where many of Centennial's students live.

Recycling Costly

Collections Continues Despite Market Slump

Collection of waste paper for recycling continues in Belleville while similar projects have been folding around the province.

The Belleville program has been salvaged from a landslide in waste market prices by the company which collect the paper in the city.

John Graham, president of Quinte Sanitation Services Ltd. — the city's garbage collection contractor — says he decided to continue the waste paper pickups despite the drastic slump in a a market demand which one helped offset expenses.

The reason "You hate to stop when there are so many people involved in it. It's a good cause and you don't like to dampen the enthusiasm," said Mr. Graham.

His company provided the pickup service when the Belleville project was re-organized into regular collections. That happened little more than a year ago with Ald. Jean Smith, the city councillor who heads the Quinte area's municipal solid wastes disposal committee.

Ald. Smith has promoted the recycling projects as crucial space savers in municipal dumps — the final repository of garbage.

The plan calls for volunteer co-operation from householders. The sort recyclable paper and bundle it outdoors for the once-a-month neighborhood collections.

The results have varied in volume but run an average 30 tons a month, estimated Mr. Graham.

Costs of the pickup service were to be offset by cash paid by local waste operations who resold it for recycling by paper companies.

Prices peaked to around $20 a ton earlier this year. Then, ventories and a slowing the market crashed as big in economy saw demand decline dramatically.

Current price for the low-grade paper generated by municipal recycling programs now is $5-$6 a ton.

The Belleville project never did cover collection costs — which required about $21 a ton to break even, estimated Mr. Graham.

However, his company will carry on the service while "we see what the market is going to do," hopeful that "it will better itself," he said.

Len Vigodda, president of Container Service Co., Trenton, which buys the Belleville-generated waste, says his company is "fortunate" it can still resell the low grade paper from the recycling project.

But demand for finer paper grades remains non-existent. No improvement in the market — "the worst I've ever seen" — can be expected until stockpiled inventories decrease and the economy improves, he said.

The slump hit recycling project across continent.

"There are very, very few places left still doing recycling," said Mr. Graham.

In Ottawa, municipal authorities even have investigated market possibilities in Japan and South America. A recycling depot in London, Ont. has closed. Toronto still collects about 300 tons of paper a week, although companies are not interested in buying. In fact, the city is contemplating legal action against one contractor who has stopped taking the paper.

In Belleville, collections have continued without halt, running to the normal schedule — the first four Thursday of each month in four separate city zones.

Athlete of Year

TORONTO (CP) — Ferguson Jenkins, already the recipient of several awards as Canada's top athlete had further honors bestowed on him Thursday when he was named Ontario's athlete of the year by the Ontario Sportswriters and Sportscasters Association.

An OSSA spokesman said the voting by sports writers and broadcasters in the province was "heavily-weighted for Jenkins."

The 25 - game winner with Texas Rangers of the American League, who spent most of his baseball career with Chicago Cubs of the National League, is a native of Chatham.

He continues to make his off-season home in the Chatham area.

A distant runner-up in the voting was stock car driver Earl Ross of Alsa Craig, rookie of the year on the National Association of Stock Car (NASCAR) tour.

FERGIE JENKINS

Runner Yvonne Saunders of Guelph and figure skater Toller Cranston of Toronto also figured prominently in the voting.

Terriers Defeat McDonald's

WHITBY, Ont. (RP) — Whitby McDonald's, —coming off a two-week layoff, suffered their fourth home defeat, losing 4—2 to Orillia Terriers in the only Ontario Hockey Association Senior A contest Thursday.

Rick Cornacchia, Hank Monteith, Bob Clayton and Marty Zuchotzki scored for the Terriers. Bill Murray and Carl Ahlsten replied for Whitby.

The game was tied 1—1 at the end of the opening period and 2—2 going into the final 20 minutes.

Bruce Durno went the distance in the Whitby goal, stopping 35 shots, while Lloyd Vaughan stopped 33 shots in the Orillia net.

Orillia picked up six of the eight minor penalties assessed in the game.

Lund Proving Aeros Made a Wise Choice

By DENNIS PASSA
The CANADIAN PRESS

Before the formation of the World Hockey Association, Larry Lund was doing nothing more than marking time in the now-defunct Western Hockey League.

Lund, a centre from Penticton, B.C. had seen his quota af travel—at one point he was traded for the rights to two amateur players, and on another occasion was lent to another team.

In February, 1972, Houston Aeros selected him in the WHA player draft. Lund showed the Aeros they made the right decision by scoring 54 goals and adding 98 assists in his first two seasons with the club.

This season, he shows no sign of letting up. He notched his 22nd, 23rd and 24th goals of the season in Houston's 6-3 win over Michigan Stags Thursday night.

The three goals give the 34-year-old Lund 55 points, just five short of Bobby Hull's league-leading total and three back of Quebec's Serge Bernier.

In other WHA games Thursday, Cleveland Crusaders downed Indianapolis Racers 4-1 and Vancouver Blazers needed overtime to dispose of Phoenix Roadrunners, 3-2.

The Aeros won their fifth consecutive game and their 24th in their last 31 at Houston.

Lund scored the winning goal at 7:34 of the third period, then added another just a minute later to seal the win.

At Cleveland, the Crusaders handed the Racers their 30th loss of the season in 36 games.

"We're trying to play strictly a defensive game," said Indianapolis coach Gerry Moore after the contest.

"What can you say about a team that has lost 30 games."

Richie Leduc led the Crusaders with his 10th and 11th goals of the season.

At Vancouver, Jimmy Jones' second goal of the game gave the Blazers the win in overtime.

He scored the winner at 2:17 when he fired his own rebound past Phoenix goaltender Gary Kurt.

The goals were the first of the season that Jones has scored while the Blazers were not short-handed. He now has five goals.

The victory moved the last-place Blazers to within one point of fourth-place Winnipeg Jets in the Canadian Division. The Blazers are undefeated in their last nine home games.

Voyageurs Nip Hawks

Fight Night in Halifax

HALIFAX (CP) — Gordie McTavish's overtime goal lifted Nova Scotia Voyageurs to a 4-3 win over New Haven Nighthawks in the only American Hockey League game played Thursday night.

Another league game, Springfield at Syracuse, was postponed to allow the Eagles to take on the Soviet Wings in an exhibition game. The Wings won the game 9-1.

McTavish skated around a New Haven defender and lined the puck past Nighthawks' goaltender Sam Clegg after being set up by Peter Sullivan.

Other Nova Scotia scorers in the brawl-infested encounter were Sean Shanahan, Guy Delparte and Richard Latullippe.

Richard Nantais, Dennis Giannini and Bob Cook replied for New Haven.

McTavish was set up brilliantly by Peter Sullivan who took a rebound from his goaltender Ed Walsh, sped the length of the ice and passed to McTavish as he fell.

Cook's goal at 17:37 of the third period tied the game 3-3 and forced the game into the five-minute, sudden-death overtime period instituted by the AHL this season.

McTavish's score came after the Nighthawks killed a penalty.

A series of fights in the third period resulted in game misconducts to Lowel Ostlund of New Haven and Gilles Lupien of Nova Scotia, two 10-minute misconducts and 12 major penalties.

Clegg was superb in the New Haven net as he faced 42 shots, 21 of them in the second period when he robbed Latullippe and Greg Hubick on point-blank shots.

In games tonight, Hershey travels to Baltimore, Rochester plays at New Haven, and the Voyageurs take on the Reds at Providence.

Petes Rebound

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Peterborough Petes scored four third-period goals to dump the London Knights 7-3 in Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A play Thursday before 2,901 spectators.

Petts led 3-2 going into the final period.

Gary McMonagle, Red Laurence and Mike Fryia each scored twice and Stan Jonathan added a single goal as the Petes snapped a three-game winless streak.

Dennis Maruk, Bill Hamilton, and Scott Campbell replied for London.

The Knights led 2-1 after the first period but the Petes got unanswered second-period goals by McMonagle and Fryia 62 seconds apart to go ahead 3-2.

Jonathan and Fryia scored two quick third-period goals to put the game away for the Petes.

The win, which moved the Petes into sole possession of second place, was the first for Peterborough in four meetings with the Knights.

London outshot Peterborough 30-29 and took four of the game's nine penalties.

Bench-clearing Brawl Mars Game at Hull

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A record crowd of 5,101 at Hull saw a bench-clearing brawl Thursday night described Quebec Major Junior Hockey League president Raymond Lagace one of the worst exhibitions he had ever seen.

The fighting started at 7:53 of the third period of a 7-3 win for the Festivals over Sherbrooke Beavers.

The fighting started after an incident in the Sherbrooke zone involving Nelson Burton of the Festivals and Beavers goaltender Nick Sanza.

Burton, who had two majors earlier in the game, raced Sanza for a loose puck. Sanza beat Burton to it at face-off circle. Burton then elbowed the goaltender and three Sherbrooke players jumped off their bench and went after Burton along with Sanza.

The Hull team then cleared its bench and the Beavers quickly followed. The game was delayed 51 minutes.

Legace said there would be action taken against both clubs.

Windsor Delivers

WINDSOR (CP) — Two goals 22 seconds apart late in the second period gave Windsor Spitfires a 4-2 victory over Chatham Maroons Thursday in Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League action.

Scott Miller and line-mate John Tavella scored on the same shift to give the Spitfires a 4-1 lead.

Doug Kozar and Mark Smith scored earlier in the game for the Spitfires. Steve Young and John Bellio replied for the Ma John Bellio replied for the Maroons.

Lefley Like a Tonic For St. Louis Blues

By ROSS HOPKINS
The Canadian Press

Chuck Lefley may be just what the doctor ordered to end St. Louis' case of the Blues.

The 24-year-old centre, obtained Nov. 28 from Montreal Canadiens in exchange for defenceman Don Awrey, accounted for all St. Louis scoring Thursday night as the Blues edged Kansas City Scouts 2-1 in National Hockey League play.

In other games, the Canadiens and Atlanta Flames played to a 1-1 tie, Pittsburgh North Stars 6-3, New York Islanders downed Washington Capitals 5-2 and Boston Bruins fought their way to a 5-2 decision over Los Angeles Kings.

Lefley had only one goal and two assists in 17 games for Montreal prior to the trade. In an identical number of games since the shift of venue, the Winnipeg native has fired 10 goals as the Blues have erased a five-point deficit and now are tied for second spot in the Smythe Division with Chicago Black Hawks, each with 38 points.

Since the deal, the Blues have won 10, lost five and tied two, while the Black Hawks have skidded to an 8-8-1 record during the same period. Both clubs trail Vancouver Canucks by 11 points. The Scouts are 35 points off the pace.

Rookie Wilf Paiement got the only Kansas City goal Thurday late in the second period. The Scouts threatened to tie it in the third, outshooting St. Louis 15-9 in the period, but failing to beat Blues netminder John Davidson

At Atlanta, Murray Wilson's unassisted goal at 5:05 of the final period earned the Canadiens the tie. Jacques Richard scored his 10th goal of the season at the 8:37 mark of the second period for the Flames after earlier being thwarted on a penalty shot by Montreal goalie Ken Dryden.

The tie xtended Montreal's unbeaten string to 15 games and moved the club one-point ahead of Los Angeles atop the Norris Division. The Flames have not lost in their last six games.

CHUCK LEFLEY

Five players shared in the Pittsburgh scoring, including two from Jean Pronovost, as the home club rallied from a two-goal deficit with five unanswered goals in the final 20 minutes.

At Uniondale, NY.., Dennis Potvin scored two goals, his 10th and 11th of the season, and added an assist to pace the Islanders.

It was the seventh consecutive loss for the expansion Capitals and lowered their record to 3-31-4. Thev have yet to gain a victory on the road.

The Islanders moved into a third-place tie with Atlanta in the Patrick Division with the victory, 16 points back of first-place Philadelphia Flyers.

Phil Esposito fired two goals, his 36th and 37th of the season, to lift the visiting Bruins to victory in a penalty-filled contest.

Dan Maloney of the Kings and Boston's Terry O'Reilly squared off at 150:2 of the second period and during the fight Dallas Smith of the Bruins was given a game misconduct for joining the battle.

Maloney and O'Reilly went at it again at 6:10 of the final period with the Kings' Dave Hutchison and Ken Hodge of Boston joining in. The game was delayed 13 minutes before order was restored.

A total of 96 minutes in penalties were handed out in the game.

The victory moved the Bruins to within five points of first-place Buffalo Sabres in the Adams Division.

Czech Olympics Defeat Cougars

VICTORIA (CP) — Czechoslovakia's under-23 Olympic team scored a 6-3 win over Victoria Cougars of the Western Canada Hockey League in an international exhibition hockey game before 4,855 fans Thursday.

The Czechs have one tie, one loss and four wins so far in their Canadian tour, with two games to play. They were defeated 5-4 Monday at Kamloops by the WCHL Chiefs, which included players from the WCHL's New Westminster Bruins and the British Columbia Junior Hockey League's Langley Lords.

Jan Zajicek put the Czechs ahead for the first time at 1:59 of the final period and less than two minutes later, Pavel Richter stole the puck at centre ice to score the winning goal.

The Czechs drew a penalty midway through the final period, but excellent fore-checking produced two clear chances and Tomas Dolak made the Cougars pay for the defensive lapse.

Also scoring for the Czechs were Milos Novak, Vincent Lukac, and Pavel Beranek.

Replying for the Cougars, the WCHL western division leaders, were Curt Fraser, Al Hill and Lori Gloeckner.

Cougar goalies Bob Leslie held his club in the game with several spectacular glove saves and had made 18 saves when he was replaced at 9:02 of thesecond period by Lloyd Saar, who made nine saves.

Czech net-minder Miroslav Krasa had to make only 14 saves as the visitors outshot the Cougars 33-17.

On Saturday, the Czech team plays Thunder Bay Twins in Thunder Bay, Ont., and winds up the tour Sunday in Windsor against Windsor Spitfires.

Lancers Aim For Tourney Championship

By MARK BRETT
Sports Staff

he Loyalist Lancers Basketball team will be hosting the Fourth Annual Invitational Tournament this Saturday and if the League play to date is any indication of what is to come, the day long event will be a dandy.

The Lancers although not the winningest team in the league must be the most frustrated having dropped games with scores of 62-61 to Sir Sanford Fleming College of Peterborough, a 78-74 loss to St. Lawrence of Kingston and so on.

Loyalist was beaten out in the final tourney game against Durham College last year and will be out for revenge.

Coach Rob Stinson picks the Durham Lords as the team to beat again this year.

"The other teams have some good scorers but overall I feel Durham has the best team," commented Stinson.

In previous hookups between Loyalist and Durham this season the Lancers lost the first game by a 88-76 score and in the seond game it took the Durham team a full overetime period before coming up with a 70-64 win over the Lnacers.

Coach Stincon feels the team is strong up front with the scoring ability of Jim Sutton, Dave Culmer and Bill Kyle to name a few.

"Jim is just a superb ball player. Any time he's on the floor he's giving 110 per cent," said Stinson. Sutton is currently in the top five in league point standings.

Culmer could possibly be missing from the Lancer's line up on Saturday being a member of the Polaris Snowmobile Racing team who will be participating in the Kawartha Cup races in Peterborough.

Other possible bad news for the host team will be the loss of guards Mike Finigan and Bob Clowater. Finigan will not be returning as he has graduated after finishing up the first semester and Clowater may be out with work commitments.

There will be two new teams in this year's tournament bringing the total to six.
Take 3

The new teams are Conestoga of Kitchener and Georgian College of Barrie. In earlier exhibition games the Lancers were able to come up with impressive wins over both teams. Trent University and Sir Sanford Fleming College will be the other teams involved in the tourney.

There will be a total of eight games played throughout the day with the finalists each playing four games. Each team will be guaranteed two games.

Conditioning will be the all important factor in the winning team's list of weapons.

"The boys are going to have to go out there and run off a little of the Christmas turkey," quipped Stinson.

The action is scheduled to get under way at 9 a.m. with Loyalist taking on Sir Sanford Fleming. Durham and Georgian College will hook up at 10.30 and Trent University will do battle against Conestoga at noon.

Two World Ski Meets Take Place in Canada

World professional skiing, now in its fifth year, makes its 1975 seasonal debut in Canada on January 25-26. The Benson and Hedges International will be held at Collingwood, Ontario, on the Blue Mountain slopes. The second Canadian appearance for '75 will be at Universite de Montreal on February 15-16.

The 16-race pro-series is world-spanning 'with events being held at such spots as Aspen, Colorado and Cervinia, Italy. Competition at each race, and for the series, is fierce, with Jean-Claude Killy and Henri Duvillard, both former French National team members endeavoring to set the pace.

Duvillard is the current series leader with a take of $14,500 prize money. Hugo Nindl, last year's series winner, is off to a slow start and will have a struggle to retain his crown in the half-million dollar '74-'75 contest.

Canadians have not shown great class against the Europeans in the five years since the pro-series began, but Doug Woodcock of Whitby, Ontario finished 16th last year, taking home $9,000 against winner Nindl's $93,200. Doug, at 22, has higher hopes for 1975 and looks for a 10th place overall finish which should more than double his dollars to about $20,000.

Commenting on the courses at Blue Mountain and the Universite de Montreal, Doug says "... the short courses are tougher in some ways, just as interesting to the skiers and usually more challenging, you don't have time to recover, even if you make a little mistake ..."

He forgot to add that they are more interesting for the spectator too!!

The other members of the five-man Canadian team, all young, are looking for big rewards in the future, if not this year. Some day, the aging, ailing Killy and the other European pros may just have to move over for Doug and his teammates, Paul Carson, Damien Lee, Lutz Brode and Derek Robbins. Head-tohead is the way the pros race and the Canadians, known as the Blue Mountain boys, would not want it any other way; it sharpens and prepares them for a bright future.

Share of First Eludes Reid's

Reid's Dairy blew an excellent opportunity of picking up a share of first place, Thursday night when they lost to last place Stinson Construction 5-4 in Quinte Hockey League action.

League leading Cornerstone Builders absorbed their third loss of the season when they dropped an 11-4 decision to third place Belvedere.

Jim Donovan scored twice to lead Stinson to their victory. The win left the Constructionmen with nine points, two short of Belvedere. Kevin Allen, Dwight Rathwell and Bill Goodfellow added singles.

Reid's got two goals from Bob Boyle and a goal and two assists from Jim McKay. Al Ray added their fourth.

Jason Morris scored four times and drew an assist as he led Belvedere to their fourth victory of the year. Eric Johnston had a hat trick and Ron Urch scored twice. Dave Hallam and Harold Townsend scored one each. Ted Waite drew five assists.

Barry Pyear, Paul Paddon, Norm Pope and Terry Pope replied for Cornerstone.

Roberts Leaves Team

Cats in Panthers' Lair

When Belleville Bobcats travel to Pickering's Don Beer Arena tonight to take on the Panthers, they'll be looking for their second Metro Junior B Hockey League win in a row. More important though, if they win it will give them nine victories in their last 12 starts.

A week ago, the Cats handed the Whitby Bruins a 6-3 setback with one of their stronger penalty killing displays all season. Tonight, in order to beat Pickering, they'll have to forecheck as when killing a penalty, but they'll have to keep men out of the penalty box.

The only change in tonight's lineup is a permanent one. Harold Roberts, a 17-year-old from Trenton, has relinquished his defensive position with the Cats to return to his home town and play for Birt's Handy Stand Juveniles.

With Roberts gone, the Cats will still have four defencemen in Neil Turner, Dave Taylor, Wally Dainard and Bob Thompson.

The hole on the Cats' roster sheet could quite easily be filled by former Bobcat, John Sergeant. Sergeant has returned to the area to work as part of his course of study in university.

Three Hours' Practice Each Day

17-year-old Beats All Comers

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — If world champions are forged in the most unusual of circumstances, then Joe Lawrence can already lay claim to future championship status.

At 17 years of age Lawrence has been playing snooker for five years and beating all comers.

"My father had a billiard hall when we lived in Bobcaygeon (Ont.) and I used to play on the tables after hours. It was just a game and I gradually learned the rules and developed skills."

Lawrence's personal life suitcase is covered with stickers from Toronto, Bobcaygeon, Las Vegas and Barrie.

Each sticker represents a part of his life spent in the corresponding locale.

"My father was in real estate and his best friend moved to Barrie so my father's family followed his friend's family to Barrie," he says.

Since his arrival in Barrie in 1968 Lawrence has been Simcoe County champion two years in a row, and twice won the Bob Trodd Ontario Junior Snooker Championship individual high score trophy.

"I won't get any better where I am now unless I play against better players so I have to go to Toronto to get games.

"The top five players in the country are in Toronto; Cliff Thorburn, Canadian champion; Bill Werbeniuk; Eddie Agha; Julian St. Denis and Bob Paquette.

"I would play Thorburn if he gave me a 25-spot. I guess I got lucky when I beat him two games out of four in an exhibition. Maybe he wasn't going all out."

Lawrence says in a matter-of-fact way that everyone has always said from the start that he would be a good player. He enjoys relating this and isn't really bragging.

"George Chenier who was the best player in the history of snooker in my opinion, never had a run of 100 points until he was 16 years old. I had five at age 15."

Lawrence has a special fondness for Thorburn who he believes was responsible for an invitation last August to play at the Canadian National Exhibition.

"Thorburn too says that I am the best player he has ever seen at my age.

"You can tell a good player when there is money on a game and maybe both players have been playing for five hours but the one who lasts is the better player.

"I average three hours of practice a day but once played 18 hours the first day and 19 hours the second day."

Although Lawrence has a trophy won by his team in minor soccer sitting on his trophy table, snooker is the biggest thing in his life. He recently dropped out of high school because he thinks there is nothing in it for him.

There is plenty in snooker for him.

"I have a good chance among 80 guys for the North American Junior Snooker Championship for players age 18 and under which is set for next year."

"In the last five years I missed only three days of playing except for a week I spent in hospital for an operation. Once in Dundalk, Ont., I went to the billiard hall but no one would play for money so I left."

One of the influences in Lawrence's snooker life is Ray Gorman, now his manager.

They met by accident when the manager of a billiard hall here arranged for the pair to get together. Gorman had been transferred from Hamilton, Ont., several months before.

Now Gorman has stopped handling cues and handles more money then he used to.

"I get Joe action and bucks," said Gorman.

Until that Gorman was considered a fairly good player himself.

"When I go into a pool hall I never touch a cue, ball or table," said Gorman. "In the 20 games I have set up for Joe since I came here he hasn't lost one."

Lawrence can't get any games in Barrie because he is known throughout the city and there is no one good enough to play him.

Toronto, is the only place worth it for Lawrence to spend his time.

Gorman can see Lawrence as world champion some day although there is no guarantee of it and championships are good for the ego but are not the essence of the game of snooker which is spelled h-u-s-t-l-e.

Human nature being what it is and considering the highly competitive atmosphere in a pool hall wallets are often almost as iportant tools as cues.

"Joe is a good player because he doesn't choke when there is $100 riding on a game. If he did he would be in a lot of trouble," said Gorman.

Finley Won't Let Go

OAKLAND (AP) — Charles Finley was scheduled to appear in court today to ask that Jim (Catfish) Hunter be thrown back into Oakland A's deep pool of talent.

"It is my opinion that Hunter still belongs to the A's," the owner of baseball's world series champions said after the star of his team's pitching staff last season signed Tuesday with New York Yankees.

"If we win in the courts and the Yankees have played him prior to our winning, they will certainly be liable for tremendous damages," Finley added.

Neil Papiano, a Los Angeles attorney representing Finley in the case, was set to argue in county court today that a baseball arbitrator exceeded his authority in declaring the American League's 1974 Cy Young Award winner a free agent.

The grounds for the unique ruling were that Finley breached Hunter's $100,000-a-year contract by failing to pay $50,000 to an insurance company as Hunter requested.

But in the suit seeking to overturn the arbitration ruling, Finley's lawyer contends the owner would have committed income tax fraud by meeting Hunter's demand.

The right-handed Hunter quickly took advantage of his free agent status, listening to bids from most major league teams before deciding on the Yankees' offer which is reported to total $3.75 million in bonus money, salary, pension insurance coverage and legal fees.

"It was a case where you reach in the cookie jar and get the best cookie you can get," Oakland pitcher Vida Blue said of Hunter's opportunity. "Hunter earned those cookies."

Oakland first baseman Gene Tenace, who lost to Finley in a salary arbitration battle last winter, said:

"It couldn't happen to a better guy. I'm glad he was able to get all he could. But his loss will definitely hurt our club."

Finley won a legal battle with the Yankees following te 1973 season, preventing the club from signing former A's manager Dick Williams.

But A's right fielder Reggie Jackson doesn't give his boss much of a chance this time.

"Charlie can fight it in the courts and it won't mean a thing," he said. "Catfish Hunter will still belong to the Yankees."

Red Army Team Nips Marlboros

TORONTO (CP) — The Central Red Army team of the Soviet Union needed a third-period power-play goal by Vladimir Petrov to defeat Toronto Marlboros of the Ontario Hockey Assolation Major Junior A series 7-6 in an exhibition game before 16,284 fans Thursday night.

It was the fourth consecutive victory for the Soviets on their seven-game tour of Canada.

Left-winger Valery Kharmalov and Vladmir Popov sparked the Russians with two goals each, while Boris Mikhailov, Vladimir Vikulov and Petrov sored the others.

Petrov's goal ame at 49 seconds of the final period while Marlboros defenceman Mike Kitchen was serving a holdover elbowing from the second period.

Goalie Mike Palmateer, recruited from Saginaw Gears of the International Hockey League, a farm club of Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League, had little chance on the goal.

Palmateer played brilliantly along with Kharmalov and Red Army goalie Vladislav Tretiak.

Catfish Hunter's Deal Draws Mixed Reaction

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Will Jim (Catfish) Hunter's record $3.75 million contract with New York Yankees of the American League provide the jumping off point for a new wave of salary demands from baseball's top stars?

A survey of some of the game's biggest names shows there is considerable difference among major leaguers as to how they will be affected by Hunter's lucrative contract.

VIDA BLUE

"It's kind of overwhelming," said Brooks Robinson, veteran third baseman with Baltimore Orioles. "But it won't affect any other negotiations, because this is a freak case. It probably won't push salaries up."

First baseman Steve Garvey with Los Angeles Dodgers, the National League's most valuable player last year, agreed the key factor to be considered was that Hunter was a free agent.

"I don't think his contract will have much effect on my salary negotiations, because I don't have the opportunity to offer my services to anybody else but the Dodgers," Garvey said.

"I'm sure it will bring the problem of the reserve clause out in the open again," said Fritz Peterson, the former Yankee pitcher now with Cleveland Indians. "And there may have to be some changes in the next couple of years. I'm sure the owners are not very happy about it."

However, from the executive side, president Gabe Paul of the Yankees said the Hunter case could solidify the reserve system.

"I think this strengthens the understanding of the reserve clause and what could happen without it."

Vida Blue, one of Hunter's former teammates with Oakland A's and himself once a celebrated holdout against A's owner Charles Finley, was among those who speculated that financially, this may be a breakthrough for all players.

"Bob Gibson, Steve Carlton and Tom Seaver will set the pace in contract negotiating," Blue predicted. "Nolan Ryan, Bert Blyleven and myself are in the next class, and will be demanding a much larger slice of the pie."

A number of others also predicted a salary spiral.

"Hunter's salary should help everybody in baseball," said Yankee third baseman Graig bad outing on occasion, and when he does, he's gonna catch it." 4

Nettles. "I'm looking forward to it helping me a little bit in my negotiations."

A difference of opinion exists as to whether the big contract will put much extra pressure on Hunter.

"Everybody's going to expect a $4 million pitcher every time he goes out there," observed Montreal Expos pitcher Dave McNally. "He's got to have a

GRAIG NETTLES

But Yankee first baseman Ron Blomberg felt there would be no problem. "He's used to pressure. He's been through it all—pennant races, World Series games, everything. He won't have any trouble."

Blomberg also predicted there will be no jealousy problem among Hunter's new team mates.

"The name of the game is to win, and he's a winner. If it rubs off and he makes us into winners, nobody will hold any grudges—you can be sure of that."

Kareem Back to Normal

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Milwaukee Bucks' towering centre, says he is beginning to feel more comfortable. At the same time, he is making opposing Naitonal Basketball Association teams feel most uncomfortable.

Abdul-Jabbar, the Bucks' seven-foot, two-inch pivot, was a standout Thursday night, firing in 52 points—high in the NBA this season—as Milwaukee downed Atlanta Hawks 116-111.

In other NBA games, Detroit Pistons edged New Orleans Jazz 99-95 and New York Knicks outlasted Phoenix Suns 117-113 in overtime.

In the American Basketball Association, the Spirits of St. Louis routed Virginia Squires 112-88, San Antonio Spurs whipped San Diego Conquistadors 120-104 and Memphis Sounds downed Utah Stars 95-88.

"I feel more comfortable now," said Abdul-Jabbar, who missed the first 16 games of the season with a broken hand and an eye injury, and recently was plagued with a strained back.

"Kareem's getting in the groove with his hook shot," Milwaukee coach Larry Costello said after Abdul-Jabbar had tossed in 18 of 29 field goal attempts and 16 of 20 free throws. "He got hot and the guys went to him, which is good."

Abdul-Jabbar's 52 points surpassed the NBA's previous high of 49 this season, by Bob McAdoo of Buffalo Braves, but fell three short of his career high of 55.

Tom Van Arsdale led Atlanta with 20 points.

Despite the home-court victory, Detroit coach Ray Scott was not satisfied with his team's play.

"We just didn't have a good performance," he said. "We have to realize that we're now a first-place team and learn to play like it."

Adams criticized Gillman earlier for his spending habits in around. Adams said he and Gilman will meet within two weeks to discuss Gillman's future.

Oilers' Downs Resigns

HOUSTON (AP) — Dan Downs, Houston Oilers assistant general manager who was thrown out of the Oiler dressing room by coach Sid Gillman earlier this year, resigned Thursday.

In a statement following Downs' resignation, K. S. Adams, owner of the National Football League team, criticized Gillman for Downs' departure.

"It is hard for me to believe that Sid Gillman, after promoting Dan to be his assistant to handle the details of the business and the financial end of the team, would force Dan out," Adams said.

Adams said Gillman had "become so belligerent toward Dan he wouldn't even let him into his office or wouldn't talk to Dan about critical financial matters of the club. . . ."

Gillman, also the Oilers' general manager, ejected Downs from the dressing room after the team's next-to-last NFL season game, a 37-14 loss to Denver Broncos.

"I think Dan stepped out, knowing he would be an issue with Sid," Adams said.

Cream of Rookie Crop

Woods and Lambert Tops in AP Balloting

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Woods, a former quarterback turned running back who once considered a pro career in the Canadian Football League, and Jack Lambert, considered too light to be a standout middle linebacker, have been chosen by The Associated Press as the National Football League's offensive and defensive rookies, respectively, for the 1974 season.

In balloting announced Thursday, Woods, of San Diego Chargers, and Lambert, of Pittsburgh Steelers, easily outdistanced their opposition.

Woods received 52 of a possible 78 votes from a national panel of sports writers, including three representing each of the NFL's 26 teams. Running back Alvin Maxson of New Orleans Saints was a distant second with four votes and guard John Hicks of New York Giants was third with three votes.

Lambert had closer competition in the defensive balloting, attracting 8 votes. Tackle Carl Barzilauskas of New York Jets was runner-up with 14 votes. He was followed by ends Ed (Too Tall) Jones of Dallas Cowboys with 11 votes and John Dutton of Baltimore Colts with nine votes.

Woods, a 6-foot-1, 210-pounder, spent his first three collegiate seasons as a quarterback at New Mexico Highlands, piling up 1,807 yards rushing and tossing 24 touchdown passes.

Then, he transferred to the University of New Mexico and was the leading rushing quarterback in U. S. college ranks, gaining 971 yards on 220 carries and scoring 11 times. He also passed for 869 yards and five touchdowns.

Green Bay Packers picked Woods as the first of their two sixth-round choices in the NFL draft last January, tabbing him as a running back. With most veterans reporting late because of the players' strike, Woods sparkled in pre-season games. But when the Packers' veterans returned, including John Brockington and MacArthur Lane, he saw little action.

Waived by the Packers, Woods was picked up for $100 by San Diego, mainly on the advice of Chargers' assistant, Rudy Feldman, who was Woods' coach at New Mexico.

Woods didn't carry the ball in San Diego's opening game and gained only 21 yards the following week. But in San Diego's third game, he rambled for 157 yards and two touchdowns against Miami Dolphins, and he continued running well the rest of the season.

He finished with an NFL rookie record of 1,162 yards—a 5.1 average, topping the mark of 1,105 set by Brockington in 1971. His total was the second best in the entire league, behind the 1,407 yards compiled by Otis Armstrong of Denver Broncos, and set a San Diego record. In seven games, he gained more than 100 yards.

Woods, who carried 227 times and scored seven times, said: "I thought I had the talent to play some place. At first, I thought about Canada. I knew I wasn't going to give up."

DESIGNER DIES

HAMILTON (CP) — Emil (Pop) Kenecky, 97, designer and custom tailor of hockey goaltenders' pads, died New Year's Eve. Mr. Kensky, a former harnessmaker, catered to National Hockey League stars from the era of Georges Vezina to Ken Dryden.

Canadian Record For Steve Pickell

MONTREAL (CP) — Steve Pickell of Vancouver set a Canadian record for the men's 50-metre freestyle at the fourth annual Pointe Claire International invitational swimming meet Thursday night.

Pickell, a member of the Canadian Dolphin Swimming Club, covered the distance in 25.02 seconds, beating the old mark of 26.10 seconds.

Three Canadian age-class records fell on the opening day of the four-day event.

Frank Kennedy of Montreal set a new mark for the 11-12 age group in the 200-metre backstroke covering the distance in 2:37.37 to eclipse the mark of 2:38 set by Paolo Reoeghiero of Thunder Bay, Ont., last year.

Two other Canadian age-group records were set in relay events and 13 Quebec records were broken and one tied during the competition which continues today.

Leslie Cliff of Vancouver won the women's 400-metre individual medley with a time of 5:09.80 while Jim Fowlie of Vancouver took the men's 400-metre event in 4:39.92.

Gail Amundrud, now swimming out of Vancouver, took the women's 50-metre freestyle with a time of 28.05 with Sylvie Deschamps of Quebec City capturing the women's 100-metre breaststroke in 1:17.93. 4

Peter Hrdlitschka of Vancouver took the men's 100-metre breaststroke in 1:11.77.

Hundreds of Toronto Children Making Good Incomes in TV

TORONTO (CP) — Hundreds of Toronto youngsters are pulling in fat incomes munching, crunching and grinning in television commercials.

"Kids continue to represent innocence and desirability," says Barrie Gordon, vice-president of F. H. Hayhurst Advertising Co. Ltd. "They represent a very powerful emotional vehicle for selling goods."

But it costs about $15,000 to shoot a 30-second commercial and many young television performers are making it more and more expensive.

"Working with kids is an absolute horror show because kids can't be trained," Mr. Gordon said. "It seems every child I know, in front of a camera, turns into an ordinary kid who wants mommy or gets sick or gets tired or bored.

"You can block off Yonge Street for half an hour for a film sequence and then, when you're ready to shoot, have a kid tell you he has to go to the bathroom.

"If you want a kid to cry, you have to look for one with a pouty look on his face all the time, then put glycerine drops on his cheeks because you can't get kids to cry on cue."

The natural orneriness of children is stimulated by the repetitious tasks they're asked to perform.

"We've had commercials where kids have to eat things 200 times a day," said Bernie Morin of J. Walter Thompson Advertising Co. Ltd.

"We had one kid who had to eat cold French fries over and over again—we couldn't keep them warm. He did it with a smile on his face."

In the midst of a filming session, a child sometimes will announce that he can't stand the sponsor's product. Some film crews keep a large bucket beside the child so he can spit out the offensive food between takes, often because he's just too full to eat any more.

Advertisers look for youngsters who are spunky and animated and who have proven their capabilities in front of the camera.

"The one who gets the job is usually the extroverted one who walks in and does something like punch the producer," said Joan Fisher, who runs a children's agency called New Faces.

Advertisers also have to guard against using "overexposed" youngsters.

"In an age when credibility is so important, to use a child who has been associated with another product is soft ground to tread on," said Mr. Gordon.

Why do parents put their offspring through the rigors of bright lights, constant orders and sometimes uncomfortable situations?

They initially are attracted to the business "because of the glory of it all," said Mrs. Fisher.

"They see children on television and they're dying to see their own there.

"But once they start feeling the money involved, they want more and more."

Children are paid the same union rates as adults—$125.90 for an eight-hour day of shooting and residual payments of up to $300 for unlimited use of the commercial for 13 weeks. Youngsters with proven ability often can negotiate a higher salary.

Mrs. Fisher's 12-year-old son Scott made about $20,000 last year from commercials and other television work.

"He made more than his father did, but next year producers might decide he's been overexposed and he'll make only $2,000 or $3,000."

A capable child can make $10,000 a year "without much problem."

Two Old Masters of Comedy On New Year's Honors List

LONDON (AP) — Knighthoods for two old expatriate masters of humor, film comedian Charlie Chaplin and novelist P.G. Wodehouse, headed Queen Elizabeth's New Year's honors list.

The Queen knighted 30 others on Wednesday.

Chaplin, 85-year-old creator of the Little Tramp, was at his home outside Geneva when the honors list was published. His wife told reporters he was very tired and would not see anyone before next week.

Wodehouse, still turning out a book a year at 93 about Bertie Wooster and his valet Jeeves received reporters at his home on Long Island, N.Y. He said the award, after widespread condemnation of him in Britain because the Nazis used some humorous broadcasts he made for CBS while interned in Berlin during the Second World War, "is a graceful act on her part; it closes up the whole thing."

Chaplin has not lived in England since 1914 but has remained a British subject and now will be Sir Charles Chaplin. Wodehouse has not been in England for 35 years and has been a U.S. citizen since 1955. His citizenship will prevent him using his new title.

Chaplin was discovered by a movie producer in 1914 while touring the U.S. in a vaudeville show. His mastery of comic pantomime in such films as The Gold Rush and The Kid made him one of the most celebrated figures in movie history.

He left the United States 1952 at the height of the cold war and swore never to return after his visa was revoked because of accusations of immorality and links with the Communists. Despite his vow, he came back for a visit in 1972 to receive a special Oscar and ovations at ceremonies in Hollywood and New York.

Wodehouse's specialty has been the spoofing of aristocratic English country life between the wars. His prodigious output includes 96 novels, 300 short stories, 500 essays and articles, 18 plays and the books for 33 musical comedies.

"It's extraordinary," he said of the knighthood to Chaplin. "Wasn't he married to too many people? They're always very touchy about that."

Newfoundland Tourist Total Slightly Lower

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — The 1974 tourist season saw a slight drop in the number of out-of-province visitors in Newfoundland as compared with 1973 but most hotels, motels and tourist lodges reported a busy summer.

A spokesman for the provincial tourism department said the industry was down about five per cent in terms of cash receipts below the $100-million level attained in 1973, with the main factor being the high cost of gasoline in the province.

However, the department said the decline in visitors gave the province time to improve and expand facilities.

"The province was far behind in sufficient accommodations and only in recent years has it been catching up with enough facilities to cope with the tourist influx."

At Confederation in 1949, tourism was a minor economic factor to the old British Crown Colony. There was no trans-island highway, few regional roadways, no automobile ferries across the Cabot Strait, no provincial or national parks, no developed historical sites and few museums.

Tourism was foreign to the island with the exception of minor promotional work carried out by a group of businessmen with some government assistance.

Shortly after Confederation, a tourism branch was established and within a few years it became obvious that the relatively new industry needed more attention, investment and administraton.

But it was not until 1973 that the government established a department for tourism to bring together all the elements involved and carry out long-term planning.

The department has five divisions—parks, wildlife, historic resources, cultural affairs and tourist services.

The province's parks, all situated in practically untouched areas, many near the Trans-Canada Highway, are highly popular. During summer months, space is at a premium.

The parks development division is responsible for the maintenance and operation of a network of camping and picnic parks totalling more than 48,000 acres.

Last summer the province had 45 parks in service with 1,465 campsites and 1,230 picnic spots. A recent program has made 14 beaches available for family recreation.

As well, there are thousands of small beaches, brooks, rivers, lakes and roadside stopping points.

Fifteen years ago, statistics showed the tourist industry was worth about $13.5 million. Last year it was $100 million.

Assists Minister

STANDOFF, Alta. (CP) — Les Healy, 29, a former secretary of the Indian Association of Alberta, has been named assistant to Judd Buchanan, federal minister of Indian affairs and northern development. Mr. Healy is a co-founder of Kainai News and Blackfoot Radio and a former Blood band councillor.

Training Hard

HALIFAX (CP) — Physical fitness campaigns are becoming increasingly popular in Nova Scotia and the YMCA has carried them to some unusual quarters, including prisoners at the Springhill medium security institution. Joe MacPhee, director of the Halifax YMCA health club, said prisoners have poor heart endurance because they are so confined and they smoke so heavily. The main recreation among prisoners is weight-lifting.

Computer Watchman Succeeding

VANCOUVER (CP) — Simon Fraser University's computer ombudsman service has passed its first test, proving that human beings have a chance against computers.

The service consists of a panel of computer experts who handle problems involving individuals and computerized firms.

Recently it received a complaint from a woman that a milk company was billing her after payday when her money was gone and then assessing a service charge.

George Herbert of Canadian Forest Products, the ombudsman on duty on the case, discovered that the dairy company was telling its computer to bill customers on a four-week basis.

Therefore, the family received its milk bill on a different day every month and eventually it came after the 15th when the father's paycheque was already spent.

Mr. Herbert said the problem was solved by asking the company to take the family's billing away from the computer and put it into human hands for monthly billing before payday.

"In this case the computer was used—as it is in many cases—as the whipping boy but in reality the computer was only doing what it was told to do," Mr. Herbert said.

COUNTRY LOT WAITING FOR EARLY BUILDING START IN SPRING

On this 1¼ acre building lot just outside of Belleville. Good garden land bounded by many trees of all varieties sets a mood for peaceful country living. An ideal setting for the home builder with plans for something a little different.

THIS SEASON CAN BE SKATING, FISHING AND ICEBOATING OR EVEN FARMING

In the summer enjoy the many recreational possibilities of a home on the water. We have a cosy 2 bedroom bungalow on the Bay of Quinte awaiting new owners that can offer you much in pure beauty and outdoor activity. You may want to add the investment and income possibilities of a 65 acre farm just across the road complete with 4 bedroom farmhouse. Live in one and rent the other or have your guest house or summer cottage just across the road; maybe you have retired parents to look after; many, many possibilities.

Drop in for a visit this weekend or give us a call at 968-6475.

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — Film actor Peter Lawford, 51, was divorced Thursday by his 23-year-old wife Mary, daughter of Laugh In television comedian Dan Rowan.

Miss Rowan, who filed on grounds of "irreconcilable differences," asked for no alimony and waived her rights to inherit from Lawford after his death.

In a split of community property she was given their luxury automobile, their double bed and dishes and silverware which were wedding presents from her father.

The couple were married in October, 1971 and separated in April, 1973.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — William Conrad, the star of the Cannon detective series, will receive the 1974 Bambi Award as the most popular U.S. performer on German television, CBS said Thursday.

The award to Cannon is given by the German television magazine Bild Und Funk. The Cannon series now is broadcast to 50 countries, CBS said.

MESCHEDE, West Germany (AP) — Concert pianist Branka Musulin, 54, a frequent performer in the United States, died of a heart attack New Year's Day, police said.

She was stricken while swimming in a hotel pool in this central German resort town, police said.

In a concert career that began when she was nine, Miss Musulin performed with most of the world's leading classic music directors and orchestras.

Miss Musulin was born in Zagreb, Yugoslavia, into a family of academics and studied music in Paris. She settled in Germany in 1944.

Freedom of the City

Decked out in the Lord Mayor's ceremonial robes, three citizens of Londonderry occupy the Guildhall during a civil rights riot, in The Freedom of the City, Eric Till's 90-minute production of the stage play by Brian Friel. A revealing and moving drama of the terror in Ulster, it stars left to right) Florence Paterson, Mel Tuck and Neil Munro, as three victims categorized as "terrorists". The Freedom of the City is a presentation of CBC-TV's Opening Night, specials from the world of theatre. It will be telecast on the network on Wednesday, Jan.15 at 8:30 p.m.

Sing a Song

Bobby Gimby leads a new musical-variety program, 'Sing A Song' premiering January on the CTV television network. Regulars Allan Bruce, Marie Andre, Sylvia Thorne and the 'Sing A Song' chorus join Bobby and a special guest each week for a half-hour of music and dancing. Check your local CTV affiliate for telcast date and time.

104 Plays Get Awards

TORONTO (CP) — At least 104 plays have been entered in the Chalmers Play Awards for 1974 to be presented Jan. 27 at a meeting of the Drama Bench of Toronto.

This is the greatest number of entries since Floyd Chalmer, a director of Maclean Hunter Publishing Co. Ltd., established the awards three years ago to honor dramatists contributing to the development of theatre.

The drama bench, dramatists and representatives of theatre companies playing new works, will name five outstanding plays of the 1974 season as well as vote on a new award for distinguished service to the growing theatre at a Jan. 15 meeting to prepare for the presentations.

The only non-English contestant is Lavalleville by Andre Paiement and staged by Theatre du Nouvel-Ontario in Sudbury.

Meanwhile, the Multi-Cultural Theatre Association has announced a competition open to Canadian playwrights for any full-length play not previously produced which reflects the part of any woman in building a new life in Canada

A panel of judges will select winners of $1,000, $750 and $500 awards.

Entries must be submitted by April 30.

Liz Taylor Gets Back Treatment

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Elizabeth Taylor has been discharged from Mt. Sinai Hospital after undergoing treatment to relieve pain for a chronic back condition, a hospital spokesman said.

The spokesman said Miss Taylor, 42, underwent special procedures and tests, including an epidoral block. The latter process is used to dull sensitivity in a nerve and reduce pain.

The actress entered the hospital New Year's Day and was reported in good spirits after discharge late Thursday.

She is due to be in the Soviet Union later this month to begin work on a starring role in a movie, The Bluebird

POLAND GROWING

WARSAW (AP) — Poland's population today is 33,700,000, an increase of 700,000 over 1973. Because of an exodus from rural areas, the urban population of what was hitherto a mainly rural country accounts for 54 per cent of the population.

Police Wages In Dispute

TORONTO (CP) — Sydney Brown, president of the Metropolitan Toronto Police Association, says contract negotiations with the Toronto police commission will go to conciliation Monday with a 16.5-per-cent difference in salary offers and demands.

He said the associations wants 20 per cent and the commission has offered Metro's 4,650 policemen 3½ per cent.

However, C. O. Bick, chairman of the police commission, said the ½-per-cent figure is not correct but refused to say what offer had been made.

Tonnage Falls

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Cargo tonnage through the Welland Canal dropped drastically during 1974, despite an extended period of navigation, seaway officials said Tuesday.

Feature Times

AT THE PARK — In Color — This very popular family movie, "Herbie Rides Again", starring Helen Hayes, Ken Berry, and an all star supporting cast, will end on Saturday evening. Show times 2.00, 7.00 and 9.15. Don't miss it. It is the best entertainment in town.

CAN SMOKING AFFECT SEX?

Is smoking dangerous to your sexual health? Science has long known that heavy smoking can cause miscarriage and stillbirth — smoking mothers have a significantly greater number of unsuccessful pregnancies. Now it appears that heavy cigarette smoking may also impair sexual performance, for men as well as women. January Reader's Digest tells why many sex counselors and drug researchers are convinced that a link does exist between sexual response and smoking. Be sure to read IS YOUR SEX LIFE GOING UP IN SMOKE? One of 30 articles and features in the January Reader's Digest. At your newsstand today!

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Saturday, January 4

Aries (March 21-April 19) Don't be too lavish with compliments to one who isn't deserving of them. It will make your mate unnecessarily jealous.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) You'll pay too little attention to instructions that are given you today. Later, when you follow them, you'll only do half a job.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Lady Luck will not treat you nicely if you gamble on something sight unseen. Look before you leap Cancer (June 21-July 22) You'll disappoint others and disrupt their plans if you change your mind at the last minute to beg out of something you promised to do.

Leo (July 23-Aug 22) You'll come up with some pretty nifty excuses when explaining to a friend why you didn't get around to a favor she asked of you.

Virgo (Aug 23-Sept 22) You still don't have as tight a grip on your credit card as you should. It's likely your extravagance will gain the upper hand.

Libra (Sept 23-Oct 23) Tolerance will be required on your behalf at home today or else you'll make issues out of situations that normally wouldn't faze you.

Scorpio (Oct 24-Nov 22) This is not one of your better days for coming up with bright ideas. Sleep on your thoughts overnight and see how you view them tomorrow.

Sagittarius (Nov 23-Dec 21) You don't have sensible sales resistance today. Don't scan the advertisements too closely or you'll make an unwise purchase.

Capricorn (Dec 22-Jan 19) Even if you have to squirm a bit while doing it, tell it like it is. A little white lie won't get you off the hot seat.

Aquarius Jan 20-Feb 19) Try not to commit yourself now to plans with others too far in advance. Something is coming up and you'll want to have an open schedule.

Pisces (Feb 20-March 20) It's still not wise for you to tell a friend of yours about something your instincts warn you to keep secret

Soda Prescription Sounds too Simple

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: A friend of mine has an infection of the kidneys and bladder. She went to a clinic in a nearby town and they told her to take a teaspoon of soda twice a day for a few days when she felt it coming on

It really works, but I wondered if it was harmful in any way. I have it and I am careful of what I eat, and I drink cranberry juice, which was recommended.—Mrs. C.C.C.

The problem of recurring urinary tract infection is not a simple matter, and it requires careful analysis.

For example, is the infection in the kidneys or confined to the bladder and lower urinary tract? Is it complicated by the involvement of a mechanical factor, such as a narrowing of the urethral outlet or a sagging of the bladder as in cystocele?

It is important to identify the germ involved in the infection so that an appropriate antibiotic can be selected for treatment. You can see by this that treatment is not quite as simple as a spoonful of soda or a glass of cranberry juice.

However, urine is normally acid, and making it alkaline, as with baking soda, can be effective in certain cases. About the cranberry juice. This is a pleasant way to acidify the urine, which could be desirable depending on the organism causing the problem.

But identifying the organism is important, and then it is most important to continue with the proper drug treatment over an extended period. Too often, treatment is stopped prematurely followed by a recurrence of the infection.

Sufficient fluid intake and frequent urination is just as important. One must never hold back, but attempt to urinate every few hours if possible.

Diet is important, particularly regarding foods you might be sensitive to. These commonly are citrus fruits, tomatoes, chocolate, eggs, coffee, cola drinks, milk, or wheat produts. The soda is harmless unless your friend has high blood pressure, in which case her sodium intake should be restricted.

There is no short-cut treatment for recurring urinary tract infection. A urologist would be able to prescribe a course of action.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: In a recent physical I was found to have nodules on my lungs caused by histoplasmosis. How is one to know the symptoms of the disease, and how can it be determined if you still have it, and what is done for it?—Mrs. D.H.

The symptoms are primarily cough and fever.

An x-ray will detect the nodules which resemble those of TB. The disease can be confirmed by taking a culture of the sputum which will show the presence or absence of the fungus. An appropriate skin test would show a positive reaction.

The course of the disease is usually mild, and when the cough and fever subside the patient feels better. However, the nodules remain in the lungs. There is really no treatment for the disease at this stage.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is a mole on the scrotum unusual or anything to worry about? I am 17. It seems to have become larger and is sometimes touchy.—V.C.

Any mole that changes in size should be examined. I suggest you see a dermatologist.

The oldest player finally obtained the floor in the story-telling session. He started out with, "Did any of you ever get set because a finesse was right?"

The start was a good one so the old man was allowed to continue. Here is his hand and the story:

"There was nothing wrong with my four-spade contract. After East took his ace of clubs and led the suit back I wasted no time. I pulled trumps and led a diamond toward dummy.

"West also wasted no time. He rose with the ace and played the six of hearts. All of a sudden I had a problem. Could West be leading away from the king?

"If East held the king I could insure my contract by rising with dummy's ace of hearts, leading the queen of hearts and throwing East in. It looked like the thing to do and I did it.

But West prroduced the king and led a low diamond. It didn't matter what I did at that stage of the proceedings. I was going down."

Bush Flyers' History Told

By BEN WARD

They were big, ungainly and often cantankerous creatures, a blend of delicate wooden panels, painted fabric and wire that laboriously, often reluctantly, hoisted three nervous men into the skies over northern forests.

But the H-boats—more properly the Curtiss HS2Ls—managed to give birth to Canadas remarkable bush-flying industry in an era when a romantic breed of young aviators tore open new northern frontiers.

The story of the H-boat and the men who flew it forms the backbone of The Firebirds, Bruce Wests salute to the 50th anniversary of the Ontario Provincial Air Service (PAS), published by the Queen's printer of Ontario for the Ontario ministry of natural resources. It is aptly subtitled How Bush Flying Won its Wings.

West, semi-retired columnist for Toronto Globe and Mail, is a veteran private pilot who has had a long love affair with northern flying. Publication of the book coincides with the 50th anniversary of his own first brush with aviation, as a young schoolboy playing truant to carry pails of gasoline to a H-boat using the Huntsville dock during an aerial mapping operation.

The cast on characters in The Firebirds is a roll-call of Canadian avation pioneers: Al Cheesman, Duke Schiller, Pat Reid, Leigh Brintnell, Doc Oaks, Romeo Vachon, Frank MacDougall, George Phillips, Fred Stevenson, Terrence Tully, James Medcalf and a host of others.

It was Jan. 16, 1924, when the Ontario cabinet received a memorandum from Lands and Forests Minister James W. Lyons proposing the establishment of a government air service to detect forest fires.

The speedy action which followed was probably inspired by the awesome fire which had swept down on Haileybury less than 18 months earlier, claiming 44 lives.

Previously Ontario had contracted with Laurentide Air Service of Grand' Mere, Que. for aerial forest patrol. The gamble that the province with its own planes and pilots was a big one but the odds against success were reduced when W. Roy Maxwell, who had directed Laurentide's contract work, agreed to boss the new servic.

Although he was later to resign under a cloud, Maxwell put together an operation that won world recognition as the leader in aerial forest fire supression. The 13 H-boats that launched the work have long given way to a succession on more advanced aircraft leading to today's fleet of sturdy de Havilland Otters and Beavers.

West chronicles the tragedies as well as the triumphs that dot the PAS story, including a H-boat crash that took two lives in the first flying season and the flaming crash of a Norseman that killed five near Temagami in 1950. There are accounts of mercy flights, amazing wilderness repair jobs, political crises and the development of the water-bombing technique.

The Firebirds gains much from James Lumbers handsome sketches of the men and machines involved, interspersed with historic photographs from the PAS archives.

The Firebirds, by Bruce West: $6.95, 274 pages; Queen's Printer of Ontario.

Cookbook Gives Fare Of Ontario

Written for CP

By PEGGY TRACY

Latest in the spate of regional Canadian cookbooks to reach the market is Elizabeth Bairds Classic Canadian Cooking. Subtitled Menus for the Seasons, the book is a compendium of what the author believes to be the best of Canadian cooking. By the term classic she means the Upper Canadian cooking tradition evolved in the 1800s and early 1900s, as distinguished from Quebecois and Maritime cooking.

The recipes come from many sources: Printed cookbooks dating from 1831, local womens groups collections, handwritten private collections and innumerable private kitchens.

Until the Second World War, the author notes, there was a distinctively Canadian style of cooking, based largely on foods grown in this country. Since then, rapid urbanization, working women, imported and processed foods and the growth of supermarkets have changed this style, for the worse.

"Before we forget that there ever was such a thing as old-time Canadian cooking we should stop and consider its strengths."

These Mrs. Clark sees as respect for the land and its fruits, a rhythm to it seasonal cycle and a pride in its sheer excellence.

Besides the seasonal specialties the book also contains a number of basic recipes, and notes that apple cider makes an excellent substitute for wine for cooking purposes. The old-fashioned pen-and-ink drawings in the book are straight out of Eaton's catalogues.

Indians Require Health Aid

VANCOUVER (CP) — A British Columbia doctor is calling for a program to put medical advisers into Indian bands.

Dr. N. G. Dormaar of Williams Lake, writing in a special issue of the B.C. Medical Journal devoted to Indian health, said Indians need someone they trust to say "I think you should see a doctor."

One 18-year-old who cut her leg on a piece of glass put off seeing a doctor for five days until the leg was badly infected. She spent 34 days in the hospital at a cost of $1,000 to the government.

Dr. Dormaar said native people have lost much of their self-respect and with it a willingness to make decisions, such as deciding to consult a doctor.

"What has happened to the Indian people over the last 100 years is an incredible tale of frustration of the desire of a proud people to make its own decisions," explained the doctor who has looked after interior B.C. bands for 4½ years.

He said nurse advisers should be hired by Indians to live in the community if possible.

"The important thing is the change in the direction of authority."

One reason for the relative ineffectiveness of the present program of community health auxiliaries is that the initative comes from the government, Dr. Dormaar said.

Dr. Gordon Butler, regional director for medical services in Health and Welfare Canada, the agency responsible for Indian health needs, said his department would be happy to see the nurse adviser program but that there are difficulties getting qualified nurses.

Lou Demerais, administrator for the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs, praised Dr. Dormaar's article.

"It's not that the people don't want health services," he said. "They look around and see their own children dying."

But doctors and matters of routine medical care were things Indians had difficulty relating to.

He said Indians often get the feeling they are imposing if they go to a doctor.

Monkeys Working For Tobacco Firm

LONDON (Reuter) — One of the world's biggest tobacco companies has a group of monkeys working for it. They are puffing away on 30 cigarettes a day to help fin a safer smoke for humans.

Transported from the jungles of Southeast Asia to a research centre north of London, the 60 monkeys spend their working day, from about 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. strapped into seats, chain-smoking through a face mask.

The veterans—some of them have been at it for three years—seem resigned to the job. The newcomers are clearly unhappy, with arms and legs twitching uncontrollably, eyes silently beseeching the visitor.

Their respiration and pulse are monitored by laboratory workers at the Huntingdon Research Centre. They are investigating the effects of different types of tobacco for the Imperial Tobacco Co.

When the animals have put in enough years smoking, they will be killed and dissected. The effects of the carefully-controlled intake of cigarette smoke can then be assessed with a battery of scientific equipment.

The unfortunate apes are participating in a race between the giants of the tobacco industry to find a cigarette which will be less harmful to the human heart and lungs.

To speed research, machines puff away at dozens of cigarettes at once. They test various tobaccos, different filter tips, and the focus of much current rresearch—synthetic fillers.

One such machine collected tar from the smoke of 2,000 ordinary cigarettes, the amount smoked by a 20-a-day man in three or four months. About an inch of thick, brownish-black secretion dripped into a small flask. The same number of synthetic cigarretrtes produced only a quarter of the amount.

This bogus tobacco appears less damaging to the heart and lungs and it is hoped that, mixed with ordinary tobacco, it will provide an answer for smokers worried about health hazards.

Various substances are being researched, but they are all basically purified wood pulp. This can be made to look like tobacco, is said to be tasteless, and is safer.

Three groups are in the running to be first on the market with a cigarette containing a proportion of synthetic filler.

Imperial Tobacco and Imperial Chemical Industries have been given government clearance for consumer trials among 6,000 people for cigarettes containing between 10 and 50 per cent of "New smoking material." The makers say it produces four times less tar and that the tar is five times less active than tobacco tar.

The Celanese Corp. of America has developed a product called cytrel which, it is claimed, produces no nicotine and less than a third of the tar of tobacco.

Celanese will supply British cigarette manufacturers Gallaher and Carreras-Rothmans with quantities for test sampling among smokers.

A similar product was produced by Courtaulds and tested under the brand name Planet in England a year ago. The results were never published. The company says it is still worrking on the project.

A close watch on the artificial tobacco industry is being kept by a committee set up in 1973. Among its jobs is to advise the government on safety controls.

It is headed by Prof. Robert Hunterr of Birmingham University, who aid the committee will make its official recommendations to the government in 1975.

But he said it was a mistake to expect synthetic tobacco to be a panacea for all the drawbacks of smoking.

"Synthetic materials don't appear to be the whole answer," he said. "Other factors, including paper and filter, are important."

Western Dress Stirs Controversy

BOMBAY (CP) — Nearly three decades after India threw off the yoke of colonial rule, the extent of British influence in the country remains a topic of lively controversy.

Take dress, for example. Western-style clothes are increasingly popular and hundreds of tailoring shops in India's major cities boast that their master-cutters are "London-trained."

But many Indians regard western dress as a sign of slavery which should be eliminated.

A clash between the opposing points of view has occurred in Bangalore, capital of the southern state of Karnataka, where the director of technical education has ordered male teachers in technical schools and colleges to wear either Indian-style buttoned-up coats or lounge suits with a tie.

A. Ramachander, a teacher at the state polytechnical school for women, was transferred to another school after he insisted on attending classes wearing a flowing native dhoti and kurta (shirt).

"It is a shame that our government officials have no national pride," Ramachander said. "Why seek to impose British customs on us 28 years after we threw the British out?"

Socialists and Communists said they would raise the issue of Ramachander's transfer at the next session of the state legislature.

Meanwhile, the government softened the dress edict by issuing a "clarification" saying the director's circular was only a "recommendation."

That brought protests from the other side.

"The government should not have retreated," said Subba Rao, owner of a Bangalore tailor shop "Teachers should be properly dressed and a lounge suit is most graceful."

"We Indians must outgrow our dislike of the British," said another tailor, Sadashiv Basappa. "The lounge suit is a sign of progress. Even Chou En-lai has not condemned it."

Separate School Showdown

No School Likely Monday for Many

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Although separate school teachers and boards from several Ontario centres have agreed to try to solve current contract disputes through talks with Education Minister Thomas Wells, parents are being warned there likely will be no school Monday.

Board and teacher representatives from Ottawa, Sudbury and the counties of Elgin, London-Middlesex and Wellington were invited to an 11th-hour weekend meeting with Mr. Wells in Toronto.

Separate schools in Hastings and Prince Edward counties are immune from the trouble. Teachers in the two Quinte counties signed a two-year salary agreement with their board last March.

A spokesman for the ministry of education said Friday night that Sudbury and Wellington agreed to participate in talks today and Ottawa was to attend either today or Sunday. London-Middlesex representatives had not agreed by Friday to a meeting. Elgin negotiators said they would be in Toronto Monday.

Negotiators from Durham and Carleton counties were not asked to the Toronto talks because board and teacher representatives in those areas indicated they were close to a settlement.

Doug Knott, chief negotiator for the Ontario English Catholic Teachers Association (OECTA), was unable to explain Friday why Elgin spokesmen did not intend to arrive until after the weekend. But he said he understood that teachers there had designated Monday as "professional activities day" and pupils had been advised to stay home.

He added that he thought chances were good for an agreement between the Sudbury board and its teachers but the picture elsewhere was grim.

In Ottawa, talks broke off Thursday night after more than eight hours of discussions.

"It will be very difficult for the board to find adequate staffing and we urge parents to keep their children home (Monday) if possible," Gisele Lalonde, chairman of the Ottawa Separate School Board, said Friday. Bus service and supervisory staff will be available for students who show up.

The weekend talks, with Mr. Wells acting as unofficial mediator are aimed at settling contract disputes that have seen 4,000—85 per cent of separate school teachers in seven areas—submit resignations to back up demands for higher salaries and better working conditions.

The teachers, who now earn between $5,500 and $18,500 depending on qualifications and years of experience, started bargaining discussions seeking increases of 20 to 35 per cent in a one-year contract.

Bargaining levels now vary in different areas.

Unless there is a settlement, teacher resignations which became effective Jan. 1 will affect 103,000 students at 265 schools.

"It is imperative that everything possible be done to avert the situation where normal classroom studies for pupils may be interrupted," Mr. Wells said.

But even if the weekend meeting brings tentative agreements, ratification votes might cancel classes Monday.

Advisers Telling Ford Worst Is Yet to Come

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's advisers are telling him the worst is yet to come in the struggle with economic recession in the United States.

The gloomy economic forecast is spurring talk of tax cuts this year.

It was against this backdrop that Ford called his top economic advisers to the White House today for another in a series of meetings to prepare for his Jan. 20 State of the Union message.

In advance of today's session, White House sources reported that Ford has been told by his advisers to brace himself for more economic bad news in the months ahead.

The labor department announced Friday that the U.S. unemployment rate climbed to 7.1 per cent in December from 6.5 per cent in November as 6.5 million Americans were unable to find jobs.

It was the biggest monthly jump in more than 14 years.

Total employment dropped 500,000 from November to December, to about 85.2 million.

Two hours later, White House press secretary Ron Nessen said that "The decline in productivity that is now going on means that the country must expect further increases in unemployment during the period immediately ahead."

Under questioning by reporters, Nessen added that Ford has been told that unemployment is likely to reach eight per cent within the next several months.

Some administration sources said Ford's economic advisers had concluded that a tax cut of at least $10 billion is necessary to pull the U.S. out of recession, an average annual savings of $90 per household.

Nessen said Ford had told his senior advisers to quit talking about possible economic moves, and he indicated Ford will be cautious about final decisions on the economy.

He reported that presidential aides are quoting Thomas Jefferson's 1972 advice to George Washington: "Delay is preferable to error."

Retired U.S. Admiral Says Threat Misguided

TORONTO (CP) — A retired U.S. Navy admiral said Friday that U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger made a "thoroughly misguided statement" in saying that military action might be considered if Middle East oil policies were strangling the the industrialized world.

Rear-Admiral Gene LaRocque, speaking on the CBC radio program As It Happens, said Mr. Kissinger's recent comment was "a blatant attempt to scare" Middle East oil-producing countries.

"Perhaps he thinks the threat of military action will persuade them to come to the bargaining table," said the retired admiral who now heads the Centre for Defence Information in Washington.

Rear-Admiral LaRocque said Friday that a diplomatic course of action is the only way that the U.S. can ensure it remains able to get adequate supplies of Middle East oil.

But, he said, U.S invasion of the Middle East would not be difficult.

"Historically we've tried to be prepared for any contingency," he said. At leas five military divisions could be landed in the Middle East "in a matter of days."

He added that he "wouldn't be a bit surprised" if Washington was able to convince the people of the U.S. that military invasion was necessary.

"I don't think we learned a darn thing in Viet Nam.

"But the U.S. will stew in its own juices if it's dumb enough to get involved in military action in the Middle East."

Ontario Fights Ruling Giving Unwed Welfare

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government will attempt next week to overturn a court ruling that gave a woman welfare payments even though she is living with a man.

The recent ruling by the divisional court granted an appeal by June Proc, 46, of Toronto against a decision by the ministry of commmunity and social services to deny her benefits

The ministry's original decision was based on the fact that Mrs. Proc was living in the same house as Howard Moquin. It said that only unemployable women without spouses are eligible for support and contended that Mrs. Proc and Mr. Moquin are like spouses even though they are not married.

Mrs. Proc is unable to work because of her health.

In overruling the decision, Mr. Justice David Henry of the divisional court said that just because a woman is living in the same house with a man she is not necessarily his spouse.

"Mrs. Proc could equally well be a lodger in his house who goes her own separate way in her own separate quarters," Mr. Justice Henry wrote in his decision. "He merely foregoes the collection of payment for room and board."

He ordered officials to pay Mrs. Proc a monthly allowance of $170.

Libya Now Sells Oil

BEIRUT (AP) — Libya has quietly removed its ban on oil exports to the United States to help offset a drastic drop in its foreign sales, the Middle East Economic Survey reported today.

In addition, Libya and two other major Mediterranean oil producers, Iraq and Algeria, have slightly lowered their prices to meet competition from the Persian Gulf, the Survey said.

Wilson Tells Labor Unions Not to Strike

HUYTON, England (AP) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson told British labor unions Friday to halt "manifestly avoidable" strikes that are putting the country in the red.

It was the toughest talk from Wilson since his Labor government won last February's elections, and coincided with the release of new figures showing Britain's economy sinking into deeper trouble.

The warning, in a speech in the Midlands electoral district he represents, singled out automotive workers, whose strikes are forcing state-financed factories to run at a loss.

Rumor Says Brezhnev Is Not Well

MOSCOW (AP) — Rumors that Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev is ill made the rounds of Moscow's foreign colony Friday, but usually reliable diplomatic sources said they had no information which would confirm the reports. Soviet officials were not talking.

The rumors appeared to be an outgrowth of an announcement Monday by the Soviet news agency Tass that a much-heralded trip by Brezhnev to the Middle East in mid-January had ben indefinitely postponed. No reason was given.

The rumors ranged all the way from Brezhnev being tired, following a busy round of summit meetings and official appearances, to his suffering a "slight" heart attack. Some of the accounts said Brezhnev was in a sanatorium at Barvikha, just west of Moscow.

Solitary Confinement Of Quebec Girls Stays

MONTREAL (CP) — Solitary confinement and use of physical restraint will continue to be used as disciplinary measures for 13-to 17-year-old girls held at provincial detention centres, an executive assistant to Social Affairs Minister Claude Forget said Friday.

Richard Mongeau said the directive is contained in a telegram sent to all provincial juvenile detention centres Friday by Mr. Forget, following published reports in The Gazette describing cases of young girls being kept in solitary confinement strapped to a bed.

Mr. Forget Thursday pledged a halt to solitary confinement as a disciplinary measure at provincial detention centres.

Use of solitary confinement and physical restraints will be allowed, the directive states, if the following four conditions are met by each institution:

—The measure must be prescribed by a professional;

—Use of the measures must be recorded in the institutions files;

—The measure must be approved by the director-general of the institution or director of the professional services;

—The Department of Social Affairs must be advised about the measure within 24 hours.

Mr. Forget's directive also orders the creation of a committee of professionals to visit Maison Notre Dame de Laval, where a Gazette reporter recently spent two weeks working as an "educator", to evaluate the situation there and make a report.

Mr. Forget said Friday he was aware that two girls were being detained in solitary confinement cells at the institution in nearby Laval, but said Director-General Anna-Maria Pigeon assured him the girls had been sent to isolation on the advice of two psychiatrists.

Mr. Forget said the director told him that solitary confinement is not used as a punishment or disciplinary measure but as a " manner of preventing girls from committing injury to themselves or violence to the other girls in cells."

News Briefs

City Ambulances Urged

TORONTO (CP) — Emergency ambulances in Metropolitan Toronto should be owned as well as operated and dispatched by the city's department of emergency services, a consultant's report to the provincial ministry of health has recommended. The report says although the initial investment might cost the department up to $360,000, it would save about $200,000 a year in operating costs, which in 1974 was $2.5 million.

Student Charged

OLEAN, N.Y. (AP) — A 17-year-old honor student, accused of being the sniper who killed three persons at Olean high school during a day of terror Monday, was ordered held Friday for grand jury action. Judge James Crowley of city court ordered Anthony Barbaro of Olean bound over after listening to testimony by nine witnesses at a 2½-hour hearing.

Decrees Issued

DACCA (Reuter) — The Bangladesh government, acting under the national state of emergency declared last week, assumed virtual dictatorial powers Friday to fight extremists and economic offenders. It announced a long set of rules defining the government's emergency powers, including the right to impose censorship on news media, intercept mail, ban political parties and deport foreigners.

Intruder Held

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police seized a man who attempted to drive a truck onto the White House grounds Friday in the second such incident during the last 10 days. The man, whom officials declined to identify, was committed to hospital for mental observation after questioning by Secret Service agents.

Hospital Pares Staff

TORONTO (CP) — The Hospital for Sick Children has imposed restraints on hiring as a means of paring $600,000 from its $43-million budget, the hospital said Friday. The hospital said only half of its normal summer relief staff will be hired this year. Regular staff will work overtime only in exceptional cases and vacated positions will not be filled for 30 days.

Claim Rejected

MONTREAL (CP) — A claim that an act which prohibits reserve Indians from jury duty is discriminatory was rejected Friday by the Quebec Court of Appeal. Lawyer Gaetan Robert argued the Quebec Jury Act did not provide his client, Thomas Diabo, of the nearby Caughnawaga reserve, with equality before the courts. Justice George Owen said it was true no registered Indian living on the reserve could sit as a juror but "the reason for this is not the fact he belongs to the Indian race, but rather the fact that he does not reside in a municipality that has a valuation roll."

Plane Missing in North

VICTORIA (CP) — Canadian Forces airplanes were dispatched Friday to search for a single-engine plane reported mis'sng earlier in the day in the Yukon Territories. An American-registered Piper PA-23, flown by one unidentified man, was reported missing Friday by a pilot of another plane. The two were on a 470-mile flight from Watson Lake, Y.T. to Northway, just inside the Alaska border. The pilot of the second plane landed in Whitehorse and reported he had last seen the Piper PA-23 in the Teslin Lake area.

Americans Prove in No Hurry To Exercise Right to Buy Gold

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans bought and sold gold bullion legally for the first time in 41 years this week. Anyway, a few of them did.

The gold rush that some had anticipated when the legal ban on private U.S. ownership of gold was lifted Dec. 31 was more like the party to which no one came. Most banks and brokers dealing in gold reported some curiosity, but very little buying.

"It's just like the first two days of gold buying," a spokesman for New York's Republic National Bank said of Friday's sales. "We've had very slight response."

The remark typified the lack of response to gold sales that marked all three trading days this week. By week's end, some were predicting the American gold market would not pick up noticeably for months if at all.

On U.S. commodity markets, by contrast, gold contracts for current and future delivery attracted heavy volume. But most of it was selling by professionals apparently alarmed by weak retail gold sales. Futures prices took heavy losses.

From the opening trade Tuesday to the close Friday, 96.45 troy ounce bullion contracts for current delivery on the Chicago Board of Trade slid from $194 an ounce to $173. Similar steep losses occurred for January contracts at the other major commodity markets.

Retail prices at banks and brokers varied, as markups and sales taxes differed from place to place. But at Republic National, the handful of customers who bought one-ounce ingots for $216 on Tuesday could have bought the same bullion for about $20 less on Friday.

Gold dealers in the U.S. and in Europe will be watching to see what effect Monday's U.S. treasury auction of two million ounces of gold will have on gold prices.

The amount of gold involved, valued at about $350 million, is not very large by gold market standards, but some analysts say the added supply will not do the world's gold markets much good psychologically.

The auction is being con- The auction is being conducted with sealed bids to the general service administration for minimum lots of 400 troy ounces valued at about $70,000 each.

Accident Details Sketchy

An unidentified Marmora area man, injured in a snowmobile accident sometime Friday, has been transferred to Kingston General Hospital from Belleville.

Provincial police at Madoc were not notified of the mishap, but they are investigating, a police spokesman said.

A Belleville hospital official could not release the name of the victim, pending notification of the man's parents, it was explained.

However, the hospital spokesman noted in transferred cases, the injury is regarded as serious.

Girl Slips on Snowmobile

A 12-year-old, RR 4, Belleville girl was treated and released from Belleville General Hospital Friday for a lacerated left leg suffered in a snowmobile mishap early Friday afternoon.

Provincial police at Belleville said Monica Short was a passenger on a snowmobile driven by Nancy Lynn Cronin, 14, of RR 4, Belleville, which was towing a toboggan carrying two other children on private property just west of Elmwood Dr.

Investigating officer Constable Larry Farrar said the Short girl was holding the towrope, and when the two children fell off the toboggan, she turned and slipped, becoming entangles in the machine.

Constable Farrar said he had to dismantle a portion of the snowmobile to release the girl.

Sugar Helps Lower Food Bills As December Prices Drop

By DIANE MERLEVEDE
The Canadian Press

Sugar, the villain of the piece recently as food prices soared, helped lower supermarket bills in December as over-all food prices dipped.

Five pounds of white granulated sugar was lower than in November in all 12 cities surveyed by The Canadian Press. The biggest reduction occurred in Ottawa where the price of five pounds dropped to $2.87 from $4.02.

Average cost of 17 items used in the survey was $17.55 in December, down from $18.33 in November. The food bill dropped in eight cities, but climbed in Halifax, Ottawa, Toronto and Vancouver, mainly because of meat prices.

For example, a sirloin tip of beef roast jumped to $2.08 a pound in Ottawa, up from $1.63 in November.

The drop in sugar prices may continue in the next 18 months, Neil Shaw, president of Redpath Industries Ltd., said in December. Consumers' refusal to buy sugar at inflated prices helped the reduction.

Sugar consumption in November was 16 per cent less than in November, 1973, said the president of the sugar-refining company.

Mr. Shaw said he expected the price to continue downward in 1975 and 1976, except for periodic "bumps upward", if there were no crop failures or poor growing weather.

Items in the market basket, priced in the same supermarkets each month, include one pound each of sirloin tip roast beef, all-beef wieners, centre-cut loin of pork, top-grade chicken, ground chuck steak, frozen cod fillets, top-grade butter, tomatoes, frozen green peas, drip coffee and apples.

Also included are one dozen medium eggs, one quart of whole milk, a 24-ounce loaf of sliced, white bread, 10 pounds of first-grade potatoes, five pounds of white granulated sugar and a 24-ounce can of halved pears.

Some findings, compared with November and the total price in December, 1973:

Toronto: While the price of sugar was reduced 80 cents to $3.29, pork increased 75 cents to $1.73, pears 12 cents to 74 cents and eggs 11 cents to 82 cents. Coffee was up 10 cents to $1.19 and butter and peas each by seven cents to 98 and 45. Only other changes were a decrease in chicken by five cents to 72 cents and wieners by one cent to 94 cents. The total was $18.07 compared with $17.82 in November. In December, 1973, the total was $13.62.

THE UNEXPLAINED
by Allen Spraggett

Message from a Dead Wife

Upton Sinclair, who died two or three years ago in his nineties, was a celebrated novelist, muckraking journalist and social crusader.

He twice won the Pulitzer Prize. His first book, The Jungle, was an expose of the filthy conditions prevailing early in this century in the Chicago stockyards.

But Upton Sinclair had another deep interest besides social causes. He was a perceptive investigator of what he called "mental radio". Or ESP.

Sinclair conducted a famous series of tests with his wife and found she frequently was able to read his mind so accurately that if he was thinking of an umbrella, she drew an umbrella; if a fish, she drew a fish. And so on.

Upton Sinclair published these telepathy experiments in a book to which the preface was written by none less than Prof. Albert Einstein.

But something happened between Sinclair and his wife which seemed to go beyond mere mind-reading or telepathy. It happened after her death.

During her last illness, Mary Craig Sinclair was subject to fainting spells and had three bad falls because of them. The cause of her death was said to be a heart attack.

However, a few days after Mrs. Sinclair's death, her husband, who was living in California, received an unusual letter from a stranger in Iowa. It said that the writer had attended a seance conducted by the famous medium Arthur Ford at which a message had come through purportedly from the deceased Mrs. Sinclair.

She sent her love, the letter said, and asked those at the seance to communicate this to her husband. To prove her identity she added a curious detail. She mentioned three fainting spells she had suffered before her death and said they actually had been light strokes.

Upton Sinclair didn't know what to make of the letter. True, his wife had taken the three falls referred to — and it seemed impossible that the letter writer should know this — but what of the alleged strokes?

Upton Sinclair contacted the doctor who had performed the autopsy on his wife's body and asked what it had revealed.

"Well," said the doctor, "your wife had certain brain lesions."

"And what did they indicate?" Sinclair asked.

"That she had three light strokes before her death," the doctor said.

The puzzler is:

How did the medium, Arthur Ford, know a fact about the dead woman unknown even to her husband?

Did the surviving personality of Mary Craig Sinclair communicate that fact from beyond death?

County Needs Ferry History

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — The arrival of a new ferry at Glenora has prompted the Prince Edward Marine Historical Society to question the possibility of obtaining the old ferry Quinte for its museum.

The Quinte will be replaced, probably this spring, by The Glenora, a boat formerly in service at St. Joseph's Island.

The future of the 12-car ferry Quinte is undecided. One spokesman for the ministry of transportation and communications has suggested the vessel may be placed in service elsewhere or sold.

The marine society may not be successful in obtaining a ferry for its museum but efforts should be made to compile the history of the ferries that have operated from county shores.

The Mariners' Park museum, located in South Marysburgh Township, was opened in 1967. The outdoor display of ships' hulls, anchors, life boat and reconstructed lighthouse provide a colorful outline of Prince Edward's history on the high seas.

Recently, a small cement block building was constructed in the park to house small marine artifacts for display.

It is here pictures of Prince Edward County's old ferries accompanied by histories could be featured.

The Quinte Skyway bridge spanning the Bay of Quinte from Green Point to Deseronto has replaced Cronk's ferry, later known as MacDermaid's ferry.

The old ferry now is tied at a Deseronto marina. It is privately-owned and has been converted to a house boat.

Its colorful history should join the marine relics preserved at the Mariners' Park museum by the marine society.

Similarly, the background of the Waupoos ferry, Cole's ferry and the Glenora ferries should be chronicled while there are still "old-timers" who can recall the early days of the county.

Since the marine society now has a small building to house artifacts it should be possible to display the ferry histories with pictures.

Athlough it may not be possible for the society to obtain a genuine ferry certainly the story of Prince Edward's ferry boats could be introduced as a new display at the Mariner's Park.

Gardening Column

Get The Most From Azaleas

By ROSS HAWTHORNE

If you believe that Christmas plants are designed to be enjoyed and forgotten we hope that by the end of this column you'll have changed your mind. The truth is that all of the popular Christmas plants - poinsettias, azaleas and cyclamen can continue on in your home or garden for many years to come. Provided you are willing to give them the time and care that each requires.

Let's start with the most popular of the Christmas flowering plants - the poinsettia. As a flowering plant, the poinsetia is a real loser. Because the actual flowers are those tiny, greenish-yellow nubs in the centre of the red petal-like bracts. It is those bracts - which can remain colorful for three months or more - that make the poinsettia so desirable as a colorful house plant.

Now, bringing the poinsettia into bloom, and those bracts into color, is no easy matter. It requires 14 hours of totally uninterrupted darkness for a period of 40 consecutive days. That means, to bring a poinsettia into bloom for Christmas, you'd have to religiously, from the last week in September through the end of October, set your plant every day, from late afternoon until morning, in a dark closet or basement room. And by dark - I mean complete dark - with no light interruption whatsoever..

But whatever you do, don't discard the poinsettia because of the difficulties of bringing it into bloom, not when you can raise it as an extremely attractive house plant with its green, oak-leaved shaped foliage and red tinged stems. And it adapts nicely to the outdoors where it will prosper from June through September..

To develop the poinsettia as a house plant, prune it back after flowering to about six to eight inches from the soil. New growth will start below that point. It likes about four hours of direct sunlight a day or about six hours of fluorescent light. It likes night temperatures fairly cool, in the 60 to 65 degree range, but day temperatures over 65 degrees are ideal. Fertilize every two weeks until you're ready to put it outside. When you water, soak it thoroughly, but allow the soil to become slightly dry between waterings..

The azalea is probably the second most popular flowering Christmas plant and with a few simple steps you can maintain it as a foliage plant, and bring it back into bloom again next year. The secrets lie in watering, fertilizing and night temperatures..

From the time the flowers fade, fertilize every two weeks with an acid-type fertilizer until at least mid-summer when the new flower buds will form. Keep the soil slightly moist at all times. If the leaves lose their rich, green color, then you require the addition of iron to your fertilizer to act as a chelating agent.. Try to give azaleas four hours of direct window sunlight a day and - here's an important point - night temperatures should be kept as low as possible - 55 degrees or lower..

The cyclamen has got to be among the loveliest of flowering house plants with three-inch flowers in shades of pink, red and white that sweep up like the wings of a butterfly. And their blooming period can be extended from four to six months with a few simple precautions. Like the azalea, it likes cool night temperatures not exceeding 55 degrees and again like the azalea, it likes soil to be kept slightly moist and to be fertilized every two weeks. But it prefers curtain-filtered sunlight or simply a bright window rather than direct sunlight. And it will do well under a fluorescent fixture..

Owen Carr, kneeling, and his father, Delbert, check corn for frost damage on an experimental plot near Trenton. They grew corn on 720 acres this past season, and harvested it right up until the snowfall. This corn was harvested abnormally late to check its standability; yield was a close second. With a new storage elevator being built for corn near Peterborough, the Carrs said they are going to rent every acre of land they can get to cash in on the bonanza. The elevators have been described by a soil and crop expert as "having a significast economic impact for the Quinte area.

Trenton Bureau

Industry Missing Among 1975 Goals

AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

Control of tax increases and continuation of the road rebuilding program have been tacked at the top of town council's list of priorities for this year.

Both are safe aspirations, acceptable and desirable.

The trouble is that neither answers a key problem currently facing Trenton — the lack of incoming industry. It has not been securely fitted into that list.

It should be noted that the other, inter-related problem has not yet been mentioned — the often-cited lack of land available for industrial use.

This has been included in the priority list, though not nearly high enough.

Five of the incoming councillors have indicated that Trenton lacks such land. Yet only one has firmly placed its acquisition at the top of his personal priority list.

However, it's unlikely to happen quickly. Annexation, a practice usually followed by a town wanting land, can no longer be considered feasible. At least at present, the province frowns upon such land grabbing.

Land from a loosening of hazard land designations in the official plan will not be available for some time yet.

We are told that only 70 acres remain available for industrial purposes. So be it, let's use it.

Given such circumstances, would it not be more beneficial to direct energy, now spent bemoaning the lack of land, to actively seeking industry. Let us recognize Trenton's limitation and proceed from there.

But council appears to have resigned itself to what is supposedly limited acreage instead of actively selling what is available. Surely, at least one industrial plant — word has it there is one — will locate on land that exists.

The key word here is "actively". Waiting till an unknown executive walks in the town hall door is non-action. Council must instruct its representative(s) to knock on industry's doors.

This non-action in bringing industry here has been deftly side-stepped with the claim there is not land enough to bring plants here. The smoke screen has been effective.

Although town costs do increase, it's generally accepted dollars gained from industry offset those same higher expenses. Industrial taxes either maintain or knock a few mills from the burden residential property owners must bear.

Council may be forced to increase those very taxes it has pledged to hold down through what could properly be called neglect.

Automated Poultry Farm Handles 9,500 Chickens

TRURO, N.S. (CP) — Think about where eggs come from. You may have visions of a barnyard, with lots of nice little chickens wandering and pecking about.

At mealtime, the farmer's wife tosses handfuls of grain among the chickens and that's it. Next day she picks up the eggs.

That's not how it works at the farm of John Fisher in nearby Hilden.

Here, harvesting eggs is big business, fully automated and run like any other large-scale operation.

Biologically speaking, there's only one crucial fact involved. If you want an egg, then you have to have a chicken.

Mr. Fisher has lots.

Imagine the feeling of walking into a barn to discover some 5,500 chickens staring suspiciously at you.

Another 4,000 hens will be arriving soon, Mr. Fisher said.

They are housed in long barns, three to a cage in rows several layers high.

They are fed automatically no less than seven times a day. The feed slowly moves past them on a rotating belt for 15 minutes.

If the chicken wants a drink, it presses a tiny white button in its dish which then fills with water.

Mr. Fisher said hens always know who is supposed to be collecting their eggs and will react strongly if that person is careless enough to wear clothing of a different color than normal.

The presence of a stranger can have them fluttering nervously.

The chickens give off so much heat that the barn is continuously ventilated. Their cumulative warmth keeps the unheated building at about 60 degrees, winter included.

The life of the average hen is short. Purchased when about 20 weeks old, she lays eggs for about 13 months before going to the butcher or the processing plant.

Mr. Fisher's chickens consume about 1½ tons of feed a day and in return provide nearly 7,000 eggs. Each hen lays 20 dozen annually.

The eggs drop through the bottom of the cage. They are picked up and taken to a sorting machine, washed, steam-dried, passed over 600-watt bulbs to check for cracks and finally categorized by weight.

Stored in an insulated room kept at 50 degrees with a humidity of 84 per cent, the eggs keep for three months.

Cracked eggs are sold to a bakery or at the door. Eggs with blood clots are used by mink farmers to mix in their feed.

There is even a market for hen droppings. Three tons, when thoroughly dried, will provide one ton of high-protein fertilizer. Mr. Fisher said new laying hens cost him between $2.50 and $2.80 each. He sells eggs for about 82 cents a dozen. Of that amount, 8½ cents must be paid to the egg marketing board.

The board has told Mr. Fisher to cut his production by 24 per cent—something he didn't want to do. But he considers the board "a necessary evil."

Non-smokers Rights

The rights of the non-smoker have gained momentum to the extent that a judge recently ruled in their favor, in a situation where the matter was at issue.

Also enshrined in provincial legislation is a Bill of Rights for Non-Smokers which was ratified last November and bears the signatures of Minister of Health Frank Miller, Dr. W. E. Mighton, president of the Ontario Tuberculosis and Respiratory Diseases Association, and Dr. A. A. Scott, president of the Ontario Thoracic Society.

Coming up in addition is a National Education Week on Smoking from January 11 to 17 which will have the backing of a proclamation by Belleville city council.

The health problems associated with smoking, or which can arise over a period of years, require little emphasis. Suffice it to say they include a strong tendency toward cancer and heart disease as well as emphysema.

Aside from that, there is the situation implicit in the theme of the education week which is "Non-Smokers Have Rights."

Mrs. A. N. Hallam, executive secretary of the Hastings and Prince Edward TB and RD Association, says it is hoped to establish a local branch of the GASP (Group Against Smoking Pollution). This will be a joint effort with the Cancer Society.

If people wish to smoke, that is their right too, but more and more it is being questioned whether smoking is a legitimate practice in places where the public gather in large numbers, such as in theatres, convention halls and food stores. Of course there are countless other instances — where the travelling public is concerned for one — but polluted air, respiratory problems, and food handling all enter in and must be considered where the overall interests of society are concerned.

Some municipalities in Ontario have banned smoking in food stores, and this is a step in the right direction. There is also room for restricting smoking in other situations, as well as for impressing on people the threat posed to health by smoking.

Trial Ends

The Watergate trial has ground to a conclusion and to what had been virtually certain verdicts where former President Nixon's aides were concerned.

For those the jury found guilty the protestations of innocence remain, to be sluiced through the slow screening and supposedly cleansing process of appeal, an exercise that traditionally covers a protracted period of time.

Justice has been done, up to a point, but whether the tenets of that curious rider about justice being seen to be done have been satisfied . . . is another matter.

By the time any of those found guilty see the inside of a jail a lot more politicking will have passed under the bridge. Who knows, maybe the former president will have got a book out about it by then. And Americans, by and large, will have lost interest in the whole affair.

At least the most painful episodes of this traumatic period of United States history are out of the way. What remains will be largely academic, while still of course of paramount import to those whose careers and personal lives now lie in complete disarray.

The main thing, from a national and world standpoint, is that the United States has a new administration freed from the tarnish of scandal and shady entanglements. True, in its short life the first imperfections have made their appearance but they are as nothing beside the enormity of what went before.

Another chapter has closed and the future, as unknown as ever, lies ahead.

Downed Plane

It has been established that Soviet missiles were responsible for destruction of the Canadian UN aircraft over Syrian territory last August — an incident that caused the death of Trenton-based airmen among others.

So much for the politics of that part of the world. The Soviet Union talks peace with the Americans while each power bloc arms the opposing side in the Middle East confrontation.

Man of the Year

Chauvinism and National Bias Mark Time's Selections

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Remember Walter P. Chrysler, Owen D. Young, Hugh S. Johnson?

You don't. Who does? Well, they were Time magazine's Men of the Year in 1928, 1929 and 1933. They were three of the 31 Americans—individuals and groups—who have made it to 47 of the annual Man of the Year cover stories of the domestic or American edition of Time, the edition that counts.

First Time Man of the Year in 1927 when the youthful Charles A. Lindbergh soloed across the Atlantic was, who else, Charles A. Lindbergh.

Perhaps you weren't asking about the others. But Walter F. Chrysler was the big man at the long-ago booming Chrysler car empire, Owen D. Young, a long-forgotten Wall Street tycoon brought in by President Herbert Hoover to do a long-forgotten task—to reorganize Germany's war reparation payments after World War One.

Gen. Hugh Johnson, the man who "invented" the U.S. draft in 1917 also ran the National Recovery Act agency for President Roosevelt during the Depression, the agency mainly responsible for restoring U.S. private industry.

I linger longer on them because a survey in depth of Time's 47 choices for Man of the Year has to reveal the genuine American nature of this publication, grudgingly giving away their self-proclaimed title to foreign candidates when the prominent Americans that year readily hadn't performed the way New York editors had anticipated.

Hence there are only three Germans, Hitler (1938), Adenauer (1953) and Brandt (1970), two Englishmen), Churchill twice (1940) and (1949) and the Queen (1952) and two Russians, Stalin twice Khrushchev once.

Nor does Time believe very much in Women of the Year! The Queen filled that role in 1952, the only other woman so far in 48 years being Wallis Warfield Simpson (1936), wife of Edward VIII, the abdicated king and Elizabeth's royal uncle.

Oh yes. Mme. Chiang Kai-shek did appear on the 1937 cover along with her equally famous husband. But apart from these forget Time's woman of the year. India's Mrs. Indira Gandhi has never made it, (though the famous Mahatma Gandhi did so in 1930).

In fact few of the leaders of the Third World, especially those who carried out the major social revolutions of the post-1945 world, have made it to Time's Man of the Year.

How about China's Mao Tse-tung in the year China turned Communist in 1949? That year, Time had Churchill on the cover again. Or Castro's 1959 win in Cuba? That was the year for the second appearance of Eisenhower (his first was in 1944 as Supreme Allied Commander in Europe).

Never have Nasser of Egypt, Tito of Yugoslavia, Soekarno of Indonesia, Gowon of Nigeria made the Man of the Year cover.

Nor has any of the United Nations secretary-generals, Trygve Lie, Hammerskjold, U Thant. Nor, of course, any Canadians. Not Mackenzie King for longevity in office, nor Pearson as a world diplomat and a co-founder of NATO, nor Trudeau for new-style politics and perhaps longevity too. Not one.

If longevity were a criterion for Man of the Year status, certainly Spain's General Franco is very long overdue. The 25th anniversary of his coming to power perhaps? That would have been in 1964, or 35 years in power, last year. Take your pick. Time's editors didn't.

"If it didn't happen mainly in America, it didn't happen at all," lies behind Time magazine's choices all the way back to glamor boy flyer Lindbergh.

Of the 31 Americans (individuals or groups like The Middle Americans (1969) or The 25 and Under Generation (1966), 19 Men of the Year were U.S. presidents (Roosevelt three times) and 12 were other prominent Americans (excepting sports, the arts, entertainment).

Last year it was Judge John Sirica. Really? Who cares about him in Bangladesh, the U.S.S.R or Algeria?

This year it had to be and is King Faisal whose oil price rises affect us all, including Time's chauvinistic editors.

Non-smoker's Rights

Ontario health minister Frank Miller signs Bill of Rights for Non-Smokers as W. E. Mighton, president of the Ontario Tuberculosis and Respiratory Diseases Association, and Dr. A. A. Scott, president of the Ontario Thoracic Society, look on.

Provincial Scene in 1975

Darcy McKeough is Man to Watch

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — For a long time now it has been the practice of columnists such as myself to look at the past 12 months and give their event of the year, various other matters of the year, and particularly their Man of the year.

It has been my habit to indulge myself in the past, passing on to you, for whatever use it was, who in my opinion had made the outstanding contribution to Ontario public affairs during the past year.

It is a practice, however, in which I do not intend to indulge this year.

One reason for this, perhaps, is that at this time and in these times it seems corny.

But most of all, it is because on looking back there is really not one individual who stands out.

Normally one might pick Treasurer John White, for he finally did attack the problem of land speculation. But his plan was so poorly prepared and thought out that he loses his marks.

Again, and this may surprise you, one might mention Dr. Morton Shulman. For Morty has been a prodigious worker and digger and undoubtedly has shown outstanding intelligence.

But though his efforts have made a lot of news there really has been no product from them which has contributed to the basic welfare of the province and its people.

So, no Man of the Year.

What I am going to do, however, is propose a man for this year, a Man for 1975.

And this is Darcy McKeough.

The former treasurer an present minister of energy is to my mind the most able man on the government side of the house (and that includes the premier).

During the next 12 months I believe we will hear a lot of him and from him and that by the end of the year we will find he has made an outstanding contribution.

As the band leader in the energy field he has in his hands—and it is almost completely in his hands; the cabinet has little to do with it—the most complex matter facing the government and one which affects practically everyone in the province.

In McKeough's wisdom, intelligence and ability are lying the delicate negotiations between the western provinces, the federal government and Ontario, together with the international aspects involved, on the cost and price of energy.

It is essentially up to him whether this time next year we are paying a fortune for our gasoline, fuel oil and natural gas.

To my mind these negotiations couldn't be in better hands than in those of this 41-year-old scion of the rich, but dedicated public servant, from Chatham.

Dracula Legend is Revived by Television Documentary in UK

BBC London Letter

Horror is good business as every film producer and thriller writer knows and never more so, it seems, than now. The revival of interest in the supernatural is reflected in the vast industry centred around Count Dracula, a character created in 1897 by an English writer, Bram Stoker. Recently the great-nephew of Bram Stoker, Dan Farson, looked at the worldwide repercussions of his great-uncle's book in a BBC television documentary.

Stakes through the heart in a welter of gore ... dripping human fangs ... familiar sights to lovers of films about the Vampire Dracula. And there have been more than 200 of them since the book was written at the end of the 19th century.

The story is set in Transylvania in Northern Romania and though Bram Stoker had never set foot there he describes the landscape and buildings with uncanny accuracy entirely based on documents he had studied in the British Museum.

The BBC showed shots actually taken in Northern Romania - oppressive thickly wooded hills enveloped in swirling mists just as they were described in the book..

In the middle of the 18th century there seems to have been an epidemic of vampirism with reports of vampires ranging the countryside by night and sucking the blood of victims who then turned into vampires themselves..

The BBC program pointed out that in Romania there is now a flourishing Dracula tourist industry. One difficulty the Romanians face is the discrepancy between fact and fiction..

Dracula was probably based on a 15th century ruler of Walachia, Vlad Dracul, who is considered a national hero. Though a man of great cruelty

Origins of Folklore Theme As Researchers Gather in Gemany

West German Information Bulletin

The old university town of Gottingen is becoming a mecca for the world's best-known fairy tales. Folk-narrative researchers from 36 countries are helping a team under Professor Kurt Ranke to make the compilation. The encyclopedia, no mere anthology, will throw historical and sociological light on the origins of fairy tales. It will even consider how the tales are handed from generation to generation - by various ways in various countries..

The project backed by the Research Association, has established contacts with ninety contributors throughout the world. This would probably never have occurred if Ranke had not been one of the co-founders of the International Society for Folk-Narrative Research in Paris in 1960..

Hundreds of members can now help him to compile his work of reference and they can also help him track down further specialists in the countries where they live.

Folk narrative researchers from 36 countries belong to this scientific association - Israelis and Egyptians, Russians and Americans, north, South and Black Africans, Chileans, Argentinians, Indians, Japanese, Australians and representatives of all Eastern and Western European countries..

The encyclopaedia will prove of benefit both to folklore specialists and scholars of other disciplines. The project is a co-operative venture. Articles are written by ethnologists, psychologists, sociologists, historians, theologians, scholars of divinity, doctors, educationalists and philologists..

Plans for the first volume, which is almost completed, reveal the broad international range. Thirty-five of the writers are from the Federal Republic, fifteen from Canada and the United States, 34 from other European countries, four from Africa and one each from South America and Australia..

Subjects dealt with in the first volume, which covers the letter A, include Abraham, Achilles, Ageing, Albertus Magnus, Apes and Astronaut Jokes..

Subject matter, ranging from ancient Egypt to the present age, from Australia to Argentina, goes far beyond the original aim of "systematically classifying and analysing the written and spoken narrative forms of Europe and European-influenced cultures including the early Eurasian and Mediterranean cultures though excluding races with no written culture." The articles will appear in alphabetical order and consist of regional research reports about individual countries and biographies of researchers, collectors and writers, they will outline the theories and methods of narrative research, discuss problems surrounding the definition of the genre, problems of style and structure and questions of social context and provide short outlines about important types and motifs.

The narrative material will also be examined from the viewpoint of other branches of science and the current state of research will also be outlined. Records, fairy-tale parks and other ways in which fairy-tales are passed on in modern society will also be considered.

Looking Backward

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

30 YEARS AGO

January 4, 1945

Police answered 1,741 calls in the city since September 1, 1944. This averages about 435 calls per month or 14 per day. Aside from the routine calls there were additional motor vehicle accidents investigated.

The city Department of Public Works is trying to clear local streets of snow as speedily as possible but the travelled portion of certain streets has been narrowed considerably owing to the piling of snow along the curb. Provincial Police vehicles are to be housed in downtown garages in order that they may be ready for service in any emergency.

Ulster: Long-Term Prospects for Peace Are Not Considered Good

By KEVIN DOYLE

LONDON (CP) — An extension of the Irish Republican Army's Christmas ceasefire has been greeted here with lukewarm government optimism that it may signal the coming of peace in Northern Ireland.

But long term students of IRA tactics are treating it as little more than another in a series of pauses which the organization uses to re-group and re-equip its scattered guerrilla forces.

The extreme Provisional wing of the IRA is known to have been severely divided about extending the ceasefire for two weeks beyond its Tuesday night deadline.

As a result, many observers believe that hardliners in the organization will almost certainly insist on an immediate resumption of the guerrilla campaign when the ceasefire expires unless extensive concessions are offered by the British govrnment.

Northern Ireland Secretary Marlyn Rees has already agreed to free 20 detainees in Ulster, parole 50 others and release about 100 sentenced prisonrs.

He has also pledged to consider ways during the next two weeks of gradually reducing the 14,000-strong British military presence in Ulster.

The IRA says these measures do not go nearly far enough but that they do provide sufficient reason for abstaining from violence for another 14 days to see what other measures the British may have in store.

Some government ministers contend that the way now has been opened for a step-by-step approach to peace with each side making concessions in response to moves by the other.

But this view overlooks the vital fact that the ultimate aim of the IRA is to drive the British from Ulster and unite the north and south of Ireland under one government. The organization has shown over and over again that it will be satisfied with nothing less.

It has also shown since 1969 that it can bomb and kill in Northern Ireland—and now in England as well—in defiance of military opposition and security operations.

The British government, on the other hand, insists that union of Ulster with the Irish republic can only take place with the consent of the majority of people in the north. But the majority is Protestant and implacably opposed to breaking the British connection.

If, in fact, the Labor government here has privately reversed itself and decided to begin a long-term disentanglement from Ulster and has secretly communicated this to the IRA—something which cannot entirely be ruled out—then the ceasefire might be extended indefinitely.

However, many observers believe the current extension is more likely doomed to be a short-term phenomenon.

The IRA was under great pressure from its supporters in Ireland and in England to halt the terrorist campaign during Christmas and to ease somewhat the general revulsion felt caused by the bombing of targets and innocent civilians in England.

In addition, the pause provides time to re-consider basic strategy, step up recruiting and plan new attacks.

IRA members in public statements indicate their conviction that by bombing English cities, they have forced the government into making concessions. Nothing else, they say, would have accomplished this.

With this confidence and with their proven ability to outflank the best efforts of the security forces, the IRA seems unlikely to switch suddenly to a pattern of peaceful compromise and negotiation.

Tourist's Moscow Experience

Shoulder Bag Fished From River

JOHN K. COOLEY
in The Christian Science Monitor

Fadia Khalaf, a girl tourist from Lebanon, was leaning over the parapet to get a better view of the Moskva River and the Kremlin walls on the opposite bank.

Suddenly the buckle of her shoulder bag snapped, and the bag slipped into the river with a dismal plop and a slow gurgle of bubbles. With it sank Fadia's passport, driver's license traveler's checks, and prospects of a carefree two weeks in Russia.

Fadia and her family were on their first visit to Moscow with a tour group from Beirut.

Moscow's midmorning automobile traffic whizzed by, oblivious of their distress. Practically no one noticed that Ludmila Sorokina, the French-speaking Intourist guide assigned to lead the group, had disappeared into a telephone booth across the street.

Nothing moved on the river but a gray patrol boat the Pounteiski No. 23. Soviet militiamen kept watch from the bridge. Since the Pounteiski was the only hope in sight, the group hailed her loudly and frantically, just as she was about to pass under a nearby bridge and disappear.

A couple of the militiamen on her aft deck seemed to be noticing. One even waved back. Then, as 30 Lebanese and 3 Americans cheered loudly, the river craft's engines chugged into reverse gear.

Accompanied by shouts of encouragement, the Pounteiski spun around and edged alongside the bank. Three militiamen with grappling hooks on long poles came on deck. Ludmilla reappeared and joined as the tourists shouted directions and encouragement.

The first grapple brought up an old shoe. More junk came up on the hooks. Then the man on the stern reached as far as he could, and Fadia's bag emerged from the depths of the Moskva, dangling by its strap.

The tourists responded with hearty shouts of "spaseebo!" (thank you). The Soviet militiamen indicated in sign language, "We were only doing our job, ma'am."

The Pounteiski No. 3 chugged away amid repeated cheers from the rver bank. "Isn't that something?" said Fadia's aunt. "They turned around and came back just because we hailed them!"

Ludmilla, questioned in the bus, modestly confessed the truth: from the phone booth, she had contacted a central headquarters which had immediately radoed the Pounteiski to change course and lend a hand.

In the days ahead, this group of tourists sometimes had cause to chafe and complain about Intourist regimentation. But from that moment, nobody questioned Intourist efficiency.

Modern World Rejects View Of Bible Poor People Heroic

By GEORGE CORNELL

AP Religion Writer

They are the many, the legions of the wretched. They are ragged, gaunt, hollow-eyed, wracked by scurvy and beriberi. They swarm the refugee camps, shantytowns, back alleys and garbage dumps of the earth. They are the poor, unloved by the world and unlovely.

Yet Jesus said, "Blessed are you poor, for yours is the kingdom of God."

It is a strang appraisal, echoed throughout biblical teachings and reflected in the observations of modern scholars—that there is something heroic and revealing in the poor that can elevate the human race.

Yet in the modern world, they are rejected and denied.

They are a bony mother in Bombay, gnawing at roots, a baby tugging at her dry breasts . . . a spindle-legged Cambodian boy, his stomach swollen, his breathing labored, as kwashiorkor, caused by lack of protein, gradually kills him.

They are an emaciated African tribesman, rocking to and fro, murmuring names of his favorite cattle dead from drought . . . a skeletal pack of humanity in Bangladesh, struggling in a feeding line for a cup of gruel . . . a small Bolivian girl, puffy faced and scaly skinned, digging through trash crawling with flies, hunting scraps.

They are the children of the haunted eyes, stunted physically and mentally. They are the sufferers of marasmus, a depletion of nutrients that causes the body to feed on its own substance until death comes.

They are apathetic, too weak to work long enough to earn enough to get food to work longer. They are anemic, sapped by diarrhea, invaded by infections and respiratory disease, a billion poor around the earth.

And Jesus said: "Blessed are you that hunger now, for you shall be satisfied. Bless are you that weep now, for you shall laugh."

It is an odd, baffling vision.

The implication is that the means for the healing and wholeness of the world resides in a potentiality latent among the poor.

The specified urgency is not just that the rich should help the poor, but that doing so is the only way to save themselves.

"I will spew you out of my mouth," the Holy Voice says to the greedy in the Book of Revelation. "For you say, 'I am rich, I have prospered, and I need nothing,' not knowing that you are wretched, pitiable, poor, blind and naked."

It is an ominous note for a world in which an affluent one-fifth of its people devour 80 per cent of its goods, manoeuvring to shore up their holdings, engaging in nuclear rivalries to fortify their predominance.

They spend 27 times more for military gear than the $8 billion annual total for rectifying the economic plight of poor countries.

Yet as scientific and United Nations studies have maintained, the present technologies and productivity of the earth are suficient to stabilize and sustain all its people if co-ordinated in mutual goals and systems for its total well-being.

That would require trusting generosity among the richer nations, even to trimming their own affluent consumption. But there are various indications, biblical and otherwise, that their own conditions would be bettered through collaboration with the poor.

"Abstinence is an enrichment of the spirit," observes anthropologist Margaret Mead.

As Jesus put it, "Everyone who exalts himself will be humbled, but he who humbles himself will be exalted."

The present-day affluent societies hum with warnings about the hazards of over-affluence.

As Pope Paul VI put it, "Life-styles based on greater consumption have deleterious effects on nature, the environment and finally on the moral fibre of man."

Rabbi Marc Tanenbaum of the American Jewish Committee says: "We have before us another holocaust in which tens of millions of people may die, and if we stand by and let it happen, it will mean the brutalization and dehumanization of civilization."

But what, apart from a more balanced, caring international order, can the poor do for the rich?

Perhaps a suggestion might be found in memories of the Depression, when hard times generated neighborly sympathies, when shared trouble drew people closer together and made for deeper loyalties.

Perhaps a fifth-century Roman nobleman, a non-Christian defending Christians before Emperor Hadrian, gave a clue to it in describing their behavior:

"If they see a stranger, they take him home as though he were a real brother. . . . If one is poor and there isn't enough food to go around, they fast several days to give him the food he needs. . . This is really a new kind of person. There is something divine in them."

It is a mystery, a strange upside-down quality in life which Jesus couched in an intriguing image: "Many that are first will be last, and the last first."

Today's Thoughtful Pilgrim Is Awaiting Call from God

Dr. Gordon C. Smyth

More people than we suspect, on this feverish planet, wistfully hope for a "person to person" telephone call. A Christian philosopher says that the thoughtful pilgrim of the second half of the 20th century goes through three stages.

First of all, he feels rootless and insecure. You do not need to be told who never had it so good. It is the transport companies. This external situation – so many following their jobs – is symptomatic of an internal condition.

The second stage of the pilgrimage is when the thoughtful traveller begins asking vital questions about life's meaning. What is it all about??

The third stage comes when the modern pilgrim decides that the answers are not in us. It is then that he is most receptive to a long distance call from beyond this earth..

To be alive, to be something more than static in a dynamic universe, is to be waiting, all on edge, in a crowded lounge, for a person to person call from God. How can you tell that the call is real?

It will indeed be personal. Here is a story from New Haven, Connecticut. A mother went to her minister and said, "I have a problem about my little girl's prayers. She loves to pray every night. Of course, we've taught her the Lord's Prayer. That's my problem. She doesn't want to say the correct version. What should I do?'"

The minister asked, "What do you think is wrong?" "Well," replied the mother, "every night she says very seriously and confidently, 'Our Father who art in New Haven, how did you know my name'?'"

The minister said, "I would not correct her. She has got hold of two deep theological truths which most grown-ups haven't got first, that God is everywhere, even in New Haven; and second, that he does know her name.'"

The child in that delightful story was under the influence of what the late Gilbert Murray of Oxford University referred to as "a very old ineradicable instinct." Trust and cultivate it. This instinct is the radiant centre of the Gospel..

Togetherness is instinctive too. God's long distance call becomes real when we associate with others in spiritual fellowship. If the New Testament knows nothing about a Christian recluse, it is because the Founder of Christianity, and his Apostles, knew human nature..

Take a pair of tongs and lift a live coal out of the fireplace. Watch the flame die and the coal become a black cinder. In this world, which is so rapidly being de-personalized, find the warmth of some church. Add your own warmth to it..

This is the second test. Does the personal call from long distance send you out into a fellowship that transcends barriers of race, class or status? Does it?

Brother Assassinated Good King Wenceslas

PRAGUE (CP) — Good King Wenceslas of the popular English carol was never a king.

He lived his short life in what now is Czechoslovakia more than 1,000 years ago and as a prince was assassinated on the steps of a church at his brother's bidding in the year 929.

Wenceslas was known for his mercy and concern for the needy and supported the introduction of Christianity. After his death tales of his goodness spread and in time a cult grew up around him. He was canonized and eventually became the patron saint of Czechoslovakia.

Some 400 years after the assassination, Charles IV of Bohemia brought Wenceslas' body to Prague and had it buried in St. Vitus Cathedral, the Westminster Abbey of Czechoslovakia and the place where the nation's kings and queens are buried. A chapel was built above the burial spot which still is known as Wenceslas Chapel.

Paintings of the saint's life and death decorate the chapel walls which are set with gold and encrusted with 1,345 polished amethysts, agates and jasper. A statue, larger than life, of the "good king" reveals him in the garb of a medieval knight. The tomb also is decorated with semi-precious stones.

The chapel was the focal point of the growing Wenceslas cult and he became the mystical protector of the country. In time, kings were crowned in the chapel with what has become known as the St. Wenceslas crown, which is set with sapphires, emeralds and pearls.

A staircase leads from the chapel down to a chamber in which the coronation jewels are kept. These are not on regular view but are occasionally put on display.

Other churches and chapels were dedicated to the saint, not only in his native land but in other countries of Europe.

How did Wenceslas become the subject of a Christmas carol in England?

Ann, the daughter of Charles IV, became the wife of King Richard II of England when worship of the saint was popular. She took books and stories of her country with her to England and she knew many legends about the saint. It was on one of these that an unknown Englishman based the carol.

On Wenceslas Square, in front of Prague's National Museum, now stands a magnificent statue of Wenceslas on horseback. The square is to Prague what the Via Veneto is to Rome and the Champs Elysees to Paris. It is the main shopping and social centre of the city and Wenceslas, astride his horse, looks down on it all.

The statue and the square are in more ways than one the heart of the city. Since the statue was put up in 1912, it has been the rallying point for Czech patriots during stressful times—the First World, the Nazi occupation of the Second World War and various political crises. And today when a Czech is given a state funeral it is in the National Museum on Wenceslas Square that his body lies in state.

Never a King

Good King Wenceslas was never a king but died a prince on the steps of a church in Czechoslovakia in 929. The popular English carol was based on books and stories taken to England by the wife of Richard II, who was the daughter of Charles IV of Bohemia. Charles IV brought Wenceslas' body to Prague and had it buried in St. Vitus Cathedral. A statue to the good king is shown in the cathedral. (CP Photo)

Consumers Resolve To Save Money

It's not too late for a money-saving resolution for the new year: be determined that smart marketing techniques aren't going to separate you from your money in the supermarket.

It's been proven that 50 per cent of all purchases in supermarkets are not planned by shoppers - in other words, they're impulsive buys. For that reason, supermarkets like to put high profit impulse merchandise right at eye level so that when you're reaching for the staples, you'll see and be tempted by the goodies..

There's even a textbook - Modern Supermarket Operations — to tell supermarkets where to put what in order to get you to buy things you don't need..

Even better than eye-level shelves are aisle-end display units. A study in the United States showed that sales of products changed from locations along aisles to aisle-end locations increased by nearly 700 per cent.

Apples are costing you 25 per cent less this year than last according to the Canadian Fruit Wholesalers' Association.

They're just one of several fruits and vegetables that are actually cheaper..

According to a government survey, onions are down about 30 per cent, potatoes, 28 per cent. Rutabaga prices are stable..

Imported fresh produce is at its lowest level in years: bananas are reported down 10 per cent and oranges more than 20 per cent. Broccoli, corn and sweet potatoes are cheaper, too..

Prosecutions under the department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs have proven that what you say - if you're advertising items for sale - had better be true..

For example, regular price and ordinary price must refer to the prevailing price in the advertiser's selling area ... not whatever the advertiser thinks looks good. "Special" must refer specifically to prices which are below those at which the article is usually sold. "Cents-off" labels leave the manufacturer liable for misleading price representation if the regular price of the article is increased while the "cents-off" label still appears on the article..

And finally, a sale that goes on for 114 days of the year is not a sale and prices charged for the other days cannot be described as ordinary prices..

For more information about misleading advertising, write the department, Information and Public Relations Branch, 22nd Floor, Place du Portage, Ottawa-Hull, K1A 0C9.

Ann Landers

Granny Must Be a Nebbish

Dear Ann Landers: This is a four-generation problem. I hope you are up to it.

My dear mother is 83 years old. She is still alert mentally but let's face it, she should not be expected to chase after four active kids, ranging in age from three to 11. Grandma had surgery four years ago and is not very steady on her feet.

I have explained all this to my daughter-in-law, but it goes in one ear and out the other. She still puts pressure on grandma to come over and take care of the children when she must work odd hours on her part-time job.

In addition to her own four kids there's another three-year-old over there whose mother pays my daughter-in-law to keep him from 8 till 5. I'm sure this child's mother doesn't know her youngster is often being cared for by an 83-year-old lady. Your opinion is wanted.—Slow Boil

Dear Boil: I think your son should step in (not you) and tell his wife she is taking advantage of the dear old doll.

In the meantime, I've said it before, but I'll say it again. It takes two to create a situation such as this one—an inconsiderate dame who would exploit an older person and a nebbish who would allow herself to be used so badly.

Dear Ann Landers: Our new little daughter-in-law is precious. She and our son are living with us until they can find a suitable apartment. My husband and I enjoy them very much and they seem to enjoy us.

The problem is that I have a strong desire to correct her on several breaches of etiquette. The thing that bothers me most is the way she uses butter. Instead of putting some on her own plate, she takes the master butter knife and smears an entire ear of corn (or a large piece of French bread) straight from the butter dish intended for all.

Not only is this most unappetizing to watch, but it takes a long time because she puts butter on almost everything—peas, carrots, green beans, rolls—even steak.

How can I correct her gently, so as not to hurt her feelings?—Concerned M.I.L.

Dear M.: No way. Tell your son and let him correct her "gently." No matter how "precious" she is, any attempt to improve your daughter-in-law's table manners will put a crimp in your relationship—if not outwardly, inwardly. It's not worth it.

Dear Ann Landers: I know how you feel about people who don't write thank-you notes and I am in full agreement, but please say something about not jumping to conclusions until the "guilty" person has had an opportunity to speak in his or her own behalf.

For example, at the funeral of a neighbor I noticed an especially beautiful funeral wreath. I asked who had sent it. The sister of the deceased said sadly: "We don't know. There was no card. Two calls to the florist proved fruitless."

Last month my sister was a patient in a well-known hospital. She received a lovely plant. It was not intended for her but for a woman whose last name was the same as hers. She wouldn't have known it had she not found the card in the hall, on the floor.

When our daughter was married we received two gifts with no cards. The sender of one was identified by the store. The other was never identified because it was brought to the church. So please, Ann, ask people to telephone and ask if their gift was received if they don't get an acknowledgment after a reasonable time.—Houston

Dear H.: I have suggested it on several occasions, but once more won't hurt. Thank you for suggesting it.

Senior Citizens Have Useful Role

What could be more appropriate than for our grown-up-and-grown-older Canadians to find ways of meeting one another's needs? The loneliness of the widows, the idleness of the older couple left at loose ends when all the children have left the nest. The puzzlement of grandfathers in trying to adapt to changing times. — These are all situations and attitudes which need help.

Such was the thinking of the Senior Citizens' Bureau established last September in Toronto, by the Ministry of Community and Social Services. Persons who are retired and over 55 are recruited in many of Ontario's smaller communities — places where there is no established agency to care for the aged.

But the senior person who takes on this task in each community has received some training first, at the Bureau in Toronto. He learns how to be a senior volunteer, getting information about provincial and federal programs as well as social service agencies where he is going to be. Then he gets to know just what there is to work with where he lives.

He may counsel or steer people around to where they can get help. He may provide a listening ear, or help fill out an application for old age security.

They play it loose, learning to meet situations which would bring dismay to less knowing volunteer workers.

Depending on the community, the senior volunteer can be involved in any combination of the following:

Visiting a shut-in; answering general questions on how to get into an Ontario Housing project; going with someone to a home for the aged to find out what it is like; organizing a bus trip; helping a senior word a letter correctly and providing the address for an enquiry concerning ar Veterans' Allowances; assisting in the establishment of a meals-on-wheels program; indicating, to the community social workers, seniors in need of assistance; organizing a tax clinic where seniors can find out, from the revenue and taxation representative, answers to any questions they might have; arranging shopping trips for those who are confined to their rooms.

The senior works without salary, although expenses up to $50 a month are met, covering stationery, car mileage and other practical items. So far the project has done a lot of good.

Let's hear from any of those young-old-age persons who are a part of volunteer services in a Canadian community.

'Deaf Can't Escape Vibrations'

WINNIPEG (CP) — Few deaf people ever escape the strange vibration land which holds them captive and prevents them from becoming a functioning part of society.

Yet Joanne Nielsen, an 18-year-old University of Manitoba student, has transcended the noiseless world where she may spend the rest of her life with such determination, will power, and strength of character that many people are unaware of her infliction until told.

"I only give myself away when I ask them if they would please repeat themselves because I'm deaf," she says.

"People tell me I speak very well. I try to do my best."

Joanne was able to learn to speak without the benefit of formal therapy. She relied almost exclusively on her parents' guidance and instruction. Measles destroyed the nerves of her inner ears when she was two years old.

"I don't think of myself as being deaf. I hear with my eyes instead of my ears. If I see a bird I'll imagine what it sounds like."

The ordeal of attending school in her childhood and the problems associated with growing up have left vivid memories.

"When I was younger I couldn't understand why I was deaf and the other children were not. I often came home crying."

Her self-pity turned to determination, however, when she visited a severely handicapped cousin paralysed by polio and Joanne realized things could have been much worse.

Elementary school life proved difficult. Periodically, her schoolmates would tease her for wearing a hearing aid, and on one occasion a pupil broke Joanne's eardrum by tapping her listening device.

High school presented a new assortment of hurdles and at times they seemed insurmountable.

"After I started high school, I felt like quitting many times."

But she persevered, mainly to justify the faith her parents had placed in her.

"I kept my troubles to myself and tried harder."

When she graduated from high school last summer, she received a special blinking alarm clock to recognize her outstanding scholastic achievements. She has also received recognition from the Canadian Cultural Association for poetry.

Perhaps the most remarkable achievement Joanne has accomplished is her ability to communicate verbally in a fluid and cohesive manner.

Ozone Reduced

Spray Cans May Endanger Life

NEW YORK (Reuter) — The "spray can," the convenient dispenser found in most kitchens or bathrooms, has come under scrutiny as a possible peril to all living things.

A growing number of prominent scientists are saying that the gas used to pressurize aerosol cans may have terrifying effects on human health and environment by the end of this century.

The gas, also used in refrigeration systems, comes in several forms which are all referred to as fluorocarbons.

At one time these gases were considered highly beneficial as propellants and refrigerants. They are virtually insoluble in water, do not react with chemicals in the air or oceans and are not known to be involved in any biological degradation.

However, since last summer a number of scientists have become concerned about the buildup of fluorocarbons in the stratosphere, a blanket of chemicals between 15 and 22 miles above the earth's surface.

The main ingredient of the stratosphere is ozone, composed of three oxygen atoms, which performs the life-saving function of protecting the earth's surface from most of the sun's deadly ultraviolet radiation.

However, ozone is highly unstable and readily combines with other substances, including fluorocarbons from spray cans and refrigeration systems.

When ozone breaks down, becoming molecular oxygen, it allows more ultraviolet rays to reach the earth's surface, with serious consequences.

Among other things, scientists say a reduction in the ozone layer would cause a drastic increase in skin cancer, especially among light-skinned people.

It would also have detrimental effects on animal and plant life, both on the earth's surface and in the ocean.

A decrease in the ozone layer over a long period might also adversely affect the world's weather, with at least one scientist predicting the possibility of another ice age.

The ozone-depletion problem first came to light in the late 1960s when environmentalists said the United States-proposed supersonic transport (SST) airplane might greatly reduce the ozone on the stratosphere with its exhaust.

While widespread interest in the problem waned with the demise of the SST, several scientists pursued the matter, realizing there were other, more prevalent potential threats to the ozone layer.

The first to publish their findings were two physical chemists at the University of California at Irvine, Frank Rowland and Mario Molina.

While stating they were only postulating a theory based on a limited model, the two scientists predicted last July that increased production and use of fluorocarbons in the world might result in a 10 per cent decrease in the ozone layer within 50 to 80 years.

Later, two University of Michigan scientists, Ralph Cicerone and Richard Stolarski, used the Rowland-Molina model and a computer to make similar—but more dire—predictions. They said there might be a 10 per cent reduction in the ozone layer within 15 years.

Three Harvard University atmospheric scientists then took the problem even further, developing more sophisticated models for a number of possibilities, ranging from an increased use of fluorocarbons to a complete stoppage of their use.

That team—Michael McElroy, Steven Wolfsy and Nien Dak Sze—predicted a decrease in ozone ranging from five per cent by the year 2000, at best to 40 per cent by 1995, at worst.

While all three studies are merely hypotheses, they have generated enough concern within the scientific community that the National Academy of Sciences has established a special committee to study the problem.

And the scientists themselves have become so concerned that they have taken their case to Congress.

In November, the Natural Resources Defence Council, which does research and lobbying on environmental issues, asked the Consumer Product Safety Commission to outlaw aerosol cans which use propellants suspected of breaking down the ozone layer.

The House of Representatives opened hearings to consider legislation on fluorocarbons, including a call for extensive research.

A number of atmospheric scientists appeared before a House subcommittee to urge legislation that would ensure the highest quality of knowledge in this area.

"The impact we are discussing today is potentially so serious that we cannot afford to take chances," McElroy told the subcommittee.

However, there were others, most of them from industries which make use of fluorocarbons, who minimized the potential dangers.

Ralph Engeles, executive director of the Chemical Specialties Manufacturers Association, said: "Theories that continued use of fluorocarbons may deplete the ozone layer are highly speculative."

Ten Rules For Raising Bad Children

NOTTINGHAM, England (AP) — Ten commandments for those who want to bring up their children the wrong way have been compiled by the vicar of nearby Bramcote parish, Rev. James Hamilton.

His list of things not to do:

1. Never make them do anything they don't want to.
2. Expect them to have standards for life without giving them a basis.
3. Leave them to make up their own minds about God and Jesus.
4. Expect them to do as you say, rather than to do as you do.
5. Assume that they are little angels.
6. Assume they are immune from bad influences.
7. Assume someone else will teach them the facts of life.
8. Keep them sheltered from the nasty things in the world.
9. Never have time to be their friend and go out to work all day to give them everything they need instead.
10. Never inquire where they have been or what they have eben doing.

Button Collection At Glamore House

They're made of china, glass, wood and metal, celluloid, bone, papier mache, silver lustre, black glass, pearl, shell and even something called vegetable ivory.

They come in sizes from less than ¼ inch to several inches in diameter.

They're buttons and one of the most avid collectors of them was Beverly MacDonald, wife of widely-known local artist Manly MacDonald.

Both Mr. and Mrs. MacDonald are dead but their lives' work — hers, painting and collecting antiques; his, painting — have been commemorated in the Manly MacDonald Room of the Hasting County Museum, supported by the University Women's Club.

Last summer the club sponsored the sorting and mounting of Mrs MacDonald's collection, donated by her daughter, S.B. MacDonald, of Ottawa, by Anne Sisson.

It took Anne — with help from a button collecting expert — 50 hours to sort and mount just some of the large collection.

"I thought a button was a button before," Anne says, "but I learned that isn't true."

After sorting out 800 of the "best" of the collection, Anne cleaned them and mounted them on display cards.

The cards, Anne explains, categorize buttons either by size, composition or subject matter. There are cards of diminutives used in ladies' dress and cards of buttons with pictures and cards of pearl buttons.

There's even a card of Elizabeth 1: coronation buttons.

Some of the more interesting buttons are from English hunt clubs, picture fairy tales or were made to hang on the four corners of veils.

The buttons are displayed in the Manly MacDonald Room at Glanmore House.

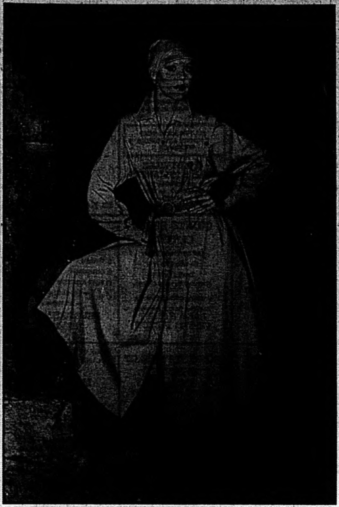
A Look Ahead to Spring



Tent Dress

The big top tent dress was the hit of Pat McDonagh collection shown recently in Toronto. It was part of the army fatigues group on olive drab polyester-and-cotton. (CP Photo)

TORONTO (CP) — "Women are being honest again in fashion," says Pat McDonagh at the preview of her spring collection in Toronto. "They don't feel they have to follow fashion trends." So Pat's collection features co-ordinates.

Pat has designed a completely co-ordinated wardrobe in various groups and the wearer can choose from the items and know the over-all look will be right. A woman may just change the short skirt for a long one for evening and wear the same blouse, shoes and accessories.

Pat's spring collection is made up of shirts, tops, dresses and jackets. There's the army fatigues group in olive drab color and it includes a big top tent dress, a shirt dress, safari suit with culottes, wrap skirt, pants and shirt tops.

Another group is in clinging India pebble cottons with long and short dresses. For late-day Pat likes twin beige prints in crepe de chine and chiffon. Resort wear includes several culotte outfits with ladylike hot pants, worn with in or out blouses.

All the fashion news for spring was to be found in these co-ordinated groups. There are back wrapped skirts, short sleeves, square necklines and loose fitting dresses worn with or without a belt. Pat McDonagh likes purity in fabric and her collection stressed cotton.

Pat's clothes are bought by major department stores and specialty shops in Canada, U.S. and England.

'Queen of the Cloakroom' At Paris' Celebrated Maxim's

PARIS (Reuter) — In 40 years as queen of the cloakroom at the celebrated Paris restaurant, Maxim's, Madame Paulette never once used a ticket. Her photographic memory registered every face from Aristotle Onassis to the romantic young couple out for a splurge.

At least 300 customers a day pour into the velvet temple of French cuisine but the imperturbable Paulette always handed out the right mink cloak to the right heiress.

"Maxim's had all the cloakroom contents insured but they never used the policy while I was there." Such is the proud boast of the woman who has just retired, aged 72, after four decades watching the rich and famous file past her theatre - like box in the restaurant entrance.

Madame Paulette, as she was known to all, said: "When I see a face once that's enough. I should have been a diplomat. With my memory I could snap every face as it came in."

One lesson she learned was discretion. Asked to reveal any secrets she might have picked up in her long career, she will only smile and reply airily: "So many loves, so many dramas have started in Maxim's."

She confessed to having two special favorites—Onassis and the late Duke of Windsor.

"Aristotle Onassis is the super client for me," she said. "He has so many qualities. He is always kind and considerate. When I was forced to retire with a rheumatic knee he sent me 36 lovely roses.

"The Duke of Windsor was a charming man. He always wore this beautiful fur coat and every time I put it on for him he promised to give it to me one day."

Her constant companion for the last 10 years has been her corpulent dachshund Nathalie, known to the staff as "the only virgin in Maxim's."

The dog, a gift from an admiring Venezuelan ambassador, was a major attraction at Maxim's but all efforts to mate her with such aristocratic suitors as Baron Guy de Rothschild's dachshund were greeted with a nip in the ankle.

Madame Paulette, after years of working until three in the morning, now retires to her cluttered apartment where two solid silver candlesticks from the management and a silver table from the personnel take pride of place.

In the apartment, near enough to the restaurant to hear a cork pop, she lives with her husband Tony Payne, a British saxophone player she met when he was playing in Maxim's orchestra before the Second World War, and her daughter.

But clearly she misses the beautiful people at the restaurant on the Rue Royale near the Place de la Concorde that boasts three stars in that culinary bible, the Michelin Guide.

"Maxim's is a place you get very involved in," she said. "My work there was never a drag."

With a philosophical tap on her rheumatic leg she sighed and said, "If it hadn't been for the knee I'd still be handing out the coats."

Avon Lady at 78

TORONTO (CP) — Della Goard thought it was time to fight inflation.

So, at the age of 78, she got a job as an Avon lady.

"I won't make a fortune—but every little bit counts," said Mrs. Goard, who figured she makes $35, after expenses, for about 48 hours of work.

Mrs. Goard said her greatest fear is that rising rents will force her out of her comfortable one-bedroom apartment and into a senior citizens' home.

"You don't even have a bedroom in a senior citizens' home," she said. "I'm used to space."

Mrs. Goard receives a $190-a-month pension plus $22 monthly under the Ontario guaranteed annual income program.

Most of it goes to pay the rent, $150 a month.

"I get so scared when I hear them on the TV news predicting that rents are going up by 30 per cent," she said.

Her other big expense is drugs. She spends about 30 a month on drugs not covered by the province's price prescription drug plan which makes a list of 1,200 drugs free to needy senior citizens.

That leaves $22 a month for food, but Mrs. Goard said she is not a big eater.

Mrs. Goard, who retired only four years ago from a job in a hospital kitchen, said she enjoys her door-to-door sales career.

"It's sometimes hard to meet your neighbors, and this is one way to get acquainted."

Blame Slump

NEW YORK (AP) — The countrywide economic slump and other factors are blamed for Weston's Shoppers City Incorp. for filing for reorganiation under federal bankruptcy laws. Weston has stores in Olean, Watertown, Massena, Syracuse, Utica, Ithaca, Oswego, Binghampton and Corning, as well as in Indiana, Pennsylvania and Maryland. A company attorney says Weston's troubles started in 1972 when floods from hurricane Agnes destroyed the merchandise in its Olean store.

Campaign Against Cruelty

BOMBAY (CP — Traffic in Bombay's busy Crawford Market area ground to a halt as a young woman engaged in a heated debate with the driver of a horse-drawn vehicle.

Sashikala Jain, wife of a millionaire businessman was carrying on her one-woman crusade against cruelty to horses.

Bombay has an estimated 700 victorias, one-horse, four-wheeled vehicles. They were so named because the first of them was commissioned by a British official during Queen Victoria's reign.

Mrs. Jain, a 32-year-old mother of three who has offered to buy up horses whose owners abuse them, does not seek police help when she spots an offending victoria driver.

"My idea is to create public opinion in defence of these animals," she said. "So when I see a driver beating his horse I create a scene and gather a crowd."

It works. At least 25 shamefaced drivers have promised Mrs. Jain that they would treat their horses kindly.

She is only one of a number of well-organized animal-lovers in a number of Indian cities.

A group of wealthy philanthropists is active in New Delhi on behalf of bullocks, oxen and monkeys. They go around animal markets to ensure that they are treated humanely.

Several leading newspapers have published reports that cattle awaiting sale in markets are not given adequate food and water.

The animal - lovers are particularly worried by the chaotic conditions in the capital's monkey market. A large number of monkeys are exported to Western countries for medical research.

Recently, a group of them followed a truck transporting 20 monkeys to the export yard of a merchant, collected a big crowd of sympathizers and threatened to set the animals free if they were not treated properly.

The merchant gave a written promise that he would henceforth transport monkeys in spacious cages and ensure they were fed.

Too Much Exercise Can Be Unhealthy

CHICAGO (AP) — Even lazy people can be physically fit, says a Nebraska doctor who warns that too much exercise, like too much of anything else, isn't good for you.

Dr. Kenneth Rose, an emergency physician at Bryan Memorial Hospital in Loncoln, Neb., has just published a book called The Lazy Man's Guide to Physical Fitness, in collaboration with Jack Dies Martin, a Chicago science writer.

Dr. Rose is director of the physical-fitness research laboratory at the University of Nebraska and former chairman of the American Medical Association committee on physical fitness.

The 62-year-old doctor noted that since the jogging fad started a few years ago, many persons jog four or five miles a day.

But Dr. Rose said a study of varsity runners at the university showed that the levels of potassium in their bloodstream dropped below normal during training.

"This demonstrated that distance runners progressively lose potassium, and this can be dangerous," the physician said, noting that potassium is essential for muscle tone.

Dr. Rose advocates some form of exercise for everyone, noting that death from heart disease in men has increased by 2,000 per cent in the last 30 years.

He said a few basic exercises done a couple of times a week will keep people within what Dr. Rose calls the "circle of conditioning" they must maintain in order to protect themselves against such diseases as heart trouble, high blood pressure and respiratory problems.

He recommends exercise aimed at increasing muscle strength and flexibility and, most important, aerobic function—the ability of the body to take in oxygen and get it to the cells.

In addition to certain specific exercises, Dr. Rose also recommends walking.

Nuclear Talks Held In India

NEW DELHI (CP) — Ivan Head, political advise to Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau, continued his talks with Indian officials Friday for the second day on the future of nuclear co-operation between the two countries.

Head met P. N. Dhar, secretary to the prime minister, and Foreign Secretary Kewal Singh separately. He had similar meetings with them Thursday, immediately after arriving for a four-day stay in the Indian capital.

There has been no official comment on progress of the talks so far.

Canada suspended supplies of nuclear equipment and materials to Indian following differences between the two countries over the first underground nuclear test conducted by India last May.

Blood Shipped To Montreal

MONTREAL (CP)—Emergency supplies of blood from transfusion centres in Toronto, Hamilton and Ottawa were sent to Montreal Friday to bolster the city's nearly depleted blood bank.

Red Cross spokesman Marguerite Wilson said the out-of-town supplies "should see us through the weekend but by Monday the blood bank will be very low."

Hospitals throughout the city are using their diminished blood supply only in real emergencies, she said, and some are expected to call on their staff to donate extra blood during the weekend.

Rate Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Federal Reserve Board announced Friday it has granted permission for six of its district banks to lower the rate which the system charges for loans to commercial banks.

The action, taken in view "of the weakening in economic activity," trimmed the rate at the Boston, Philadelphia, Richmond, Cleveland, Dallas, and San Francisco banks to 7.25 per cent, effective Monday.

Pies Stolen

TORONTO (CP) — A thief with a dessert hangup drove away Friday with 18,000 frozen pies, valued at $19,500.

A $12,000 trailer, storing 7,200 Sara Lee apple pies, 4,800 cherry pies and 6,000 blueberry pies, was stolen from the Associated Freezer lot.

Fine Levied

GUEPH, Ont. (CP) — James Farrelly, 36, of Guelph was convicted in provincial court Friday on a charge of keeping dogs for the purpose of fighting.

He was fined $200 and ordered not to keep dogs or fighting cocks for two years.

Check Urged

TORONTO (CP) — A coroner's jury recommended stronger laws Friday for the construction and inspection of lodging houses adter investigating on Oct. 5 fire in a downtown rooming house in which Alexander Hodgson, 53, died.

Gillespie Says IBM Would Sell to Cuba

OTTAWA (CP) — IBM Canada Ltd. has expressed "sincere interest" in an export order for 7,000 typewriters to Cuba but has no contract yet, Industry Minister Alastair Gillespie said Friday.

Mr. Gillespie called a news conference to comment on reports IBM Canada was the second subsidiary in as many weeks to have an export sale blocked by a U.S. parent company for fear of running afoul of the U.S. Trading with the Enemy Act.

Another Toronto-based company, Cole division of Litton Business Equipment Ltd., earlier was told by its parent, Litton Industries Inc. of Beverly Hills, Calif., not to proceed with a $500,000 furniture order because of the U.S. act. Litton subsequently relented and has filed an application in Washington to allow the sale.

Earlier Friday, Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party leader, issued a statement calling for the government to "act now to put an end to interference by U.S. parent corporations in the trading activities of their Canadian subsidiaries."

Specifically, he asked that Mr. Gillespie state that all foreign-owned companies should act "within the spirit" of proposed legislation that would forbid implementing foreign laws in Canada affecting Canadian trade.

Mr. Broadbent said the government should introduce as a separate bill part of his proposed business competition legislation making it an offence for companies in Canada to obey foreign laws and directives.

IBM Canada president Lorne Lodge has denied any interference from its New York-based parent in preliminary talks for the $2-million typewriter sale to Cuba.

Mr. Gillespie said Cuba approached the Canadian embassy in Havana about an order for typewriters, specifying IBM Canada, and the government referred the request to IBM in Toronto, but so far there has been no direct contact between the Cuban government and IBM Canada.

He said IBM is concerned whether its patents will be respected by Cuba, and about servicing equipment after any sale. It is holding discussions with government patents officials to determine if Cuba subscribes to such international agreements.

Despite the differences between the cases of IBM Canada and Litton Industries, both are part of "a series of ongoing irritants" to Canadian trade that the proposed business competition legislation could help settle, Mr. Gillespie indicated.

He said no reply has been received to a protest note delivered after Christmas by external affairs to the U.S. state department over its informal advice to Litton Industries that U.S. enemy trading laws would be used to block its Canadian subsidiary's Cuban sale.

Ford Says Language Unwise

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford signed a major trade-reform measure Friday but expressed reservations "about the wisdom of legislative language that can only be seen as objectionable and discriminatory by other sovereign states."

Ford voiced the reservations as he spoke of sections of the bill relating to "our commercial and over-all relations with Communist countries."

He was rot specific but the legislation links a lowering of U.S. tariffs on Soviet products to an easing of Soviet emigration restrictions on minorities such as Jews.

The measure rewrites the U.S. basic trade law for the first time in 12 years, and Ford called it the most-significant trade legislation since the beginning of the trade agreements program four decades ago.

Oppose Curbs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The environmental protection agency (EPA) said Friday Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. have applied, as anticipated, for a one-year suspension of 1977 standards for reducing auto emissions of hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide.

Nordair Out

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian transport commission (CTC) has rejected an application by Nordair Ltd. to operate a regional air passenger service linking Montreal, Ottawa, Sudbury and Thunder Bay, Ont., and said Air Canada should be allowed to expand its service to the four cities.

Man Says Canada Let Him Rot in Mexican Jail

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 21-year-old Edmonton man held captive in a Mexican prison for nine months, arrived here late Friday.

Gordon Arnold said in an interview at Vancouver International Airport that he was tortured after complaining to Canadian immigration officials about life in the prison.

And he said he is displeased with the way the external affairs department treated him after it found out he had been jailed on a charge of possession of an ounce of marijuana last March.

"I don't think they give a damn," he said.

Mr. Arnold said that when Canadian authorities visited him four months after he was jailed, they saw things at their best.

When they left, he said the guards threatened and beat him and tried to extort $400 from his parents.

"They beat hell out of me after immigration officials saw me in the last week in September," he said.

Mr. Arnold said he was put in a cell with 14 other prisoners with no food or blankets for the first week and then moved in with six men in a 10-foot by 15-foot cell in which he stayed until he was released Thursday.

Olympic Torch Said Death Trap

OTTAWA (CP) — Plans to send a flaming six-foot-high torch across Canada on a flat-bed truck to promote the Canada Winter Games have had to be modified because of a safety hazard, a health department official said Friday.

Denis Rothier of Sport Canada said tests on the propane-fired torch showed it is a potential "death-trap." Sport Canada had planned to use the blazing torch to promote the Games, which will be held Feb. 11-23 in Lethbridge, Alta.

But the tests showed potential problems in regulating the flame which "scared the hell out of me," the official said.

The torch now will be lit only during special ceremonies at different centres across the country, he said.

Georgian Bay Land Use Freeze Applied

TORONTO (CP) — A freeze on development of unorganized land along the shoreline and among the islands of Georgian Bay has been announced by the Ontario ministry of natural resources.

The announcement Friday means that no buildings may be erected on such land without a special permit from the ministry's district manager in Parry Sound.

The new ruling covers land from the shore to 1,000 feet in land as well as islands.

The ministry said the move is an interim measure designed to protect the area until an official development plan for the Parry Sound district can be prepared.

Detective Absolved

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A charge of using excessive force on a juvenile, laid against a 20 year veteran of the Kingston police, was dismissed Friday.

Det. Michael Finn was cleared when Judge W. S. Lane dismissed the charge, laid following an interrogation in October.

It was alleged that Det. Finn slapped a 15-year-old boy in the face and stamped on the youth's leg while the boy was being questioned in custody.

Judge Lane heard four hours of testimony before dismissing the charge, saying he himself might well have done some of the things alleged to have been done by the policeman. . .

The court was told the youth was verbally abusive, punched the policeman and then tried to knee him in the groin.

Cautious Optimism: Mayor

New City Council In Chairs Monday

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

City council painstakingly processed its first organizational chore Friday for formally assuming its two-year term of office two days from now.

In an hours-long caucus meeting the new city hall administration selected appointees for the array of boards, commissions and committees which play the major support role in civic policy-making.

Meantime, Mayor Robin Jeffrey is putting final touches to an optimism-tinged speech that will set the theme for Monday morning's city council inauguration.

The council takes office after an election in which candidates were verbally mindful of tightening economic pressures and provincial government warnings about a year of financial crunch.

In keeping with tradition details of the inaugural address remain undefined until the mayor and the 10-member council formally take office.

But "cautious optimism is the way I term our city government for the next two years," Mayor Jeffrey said Friday.

Among significant pre-occupations she cited for the new city hall administration in that time:

— Downtown rehabilitation. A major spur will be the planned $5-million business block development recently announced for the core Bridge-Front streets sector.

— Area development. There will be more work with municipal neighbors on future expansion trends, the implications and the needs.

The laborious chore of organizing the roster of committee appointments began for council around 9 a.m. It was mid-afternoon before the caucus broke up, its task completed.

In all, appointees to some municipal groups had to be pored over and informally approved.

Official approval of the appointments list is one of the first moves by council immediately it takes office.

The inaugural formalities begin Monday at 11 a.m. Afterward, council will adjourn — only to meet in regular business session at 2 p.m.

Immediate measures on the agenda involve customary financing of city government until the budget is struck some months from now.

Up for approval will be bylaws authorizing an interim tax levy and borrowing of funds until taxes are collected. The borrowing ordinance is for $8,364,000.

Other bylaws include a $200,000 cost increase for East Dundas St. reconstruction — an updating of estimates following land-acquisition delays; new approval of the city's official plan incorporating some revisions — included the recently-disputed Hillcrest zoning issue.

Finishing Touch

Mayor Robin Jeffrey is putting final touches to inaugural speech this week. The address sets theme for civic attitudes as new city council takes office — a ceremony scheduled for city hall Monday.

Eight Apply For Force

PICTON — The Picton police commission has received eight applications for a job of constable with the town police force.

Commission secretary Edna Anderson said applicants will be interviewed later this month.

A vacancy on the police force was created when constable Charles Fletcher was promoted to chief of police effective January 1.

Police Seek Car

TWEED — Provincial police at Kaladar are searching for the driver of a car which struck a vehicle operated by an Ottawa woman on Highway 7, one miles west of Kaladar, at about 3 p.m. Friday.

Police said Barbara Rennie, 27, of 131 Woodridge Cres. was alone when her 1973-model car was struck on the left side. Damage was estimated at $350.

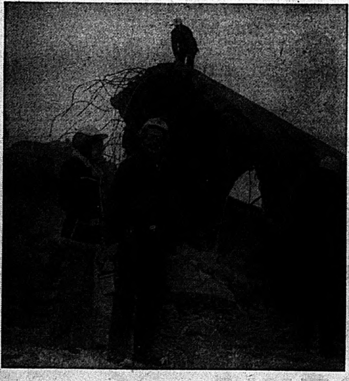
Police have a description of the hit-and-run vehicle, but did not release further details. There were no injuries. The investigating officer is Constable Fitz Gaylord.

Monthly Letter Count Passes Million Mark

The first-class letter count, including Christmas mail, totalled 1,052,992 pieces for December, an increase of 77,000 over the same period one year ago, a Belleville post office spokesman said Friday.

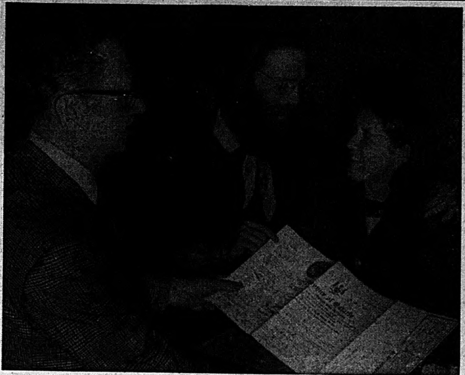
The figure does not include metered mail, or parcels which have not been counted yet. "That's just the mail we run through our cancelling machines ...," said the spokesman.

The spokesman explained the post office does not segregate Christmas mail from others in the tabulation, so a separate number is not available. That practice was discontinued a few years ago.



Stack Topples

Workmen survey the yawning mouth of the 180-foot smoke stack at Point Anne's Canada Cement moments after the structure was toppled by 50 pounds of dynamite. The stack withstood an earlier blast and held its ground following the explosion of 350 pounds of dynamite. The site of the cement plant will be cleared within the next year, the result of company transfer to Bath.



First Of the Year

These happy young people Friday found themselves the first pair in 1975 to seek a marriage licence at Belleville city hall. City clerk Earl Dafoe issued the first certificate of the year to William Lindsay, 27, and Stephanie Lewis, 23, both artists from the Tweed area. They plan to marry later this month.

Loyalist Students Start New Year With Campus Winter Mini-Carnival

The Students' Association of Loyalist College has scheduled a Winter Mini-carnival on campus Wednesday afternoon and evening, "to get the students rolling after Christmas," says Charley Benson, of the student services division.

Mr. Benson said Friday the event, which is hoped to develop into an annual affair, has been coneived "to get the spirit flowing for the second semester."

Day classes will be cancelled at 1 p.m. for all post-secondary students, except those enrolled in Project Loyalist, accelerated programs and retraining classes.

Students with scheduled off-campus placement or clinical commitments will also be expected to report for duty Wednesday to the training institutions concerned.

Mr. Benson outlined the afternoon itinerary will include a table tennis tournament, a scavenger hunt within the college, outdoor athletic activities, and entertainment featuring a bluegrass band and a solo performer.

At about five o'clock, there will be a break for a meal consisting of a bowl of chili, a roll, and a drink, he said.

One of the college's semi-monthly dances will then be held at 7.30 in the cafeteria with music by Whiskey Howl, and the Bill King band.

The break will be applicable to all post-secondary students except those in accelerated programs, Project Loyalist programs, and second-year classes of the Mental Retardation Counsellor program.

Those three programs, plus Retraining-sponsored one-year programs and B.T.S.D., will hold regular classes during the holiday.

Special timetables will be arranged for those programs with some post-secondary subject options which may not run.

Yoga Gaining Popularity In List of Leisure Pasttimes

The pursuit of leisure activities grows busier each year.

The city's recreation department begins another season of community instruction courses Monday.

It's a program that underlines how the demand for leisure-time interests has grown steadily in Belleville in less than a decade.

When Wilma Summers first came to the department nine years ago and first began organizing the program, the resulting initiative offered three or four subjects, each with a handful of students, she recalls.

Today, Mrs. Summers, now the department's recently-appointed deputy director, counts attendance at "several hundred" in a broad range of courses.

They range from winemaking, macrame, and yoga to gymnastics and children's ceramics.

First to get under way is Yoga. Beginners' classes start Monday at Prince Charles School. Now one of the most popular courses, its various classes alone this year have a registration of 130.

This year for the first time instructor Mary Moore also will hold yoga classes for children.

Other involvements for youngsters include stitchery, basic gymnastics, and ceramics.

The diversity involving young people also indicates another social trend, believes Mrs. Summers.

"Parents today are also looking for a lot of recreation programs for their children that are not always sports-oriented. They also want individual activities aside from group or team participation."

It's an acknowledgment that leisure fulfilment cannot always be found in group activities, she indicates.

The 10-week program of courses — at locations which also include the Pinnacle St. recreation centre, Dick Ellis Rink, Queen Victoria school — uses instructors from the community. Fees, starting dates and duration vary for each course.

For $10 registration Gardon Davies will teach a basic winemaking course for five weeks.

Local artist Donnah Cameron instructs for 10 weeks in water colors and pen and ink are in courses costing $15.

For full details on courses, times, places and fees, Mrs. Summers suggests interested participants call the department.

Snowmobiles Protect Summer Homes

PICTON — The Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police protects summer home owners in Prince Edward County with a snowmobile patrol

A police spokesman says when weather conditions necessitate snowmobile inspection of cottage areas two machines kept at the Belleville detachment headquarters are used.

The snowmobile patrol is conducted two days each week to provide periodic checks on vacant summer homes.

Amodeo's Missing $3,000

Police today confirmed they are investigating the disappearance of about $3,000 in a night deposit bag used by a big North Front St. food store.

The money was in cash and cheques from New Year's Eve business at Amodeo's Super Save Market and made up for deposit at a neighboring Royal Bank branch.

The disappearance was first discovered Thursday when the bank opened after the New Year's holiday. Store owner Mike Amodeo said he was first alerted when the bank did not credit the night deposit to his business account.

Deputy police chief Harold Reid said today detectives are still at work seeking a solution. No other night deposit bag was reported missing from the bank.

Walker for Warden?

PICTON — With the inaugural meeting of Prince Edward County council scheduled for Tuesday, Jan. 7, South Marysburg reeve Clifford Walker is considered the most prominent candidate for the warden's office.

Reeve Walker, returned to office by acclamation in December, is beginning his third term on county council.

Two other senior councillors, Wellington Reeve Robert Boyce and Sophiasgurg Reeve George Foster already have served terms as warden, reeve Boyce in 1967 and reeve Foster in 1969.

Athol Reeve Keith Perry, returned to office by acclamation last month also is a senior councillor but has not yet held the warden's seat.

If Reeve Walker is elected at Tuesday's inaugural, he will become the 101st warden of Prince Edward.

Hallowell Holds Meeting To Fill Stafford Vacancy

HALLOWELL — Hallowell township reeve Keith MacDonald says council will hold a special session before January 6 to appoint a new councillor to fill the vacancy left by the death of Fred Stafford.

Councillor Stafford, a veteran of the municipal political scene died suddenly December 26. He had been elected to office by acclamation recently.

Hallowell township council will hold its inaugural session Monday, January 6, following the special meeting to fill its vacant seat.

Allergies to Be Topic Of Hospital Seminar

Allergies will be up for public discussion with medical experts at Belleville General Hospital Wednesday night.

The seminar — open to the public at 7.30 p.m at Education Hall — will make available for discussion specialists including Dr. James Day, director of Kingston General Hospital's allergy division, and Belleville physician Dr. Earle MacDonald. The panel will be directed by Dr. George Pearce, medical advisor to the Hastings-Prince Edward TB and Respiratory Diseases Association.

In the afternoon the specialists will participate in a seminar for professional and para-medical staff. Chairman of the program will be Dr. Bruce Cronk.

Theft Plagues Public Art

One of Ontario's most original public art galleries — the corridors of Belleville General Hospital has been periodically pilfered by thieves.

The thefts have been spotty and few — about eight pieces of art have disappeared in the past two years — and some objects have been recovered by police.

But, as a result, security measures for the displays have been heightened and BGH authorities are working closely with police, said a hospital spokesman.

However, the exhibits will continue undiminished.

The display was an innovative move of a Quinte Arts Council committee two years ago. The intent was to display original art objects by local artists in an area of maximum public exposure.

Both public, patients and staff reacted enthusiastically to the displays — changed every four months — as hospital corridors in the emergency and administration sectors blossomed with paintings, wall hangings and sculptures.

So positive was public response the QAC committee won instant approval for a similar rotating show at city hall. There have been no thefts from city hall.

Four object were taken from BGH and two recovered the first year of the showings, said the QAC's Linda Mustard.

Four articles — including a wall sculpture four feet by five feet — disappeared when exhibits were changed in September, she said.

The latest theft — this week — may have been "just a prank," said Police Chief Douglas Crosbie.

A wall hanging, created by Belleville artist Ann Boyle, was brought to police Friday by people who found it outside their house, said the chief.

About 50-60 original art works are involved in each exhibit, changed every four months, said Mrs. Mustard.

Mrs. Mustard said the shows however, will continue and her group was "grateful" for the support of BGH administration during the problem.

The disappearances have caused obvious chagrin to hospital authorities.

"I'm sorry to say it's a fact," said Ray Krock, assistant executive administrator. "It's a most unfortunate thing, because these artists put so much time and effort into their works.

"We like having these works here. They add a lot of esthetic value to our corridors and they're of real interest to the public."

Moderator To Visit Bancroft

BANCROFT — The well-known moderator of an Ontario television ministry, Dr. John Wesley White will be in Bancroft January 10.

Dr. White who is the host of the Global Television Network's Sunday afternoon religious program 'AGAPE', is also the principal of Richmond College in Toronto.

Accompanying Dr. White to Bancroft will be either George Beverly Shea or Homer James from the Billy Graham Crusades.

Mr. Shea, who also sang with the Graham Crusades, presently appears on the Global program with Dr. White.

Both vocalists have also travelled with the Layton Ford Crusades.

There will be no admission charge for the January 10 meeting which will start at 7.30 in the auditorium of North Hastings High School.

Sure Cure for Insomnia

Well, kiddies, here I am again.

Bet you thought you were rid of me.

But, first person and all, here I am.

Nothing to view with alarm today?

Sure there is.

But it will have to wait for another day.

Bev will tell you I procrastinate.

No doubt the boss will, too.

Fern (I've never met her) will tell you I need another picture taken to adorn the top of this piece.

Honestly, Fern, I've been waiting for a camera that lies. Just as soon as I find one, you will see the results.

And, Bev, I know procrastination (Bev's the only one who can tell me that's the word I'm looking for when I attempt to give light to a moment of truth) is a problem with me but, what the dickens, everyone has his faults.

Other people will tell you worse things than Bev and Fern when they are giving vent to their thoughts of yours truly.

I think a lot of Bev and Fern. They tell it like it is.

For instance, Bev will tell me to lay off when I disclose my secret for insomnia.

She's a Leaf fan, you know.

That is, she's pro Leafs when Jack Lynch and the Red Wings aren't on the tube. There's something about that Lynch guy.

And know what it is, too. But 'll never tell and Don wouldn't care if did.

Enough of this personal twaddle you say?

Okay.

So it's back to my instant cure for insomnia.

I'm surprised you haven't thought of it before.

It's simple.

Trouble is, it's only a "sometimes" cure.

I mean, how often are we apt to be "treated" to Leafs and Golden Seals on television?

Didn't you sleep well, Wednesday?

Man, in the early evening, you missed your chance for 40 winks at least.

Want relief?

Try Seleaf ... or Sealeaf.

At any rate, try watching Toronto Maple Leafs and California Golden Seals on TV.

Get it? Seal-Leaf gives relief ... from insomnia that is.

Anyone who managed to stay awake through that is in trouble. Face it. Your insomnia is in advanced stages ... or whatever it is the doctors say.

The guys who should get the million dollar contracts are the poor dupes you and I see and hear giving us play-by-play and between period entertainment. Seems to me, they're whipping a dead horse. And they seem so earnest.

Time to slice it says the man. So slice it, I will.

SLICES — The guy who writes the Molson Cup releases really knows how to sink the shaft in.

When the rest of the panelists are saying "push it", Match Game '75 regular Richard Dawson is giving out with "shove it".

And "shove it" is exactly what I'd like to tell the author of the latest release on the Molson Cup.

His remarks won't reach the light of day here.

But for the record, Norm Ullman leads the December section with a point total of 16.

Say, isn't it Ullman who was quoted as saying: "Play me or trade me", just a week or two ago?

At any rate, Norm is heading the list.

Winger Errol Thompson is next in line with 10 points while Gary Sabourin and Darryl Sittler have eight each.

TURN IT ON, FERGIE.

Then, truly, you and I and several hundred others can tell them: "shove it".

Wasn't it just the other day that Kingston's Frontenac Downs paused for a refresher?

Could be.

Refreshed or not, Frontenac is at it again.

Sunday sees the first meet of 1975.

And the big drawing card this time around is: "We welcome Royal Canadian Legion members. All branch members admitted free."

Track promoters are so busy getting that across, they fail to tell us post time for the first race.

If the harness racing turns you on, you probably already know when the horses are going to the post.

Keech Pots Three

Cats Claw Way to Tie

By MARK BRETT

Sports Staff

PICKERING — Despite playing only two games and having a 90-minute practice in the last two weeks, the Belleville Bobcats and Steve Keech in particular, came up with an outstanding effort to score a thrilling 7-7 tie with the Pickering Panthers here last night, in Metro Junior B action.

With only 4:44 left in the final period a goal by Cat captain Robbie Foster gave Belleville the well-earned point.

Keech stole the spotlight for the evening coming up with a five-point performance against the second place Panthers, counting three goals and two assists.

"You just can't leave Keech alone for a second," commented Pickering coach Sherry Bassin after the game. Keech was awarded the first star for his performance.

The Cats held a 2-0 lead — with less than two minutes played in the game.

Andy Ricketts netted his first of two for the evening and Keech picked up his first to start Belleville off.

After that, things started to go wrong for the Belleville squad as they found themselves at the short end of a 5-2 score by the 15-minute mark of the period.

"We still had the bus ride kinks in us," said goalie Bruce Clark after the game. Belleville arrived only 20 minutes before the start of the scheduled 7.30 game.

Grant Geogan rounded out the scoring for the period as his weak shot eluded Panther netminder Jim Metz.

Both Clark and coach Bob Boyle agreed the forwards were slow in getting back; "When we sat down and figured it out we saw that there were a lot of three on one and four on two breaks," added Clark. "You just can't leave it all up to your defencemen."

"Once you let a fast skating team like Pickering get out in front by two or three goals you can bet you're going to have your work cut out for you," explained Boyle.

And work the Cats did in the second period coming up with an all-round great performance from every angle outscoring last year's league champions 2-0 in the middle frame.

The Panthers must have thought they were playing an entirely different team as Clark came up with saves that had the home team banging their sticks on the ice in disbelief.

At 15:02 Belleville was the victim of a 10-minute fighting penalty to Dave Taylor as he and Tim Manley got down to fisticuffs.

The new ruling allows the referee at his discretion to hand out the penalty to the player that he feels is the "aggressor" in the fight. The penalized team is then forced to play shorthanded for the 10 minutes.

"I don't understand the rule at all," said Boyle. "A player is less likely to get hurt in a fight (as the case between Taylor and Manley) but then he (the referee) gives only a two-minute minor to Kevin Owen after he speared Langstaff causing an injury," added Boyle.

Owen's actions marred the otherwise clean game with his continuous spears to the backs of legs and other stick involved attacks against the visitors. At one point in the third period he took a two-handed swipe at Keech, breaking his stick in half over the Belleville forward. He was assessed a two-minute slashing penalty and Keech received two minutes for slashing and two minutes for roughing for his retaliation.

Foster, Ricketts and Bob Thompson played almost all of the final five minutes of the second period killing off the penalty to Taylor with some excellent saves by Clark adding insult to injury to keep the flying Panthers off the score board.

"Clark had a bit of trouble in the first period but he really beat us in the final two-thirds of the game," said Bassin.

With the game all tied up going into the final 20 minutes the Cats were caught standing around as Bernie Saunders and Steve Falkner each tallied a goal to put the home team in front 7-5.

Ricketts' second goal at 12:29 of the period, described by Bassin as "the one that we should never have let in," appeared to get the Cats back on track.

The Belleville squad swarmed around the net before Thompson's lead pass sent Foster speeding by a lone Panther defenceman and in on Metz who saw the Cats' captain make an excellent move on him before tucking the puck between his pads for the tying goal.

The Cats were not out of trouble yet as Keech was assessed his double minor forcing the visitors to play a man short for the remaining 1.05 of the game. Good forechecking by Al Jeffery and defensive work by Langstaff however made it impossible for the Panthers to muster a shot on the net. The Cats now have sole possession of third spot, three points ahead of Kingston.

Missing from the Cats' lineup for the night were defencemen Wally Dainard and Neil Turner. Dainard was forced to remain behind with work commitments and Turner is serving a suspension.

Mike Watt left the game at the midway mark of the final period after taking a shot from point blank range on the ankle. The extent of the injury is not yet known.

Belleville's next contest will be a home ice encounter with the last place Oshawa Legionaires on Friday. Game time is 9 p.m.

THE FLIP SHOT: LAST BUT NOT LEAST

The flip shot is one of the things coaches and players seem to take for granted. It is almost instinctive because the flip shot involves sending the puck over an obstacle — a sprawled goalie or defenceman or a stick.

While the procedure is easy enough to learn, think of how much better one would be if he possessed a good flip shot. In other words, average hockey players can flip the puck but at times when under pressure they cannot flip the puck, say over the fallen goalie or the defenceman.

That is why I strongly suggest the inclusion of the flip shot in practices. In order of importance for minor hockey players, I place the wrist, backhand and flip shots far ahead of the slap shot.

Always flip the puck with the toe of your stick because you will find it easier to raise. As a matter of fact, you will probably lose the puck if you try to flip it with the heel of the stick.

And keep your head up, looking at where you are aiming. The way to improve your flip shot is simple: Have a goalie or defenceman lie in front of you and practise moving the puck over the obstacle.

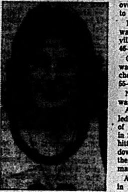
There is one other way the flip shot can be useful. When you run into a rink with poor ice or a goalie who is having an off-night, it might be an idea to test the goalie with a long flip shot which you might send his way from centre ice. Try to land the puck directly in front of him because chances are it might take a bad bounce and fool the goalie.

Goals do not happen often this way but when they do, you will find the team which scored gained a big lift.

Wilson Named All-star

BCI Team Captures Consolation Title

WATERLOO (Special) — Brian Mackenzie's Belleville Collegiate Institute (BCI) team had to settle for the consolation championship in the annual Waterloo Warrior Invitational Basketball Tournament here, Friday.



LARRY WILSON

Leading late in the third quarter in its first tourney start with Burlington Nelson, the Belleville squad ran into foul trouble and finished on the short end of a 56-45 score.

Relegated to the consolation series, BCI chalked up wins over Chatham and Brampton to take the title.

In the consolation final, it was 54-49, BCI and the Belleville squad took the semi-final 46-36.

Champion of the tournament was Cameron Heights of Kitchener, winners over Dundas 55-48 in the final.

Named a tourney all-star, was Belleville's Larry Wilson.

A 6-foot-2 forward, Wilson led his team's scoring in each of the three games, popping in 20 in the loss to Burlington; hitting for 13 as the club downed Chatham and finding the range for 22 in the final match.

And the BCI ace was tops in rebounding as well, pulling down 12, six and seven, respectively.

Gary Donovan was another top shooter for the Belleville entry, connecting for 26 points (8-6-12). A 5-foot-8 guard, Donovan also took his share of rebounds.

Gord Wright checked in with eight points in the team's first game. Larry Savage had nine in the comeback win over Chatham as BCI rebounded from a three-point deficit at the half; and Steve Kirby threw in eight points in the consolation final.

Things Looking Up

Punch Has His Day

TORONTO (CP) — The seven lean years are over for George (Punch) Imlach.

Having survived a serious heart attack and a gall bladder operation, not to mention the agonies of building a National Hockey League expansion team into a contender, the general manager of Buffalo Sabres is a happy man.

The club he started from nothing in 1971 is leading the Adams Division of the NHL over Boston Bruins, Toronto Maple Leafs and California Seals.

He is seriously dreaming of a Stanley Cup for the first time since 1967 when, as general manager and coach, he piloted Toronto to victory—one of four cups won by the Leafs in the 11 years he coached them

"The best part of it is that I get to watch Gilbert Perreault play every game," said Imlach.

Never afraid to express controversial opinions, Imlach talks in superlatives about Perreault, the centre he drafted first when he began to put the Sabres together in 1971.

"I can safely say Perreault is the best player in the business. Of course, I don't see Bobby Orr every game but I know one thing—I wouldn't trade Perreault for Orr now.

"Perreault can break a game open at any time, and I find myself talking about this spectacular move or that super goal. He's the big man, but we're winning because of the depth of the talent we have, plus hard work and discipline

"Maybe we're not the best team in hockey but we're the best attraction now. Just look at our forward lines."

Perreault centres the French Connection with Rick Martin and Rene Robert and all three have scored more than 20 goals.

Don Luce centres the checking line, with Craig Ramsay and rookie Danny Gare, and there are the Kamikaze Kids—Jim Lorentz, Rick Dudley and Spinner Spencer—who have a knack of upsetting their opponents.

"They're a perfect third line because they roar around the other team's end and tire them out," Imlach said.

Imlach also has acquired, by astute trading and selection, a defence that fits his pattern. Jim Schoenfeld, Larry Carriere, Bill Hajt, Jerry Korab, Lee Fogolin and Jocelyn Guevremont are all over six feet and 190 pounds.

Goal was expected to be a major problem at the beginning of the season but Gary Bromley has developed quickly and Roger Crozier has come back from stomach problems.

Imlach, who lives in the Toronto suburb of Scarborough and spends two or three days a week at home, is careful about his health.

He suffered a heart attack in 1972 and turned coaching duties at Buffalo over to his longtime friend Joe Crozier.

"I'm fine, really, and I want to keep it that way, but nothing has changed much in the way I live. I'm careful to get plenty of rest and avoid being tired."

Imlach's relationship with Crozier soured last season and Crozier moved to Vancouver Blazers of the World Hockey Association as general manager. Imlach prefers not to discuss their falling out.

"We were friends too long for me to bad-mouth him."

His present coach is Floyd Smith, who played for Imlach at Toronto.

"Smith is a winner, a guy the players respond to and work for," he says. "Smitty has complete control of the team."

Imlach still tends to use such words as "we" and "us" when talking about the Leafs, the club that fired him after being eliminated from the playoffs by Boston in 1969.

"Hell, I'll always have the Maple Leafs tattooed on my backside. "Those were great years. We accomplished some fine things with an outstanding group of men. Many men have gone through their entire hockey career and never had a chance to have that (winning the Stanley Cup) happen once. I did, and now I have the chance to do it again."

Seconds After Koinigg's Crash

Steel guardrails have been blamed in the recent deaths of three race car drivers and Helmuth Koinigg's death at Watkins Glen has touched off a flurry of criticism against the track once considered to be the safest in the world. A signalman is shown summoning help seconds after Koinigg crashed during Oct. 6 Grand Prix.

Steel Guardrails Blamed In Deaths of Three Drivers

TORONTO (CP) — Guardrails, once thought to be the saviour of race car drivers, are getting a long and critical look by the industry.

The steel guardrail has been blamed in the recent death of American Peter Revson in South Africa and those at Watkins Glen, N.Y. of Helmuth Koinigg of Austria in October and Frenchman Francois Cevert a year earlier.

Koinigg's death touched off a flurry of criticism against a track once considered to be the safest in the world, criticism Mal Currie, executive director at Watkins Glen, feels unjustified.

"I'm reading about 90 per cent more than I'm hearing on a one-to-one basis," says Currie, but he adds there's been no official investigation of the accident.

Watkins Glen was inspected last June and July by drivers representing the Federation Internationale de l'Auto (FIA).

"In certain areas they want the guardrail moved back," Currie said. He added, however, that the spot where Koinigg was killed on the 3.37-mile course was never discussed as a possible hazard.

"We never had an accident there before," said the track official. "You wouldn't think a car would go off there."

Eyewitnesses who studied the area, however, have alleged that posts supporting a wire-mesh catchfence, designed to slow a car before it reaches the guardrail, were rotted.

Currie, admitting the posts have been in the ground three years, called the charges "absolutely false."

It appeared something was wrong with the suspension or a tire of Koinigg's Formula I car just before it slid off the track at 90 miles an hour, crashed through two strands of catchfence and hit the steel guardrail.

The 25-year-old Austrian was killed when the car broke through the bottom bar of guardrail, sparking renewed public condemnation of guardrails at the Glen and other circuits where the big cars perform.

When Watkins Glen was refurbished and extended in 1971, safety officials insisted on a steel barrier close to the edge of the track almost the entire outer circuit of the course.

Steel, the theory went, would not only prevent cars from encroaching on spectator areas but, mounted close to the edge, would arrest cars before they were allowed to get too far out of control.

The mood has changed, however, and with steel shown to be a potential killer the call is out to develop a barrier that performs the same function but also protects the driver.

Motor Racing Safety Society, presided over by Dr. Bob Green of London, Ont., is devoting its energies to finding a suitable replacement for steel.

The MRSS, sponsored by Labatt's Breweries, has organized a contest open to teams of engineering undergraduates to come up with an alternative to steel.

Originally open only to Canadian universities, Dr. Green says interest from outside the country prompted the society to declare an open contest and about 50 entries from all over the world are expected before the winners are judged at a seminar in Toronto in April.

Scotsman Jackie Stewart, retired world champion driver and vice-president of MRSS, and Grand Prix driver Jody Scheckter of South Africa will be among panelists at the seminar.

Pressure also is being exerted on race car builders for stronger and safer construction. One U.S. publication, Autoweek, is pushing for full roll cages in all open racing cars.

Ferrett Industries, builders of a Formula Ford car in Canada, is publicizing the modified roll cage idea designed into its 1975 models—braces mounted well forward on the chassis and extending to the top of the roll bar.

The braces, conceivably, would prevent guard rails and other cars from invading the driver's compartment, an innovation Ferrett believes would have saved Koinigg's life and that of Canadian driver Wayne Kelly, killed at Mosport in 1973 when his race car struck the rear of an ambulance.

While the answers to safer race car driving appears obvious—stronger construction of the vehicle and a strong but yielding track barrier—track operators such as Currie and Mosport's Harvey Hudes wince at the thought of nw barriers.

The tracks have already invested heavily in new guardrail in the last three years.

"We spent a great deal of money in 1971 with the attitude that we would make it as safe as we could," said Currie. "Safety ideas came from all over, some of them diametrically opposed to other ideas."

Now he's getting a little upset, never knowing from one year to the next what to expect from track inspectors as the speed of race cars increases and the need for improved barriers continues.

While steel, apparently, is not the answer, whatever replaces it will also be a gamble that might cost millions and lives, prompting Currie to ask:

Meet Canada in Showdown

Soviet Juniors Win Fourth Game

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Soviet Union scored four unanswered goals in the third period here Friday night to defeat Sweden 6-2, setting the stage for a title-deciding game Sunday in the world junior hockey tournament.

Canada and the Soviets, who meet at 2 p.m. EST Sundy, are both undefeated in four games and Soviet coach Yuri Morozov said he expects their meeting to feature heavy physical contact.

"I expect the game will be very interesting and play will be very exciting. Canada is strong but Canadian players will find it rough," Morozov said.

Sweden hoids third place in the tournament with two wins and two losses, followed by Czechoslovakia with one win and a tie, Finland with a tie and the winless United States.

The teams are idle today. In other games Sunday, Czechoslovakia meets Sweden at Brandon, Man., at 3 p.m. EST and Finland meets the United States at Minneapolis at 8 p.m. EST.

Czechoslovakia's first win of the six-team round-robin tournament came Friday night, a 5-0 victory over winless United States at Bloomington, Minn.

Zinetula Bilyaletdinov led the Soviet scoring attack with two goals, and the other goals were by Boris Chuchin, Sergei Abramov, Victor Vakrushev and Sergei Babinov.

Kent Nilsson and Dag Bredburg scored for the Swedes, who dominated play until a rash of penalties midway through the third period allowed the Soviets to pump four goals past Swedish netminder Jake Andersson.

In Bloomington, the Czechs had two goals from Norbert Kral and solid goaltending from Peter Sevela, who blocked a total of 22 shots.

The Soviet scoring attack is led by Boris Alexandrov, a speedy left-winger capable of breaking any game wide-open. Defenceman Vladimir Kucherenko, who has collected a tournament-leading total of six assists, and Chuchin are also effective .

The Canadian team is anchored by Ed Staniowski, a Western Canada Hockey League goalie with the Regina Pats.

Forwards Dale McMullin, Bryan Trottier and Mel Bridgmen have spearheaded the potent Canadian attack to its tournament leading goals total of 24. The Canadian team has yielded just six goals in the four games.

Peace Keeping Doesn't Pay

Goldsworthy Out Four Weeks

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bill Goldsworthy of Minnesota North Stars discovered Friday his new self-assigned role as peacemaker doesn't really suit him.

The 30-year-old native of Kitchener, Ont., known for his aggressive style of play on the ice, tried to break up a fight among some of his team-mates early Friday and ended up with a severed tendon in one finger and cuts to both hands for his effort.

A spokesman for the National Hockey League club said Goldsworthy apparently tried to break up the altercation and "was pushed through the glass door on a fire extinguisher" at the Pittsburgh hotel where the North Stars were staying following Thursday night's 6-3 loss to the Penguins.

"Dennis Hextall, Jude Drouin, John Flesch and Alain Langlais were the four players fighting," said Dick Dillman, the team's public relations director.

The fight apparently stemmed from accusations by some players that others had not hustled during the loss to Pittsburgh — the club's 19th consecutive game on the road without a victory.

Goldsworthy is the team's leading scorer this season with 22 goals and 17 assists. He will be lost to the club for at least a month.

In Friday night's only game, Buffalo Sabres and California Seals played to a 2-2 tie in Oakland.

At Oakland, Sabre defenceman Jocelyn Guevremont drilled a screen shot through the legs of California goalie Gilles Meloche at 11:28 of the second period for the tie.

The Sabres grabbed a 1-0 lead at 16:17 of the first period when Gilbert Perreault beat three defenders before tucking the puck past Meloche.

California tied it at 18:32 of the period when Butch Williams converted a rebound while the Sabres were two men short and Dave Hrechkosy made it 2-1 for the Seals with his 18th goal of the season at 9:41 of the second.

The Seals, outshot 87-28 by the Sabres in their two previous meetings this season, directed 30 shots at Buffalo netminder Rocky Farr, while Meloche faced 26 drives.

Reds' Streak Ends

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Nova Scotia Voyageurs ended Providence Reds' 16-game home-ice winning streak Friday night with a 4-3 win over the Reds in American Hockey League play.

The Voyageurs, led by Peter Sullivan's goal and assist, also gave the Reds their second loss in a row and won their 10th game in 20 away games this season.

In other AHL games Friday, New Haven Nighthawks downed Rochester Americans 7-4 and Baltimore Clippers, Southern Division leaders, stopped Hershey Bears 4-3.

Rick Chartraw opened the scoring for Nova Scotia at 10:06 of the first period when he took Sullivan's pass and fired a 45-foot slap shot past Providence goalie Glen Seperich.

Sullivan scored five minutes later on a power play, but the Reds' Ken Campbell narrowed the score to 2-1 with a goal at 17:05.

Gordon McTavish scored on a breakaway in the second period to give Nova Scotia a 3-1 lead, then Jerry Teeple of Providence and Sean Shanahan exchanged goals late in the period.

Wayne Chernecki scored the final Providence goal in the third period.

Johnny Rogers scored two goals in the New Haven win over the Americans.

The Nighthawks started the scoring with goals by Walt Ledingham and Scott MacPhail, but Larry McKillop scored for the Americans before the first period ended.

Flyers Whip Comets

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bob Baird scored three goals, pacing league-leading Barrie Flyers to a 7-2 win over Napanee Comets on Friday in Ontario Hockey Association Senior A action.

In the other league game Friday, Orillia Terriers defeated Whitby McDonald's 6-2. Tonight, the Senior A all-star team meets the Central Red Army squad in Barrie in an exhibition contest.

League play resumes Sunday with Cambridge Hornets travelling to Napanee.

At Barrie, singles went to Bill Abbott, Phil Branston, Dave Nicholishen and Bob Monteith.

Les Colligan and Rick Gerow replied for Napanee, which was outshot 42-27, including a 20-9 margin in a first period which produced a 4-0 lead.

Home Ice Hex Returns To Cause Toros Grief

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The home-ice hex has returned to haunt Toronto Toros.

New England Whalers spotted them a 3-0 first-period lead Friday and then rallied for a 5-3 World Hockey Association victory in a battle of division leaders.

Centre Larry Pleau led the Whalers, leaders of the East Division, with two goals including the winner. Wayne Carleton, Terry Caffery and Fred O'Donnell got the others.

O'Donnell's goal was into an open net as Toros' goalie Gilles Gratton was removed in the last minute of play for an extra attacker.

Tony Featherstone, Frank Mahovlich and Wayne Dillon scored for the Toros, Canadian Division leaders, who now have lost twice in three confrontations with the Whalers this season.

In other games, Edmonton Oilers and Phoenix Roadrunners played to a 3-3 overtime tie while San Diego Mariners edged Minnesota Fighting Saints 2-1.

It was the eighth loss against nine wins at home for the Toros who opened the season with six consecutive home-ice wins before dropping five in a row at Maple Leaf Gardens. Their overall record now is 20-13-1 for a one-point edge on Quebec Nordiques.

Pleau converted a pass from John French at 11:33 of the third period, beating Gratton with a long slapshot to give the Whalers the winning goal.

The Toros outshot the Whalers 31-24, but little excitement was generated among the 11,445 spectators until the last period when Rick Ley, a former Toronto Maple Leaf, was penalized for deliberately holding the puck. Team mate Carleton, also a former Leaf, took exception to the call and shot the puck at referee Ron Asseltine, drawing a misconduct penalty.

The victory broke the Whalers' five-game losing streak and increased their lead over second-place Cleveland Crusaders to 10 points.

At Edmonton, defenceman Barry Long collected a goal and an assist Friday night to pace the Oilers.

It was the third consecutive sudden-death overtime game involving the Oilers, who defeated Indianapolis Racers and San Diego earlier this week.

TRAIL NORDIUES

The single point left Edmonton three points behind Quebec, while Phoenix, in the middle of a long road trip, remained second in the Western Division, 12 points back of Houston Aeros.

At St. Paul, Minn., Rick Sentes drilled a backhand shot past Minnesota goalie John Garrett at 18:06 of the second period for the winning goal.

The Mariners held a 1-0 lead after the first period on a goal by Brian Bradley, just called up from their Syracuse farm club in the North American Hockey League.

Don Tannahill tied the score at 9:34 of the second period after team-mate Frank Huck had stolen an errant San Diego pass and relayed the puck to Tannahill.

Midget Player In Coma

MONTREAL (CP) — On Dec. 15, Ricky Picard, a 15-year-old midget hockey goalie stopped a rising slap-shot to his throat.

He has been in a coma ever since.

The youth's suburban Dollard Des Ormeaux midget team was practising, when the puck deflected off the his catching glove and struck him in the throat.

Ricky collapsed and his heart stopped beating. He was given mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and rushed to hospital.

Doctors suspect Ricky Picard suffered brain damage while his heart was stopped.

"I saw him today and he looked a little better," Gilles Picard, the boy's father said Friday. "Actually, the doctors think his brain is dead, they're going to test again.

"Last week they had given up on him and it seemed this week that he's made some improvement but how much I don't know."

The youth was wearing a protective goalie's mask at the time of the accident, but it gave no protection to the throat area.

The accident has people in the West Island communities looking for methods of prevention, including a petition for improved emergency facilities at the arenas.

Finley Loses Round 1

OAKLAND (AP) — Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley lost a court battle Friday to overturn a baseball arbitration ruling, but said he will take his fight to keep Jim (Catfish) Hunter "all the way";

"This is not the end of this issue," Finley told newsmen as he left an Alameda County Superior Court hearing after losing another round in his battle to uphold baseball's reserve system.

"I'll go all the way if I have to," he said, apparently referring to the United States Supreme Court.

Finley and his attorney, Neil Papiano, had sought a preliminary injunction overturning the Dec. 16 finding by arbitrator Peter Seitz that Hunter, 28, was exempt from the reserve system and free to negotiate with other teams.

Seitz ruled that Finley violated Hunter's contract by withholding half of his $100,000 salary for 1974. Hunter's contract stipulated he be paid $50,000 in salary and $50,000 in non-taxable deferred compensation for both 1974 and 1975 in the form of an insurance annuity.

Hunter, who last season won 25 games and the American League's Cy Young Award, signed last Tuesday with New York Yankees for a reported $3.75 million five-year package—the most lucrative in sports history.

SHOULD BE CONFIRMED

"I think the award should be confirmed," Judge George W. Phillips told Papiano, "but I'm sure you'll proceed much further."

Papiano, who called Seitz' decision "akin to giving the death penalty for a parking violation," said he would file objections to the judge's ruling by Jan. 7 in preparation for taking the case to the state Court of Appeals in San Francisco.

"I'm real delighted", said J. Carlton Cherry, Hunter's chief attorney, in a telephone interview from his Ahoksie, N.C., home. "But we didn't expect the judge to rule any other way."

Cherry said he thought "there was no way in the world" Judge Phillips' ruling would be overturned by a higher court.

Judge Phillips ruled that Seitz acted "within his jurisdiction" and said the question of whether he personally agreed with the decision was immaterial.

Papiano had argued whether an arbitrator could legally rule on the subject of baseball's controversial reserve system which binds a player to one team throughout his career unless he is traded or released.

Papiano also said that Finley would have been subject to income tax fraud if he had paid Hunter the remaining $50,000 in the manner the right-hander requested.

Freitas and Judge Phillips both took issue with Papiano's attempts to liken Hunter's case to that of former National League outfielder Curt Flood, who lost a bid before the U.S. Supreme Court to be declared a free agent.

Flood challenged the reserve system after his contract had expired with Philadelphia Phillies and he had been fully paid.

"I don't think the Flod case is in point," Judge Phillips said. "There's all the difference in the world. He got his salary. Mr. Hunter did not get his salary."

Meanwhile in San Diego, Ray Kroc, owner of the Padres, charged that Hunter used his club to increase the bidding.

"He was going to the Yankess from Day One," Kroc said in an interview. "I feel we've been used. I'm a bad loser."

Gail Splashes To A Record

MONTREAL (CP) — Gail Amundrud of Vancouver set a Canadian record in the ladies 200-metre freestyle swimming event at the fourth annual Pointe Claire International Invitational on Friday night.

GAIL AMUNDRUD

Miss Amundrud covered the distance in 2:06.71.

In the men's 200-metre freestyle, Steve Badger of Winnipeg was the winner with a time of 1:57.41. The mark is a record for the 15 to 17 age group.

Miss Amundrud, formerly of Ottawa, shattered the old mark of 2:06.75 held by Anne Jardin of Montreal by winning her event.

In the 200-metre backstroke, Wendy Cook of Vancouver grabbed the women's event with a time of 2:24.50 with Steve Pickell of Vancouver capturing the men's race with a time of 2:12.96.

Tracey Klinck of Kitchener, Ont., won the girls 10-and-under 50-metre freestyle while Claude Lamy of Tracy, Que., took the boys event.

Pat Lajoie of Cornwall, Ont., was the winner in the boys 50-metre freestyle in the 11-12 age group while Denis Dufour of Quebec won a race in the 13-14 age group class—the 50-metre freestyle.

John Gallant of Toronto won the boys 100-metre butterfly for the 13-14 age group while Gillian Main of Toronto won the girls 13-14 100-metre butterfly.

Peggy Tosdel of Mission Vallejo, Calif. won the women's 100-metre butterfly while Greg Jahenberg took the men's event.

The Canadian Dolphins Swim Club of Vancouver took the men's and women's 800-metre freestyle relay.

Bulls on Rampage

Chicago Bulls exploded for 47 points in the second quarter Friday night to beat Phoenix Suns 126-99 in a National Basketball Association game.

The Bulls hit 17 of 21 shots from the field in the period, with substitutes Roland Garrett and Bob Wilson combining for 20 points.

Elsewhere in the NBA Friday night, Detroit Pistons beat Buffalo Braves 111-92, Cleveland Cavaliers defeated Houston Rockets 95-83, Philadelphia 76ers topped Kansas City-Omaha Kings 107-95, Seattle SuperSonics edged Portland Trail Blazers 96-93 and Boston Celtics beat Los Angeles Lakers 127-106.

In the American Basketball Association, Kentucky topped Virginia 113-79, New York defeated St. Louis 130-116, and Denver beat Indiana 120-111.

Sooners Top Poll

Oklahoma Sooners, who overcame the dispiriting effects of being banned from post-season bowl competition and national television exposure because of a two-year probation for recruiting violations, have been named college football's national champions for 1974.

The Sooners, the only unbeaten and untied major college team in the United States, climbed to the top of the college football rankings in Barry Switzer's second year as head coach and easily outdistanced the rest of the field.

"Winning the national championship is the biggest thrill there is," Switzer said from Honolulu, where he is coaching in today's Hula Bowl. "This is a total accomplishment by many. The AP (Associated Press) poll is the oldest and most widely recognized one, the one people wait for."

For their 11-0 record, the Sooners received 51 of 60 first-place votes and 1,162 of a possible 1,200 points from the country-wide panel of sports writers and broadcasters participating in the final Associated Press major college poll.

Southern California was a distant runnerup to Oklahoma. The Trojans, who edged Ohio State 18-17 in the Rose Bowl, received six first-place votes and 1,050 points.

Your Horoscope

By BERNCE BEDE OSOL

Monday, January 6

Aries (March 21-April 19) Someone you felt a strong instant attraction for isn't all you first thought, as you'll learn for yourself shortly.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) You'll break your word about something you committed yourself to on the spur of the moment, much to your embarrassment.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) If working in handicrafts, don't make innovations without thinking them through. Results won't equal your artistic intentions.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You tend to be a mite flirtatious now. You may form an attachment suddenly that will end as abruptly as it began.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't buy a novel-type item for the home without first talking to one who knows its value through experience.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're apt to be a bit loose-lipped today. You could say something unthinkingly that would offend another.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Financial risks you wouldn't normally consider are likely to tempt you today. Study carefully bargains offered you.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be even more mindful than usual of your appearance today. Dress to suit the occasion to make a favorable impression.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In order to make a story more interesting for the listener, you're apt to embellish details a trifle too much.

Capricorn (Dec 22-Jan. 19) If you're trying to stick to a budget it's best you avoid the company of an extravagant friend today.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A goal that you're interested in achieving can't be won through easy measures such as those you'll try to get by with.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) You're more likely to tell others what they want to hear rather than what they should hear. This won't advance your cause.

Major Junior A Roundup

First Shutout for Ottawa 67's

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ottawa '67s earned their first shutout this season, defeating London Knights 9-0 Friday in Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A action.

A crowd of 3,400 in Ottawa saw the '67s take period leads of 2-0 and 7-0.

Tim Young, Dan Blair, Bruce Baker and Jamie Masters led the Ottawa attack with two goals apiece. Norm Kajola got the other.

The win placed Ottawa in a second-place tie with Peterborough Petes. London dropped to 10th spot.

Ottawa, with Jim Fraser in net, outshot London 52-31. Mike Kasmetis and Dave Jenner shared the goaltending duties for London.

In other league action Friday, Toronto Marlboros downed St. Catharines Black Hawks 9-4, Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds dumped Kingston Canadians 9-7, Kitchener Rangers edged Oshawa Generals 4-3 and Hamilton Fincups and Sudbury Wolves played to a 3-3 tie.

Play resumes today with Sault Ste. Marie visiting Peterborough and Sudbury meeting Toronto in Brantford.

On Sunday, Hamilton is at St. Catharines, Kingston travels to Oshawa, Sudbury is in London, Sault Ste. Marie visits Kitchener and Ottawa meets Toronto.

Marlboros 9 Hawks 4

Two-goal performances by John Smrke and Craig Crawford led Toronto to its eighth consecutive win.

Other Toronto goals went to Mike Kitchen, Bruce Boudreau, Trevor Johansen, Lynn Jorgenson and Brian Crichton.

Greg Craig, with two goals, Tim Stortini and Rick Adduono replied for St. Catharines which was outshot 53-45.

Playing in Brantford before 1,971 spectators, league-leading Toronto trailed 3-2 after the first period but led 6-4 going into the final period.

Greyhounds 9 Canadians 7

Paul Woods scored four goals and added two assists to spark Sault Ste. Marie to the win after the Sault fell behind 3-1 after the first period and 6-5 going into the third period.

Bruce O'Grady scored two goals and assisted on four others while Cary Farelli, Greg Keating and Doug Patey added singles for the winners.

Roger Dorey, with two goals, led Kingston while singles went to Mike Crombeen, Dave Hynek, Larry Murphy, Alex Forsyth and Brad Shiness.

Playing at home before 2,701 spectators, Kingston outshot the Greyhounds 41-33.

Rangers 4 Generals 3

Dwight Foster's goal midway through the third period lifted the last-place Kitchener to the win before 3,066 home spectators.

The Rangers led 2-0 after the first period 3-2 in the second.

Mark Holbrook, Dan Djakalovic and Claude Noel scored the other Kitchener goals.

Paul Gardner, Joe Greentree and Greg Malone replied for Oshawa, outshot 43-41.

Fincups 3 Wolves 3

Greg Hickey's goal late in the third period snapped a three-game losing streak for third-place Hamilton.

Joe Contini and Archie King also scored for Hamilton.

Richie Hansen, Jim Maxfield and Randy Carlyle replied for the visitors.

The Fincups outshot the Wolves 48-31, including a 24-7 second-period margin, but were thwarted by ex-Fincup Rick Szabo who played in the Wolves' net. Szabo was traded two weeks ago for a fourth-round draft choice.

The 'Brat' is Back

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Zeke Bratkowski, one of the National Football League's best reserve quarterbacks when he helped Green Bay Packers win three successive league championships in the mid-1960s, rejoined the club Friday as quarterback coah.

The announcement was made by Bart Starr, the Packers' new head coach and general manager and their No.1 quarterback during the championship years.

Bratkowski, 43, had been quarterback coach of Chicago Bears the last three seasons. He was dismissed last month along with head coach Abe Gibron and the Bears' other assistant coaches.

Bratkowski is the second assistant appointed by Starr, named to succeed Dan Devine Dec. 24. Dave Hanner, defensive co-ordinator under Devine, was reappointed earlier this week and given additional duties of assistant head coach.

Flyers Upset League Leaders

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Niagara Falls Flyers scored three unanswered goals in the third period Friday night, coasting to a 6-2 upset of league-leading Welland Sabres in Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League play.

In the other league contest, Guelph Biltmores snapped a five-game losing streak, dumping Chatham Maroons 10-5.

At Niagara Falls, the third-place Flyers held period leads of 2-0 and 3-2.

Mark Dumesnil scored two goals while Willie Plett, Peter Aleo, Wally Yaciuk and Mark Florentino added singles for Niagara Falls.

Buffy Dupuis and Ken McKenzie replied for Welland, outshot 35-33.

Welland remains three points ahead of the idle Windsor Spitfires while Niagara Falls is still deadlocked with Guelph.

At Guelph, the Biltmores built up a 9-2 lead before the Maroons scored three goals in the final three minutes of the game.

Wally Keating, Mike Nogan and Doug Bisson each scored twice, with Wally Hogg, Dave Kennedy, Les Batog and Gord Duncan added singles.

John Flynn led Chatham with two goals. Mike Cosentino, Steve Young and Doug Simpson got the others.

League action resumes tonight with Detroit Junior Wings playing host to Niagara Falls. On Sunday, Detroit visits Chatham, Niagara Falls travels to Guelph and Windsor meets Welland.

Austrian Drivers Tested

VIENNA (AP) — It's tough and expensive to get a driver's licence in Austria.

Last year nearly 132,000 persons received licences but 57,000, or 44 per cent, failed the test on the first try. They had to come back for a second time, some of them even a third.

As the failure rate ranged from 55 per cent in the province of Styria to 23 per cent in Carinthia, minister of traffic and transport Erwin Lanc ordered an investigation.

He said he could not believe that the traffic situation could be so different in the provinces. He suggested written tests instead of the direct examination of applicants by traffic officers under the present system. Most applicants stumble on theoretical questions.

People who passed the driver's tests also said they became nervous when facing traffic officers to explain such things as traffic laws and engine functioning. Some even suggested the traffic officers liked to make applicants nervous and to catch them off guard with tricky questions.

Although it is possible to get a learner's permit in Austria just as in other countries, hardly anyone bothers to get one, as too much red tape is involved. Instead, learners go to driving schools.

Some 1.6 million private cars are licensed in Austria. The saturation point is expected to be reached in about 10 years and driving schools are still booming.

An applicant must count on spending a minimum of 3,000 schillings ($162) before getting a licence. The average monthly wage is 5,500 schillings.

Driving schools on the average charge 1,200 schillings for 40 hours of theoretical lessons and as fees for paper work. One hour in the driving school car with an instructor costs an additional 130 schillings.

Applicants who have had some experience such as driving their father's car may be able to get by with 10 hours. Others may need as much as 40 hours before getting the nod of the driving school to take the test.

Austrians, who otherwise have a reputation for courtesy, seem to forget this once they have a driver's licence and a car. Speeding seems a national obsession.

Hernia Developed After Pregnancy

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: After having a baby I developed an epigastric hernia. I was told it was nothing to worry about, but I should have it removed before becoming pregnant again.

It sticks out about an inch above my navel. Could you please tell me what this is and if it can be harmful?—Mrs. C.Y.

At the mid-abdomen area, there is a tough fibrous band attached to the muscles of the abdomen, and a weakness in the upper portion of this band results in a bulge which is called an epigastric hernia. It is a condition that can occur after pregnancy caused by the pressures of childbirth.

Your doctor is correct. Time can bring an enlargement of the hernia if it does not heal itself. Should it enlarge, you can expect some discomfort if you are not already feeling any.

It would be wise to follow your doctor's advice and have it repaired before becoming pregnant because surgery then would not be advisable.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Our neighbors have an active little boy six years old who we are very fond of. The parents correct and punish this child with daddy's leather belt which leaves blisters and red bruises for days.

We are so afraid of kidney injury or broken bones. Should we report this to the authorities?—Mrs. F.L.

Yes. You should find a listing for Child Welfare in the telephone book for the county in which you reside.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been reading about thermography and thermograms recently and would like to know if it is true that this test can possibly find an early breast cancer, even before a doctor can feel it.

What does the American Cancer Society say about thermograms?—A.B.

Besides physical examination of the breast or removal of a lump for microscopic study, there are three other approaches to early detection of breast cancer:

One is the mammogram, an x-ray of the breast tissue. Another is xerography, rather similar to it. A third is by thermography in which instruments that are highly sensitive to the slightest variations in body heat are used to detect areas of abnormality in tissue.

An increase in temperature from a localized area is cause for suspicion, but not at all conclusive evidence of cancerous tumor.

Detection by such instruments often can be used to confirm suspicions raised by other methods, and vice verrsa.

The American Cancer Society approves of all these procedures, especially that of self-examination after each menstrual period or at regular intervals in women not menstruating. Most early detection of breast cancer comes from self-examination.

Not all areas are equipped to do thermography, but many can handle mammography and xerogrrarphy.

If you look at all the cards you can see that South can make four notrump by taking a successful finesse for the queen of hearts and eventually getting an end play against West.

A match-point player trying for a top score might well do just that, but a good rubber bridge player would see that there was a inch play for his three notrump contrract.

He would start proceedings by ducking the first space and taking the next one. Then he would cash just three club tricks while taking care to leave the higher club in dummy.

After this start he would throw West in with a spade and relax. West would cash three spade tricks. Two diamonds would be discarded from the North hand and a diamond and heart from South.

West would have to lead a red card to give South the rest of the tricks.

Why was it necessary for South to take care to leave the high club in dummy? Because if he hadn't done that West could lead a heart; East could there would be no way for refuse to play his queen and South to score three heart tricks.

Haldeman Seeking New Trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — H. R. Haldeman's lawyers say the Watergate cover-up trial jurors "may have received influential information which could have affected their verdict" while they considered charges in the case.

They asked U.S. District Judge John Sirica Friday for a new trial and permission to subpoena one of the jurors and a newspaper reporter.

The jury convicted Haldeman and three other defendants on New Year's Day of conspiracy to obstruct justice in the Watergate case.

The next day, the Washington Star-News reported that juror Ruth Gould "hinted there were some jurors who disregarded his (Sirica's) instructions not to watch television or read newspapers during the brief periods they were not actually under surveillance."

"I just think I never said anything like that, I didn't indicate anything like that and it wasn't true," Mrs. Gould told The Associated Press Friday. She added that none of the jurors watched television or read newspapers during the three-day deliberation period.

Sirica had permitted the jurors to read newspapers, listen to radio and watch television during the trial's testimony phase. But a U.S. marshal always was supposed to screen out references to Watergate.

The judge, however, banned all TV, radio and newspaper reading after the jury got the case last Monday.

Haldeman's lawyers asked for a hearing "to develop the accuracy and extent of the news article." They asked also for permission to subpoena Walter Taylor, whose by-line appeared on the story in Thursday's Star-News.

Taylor said, "Another reporter was involved in the story and I didn't talk to Mrs. Gould. But I stand by the accuracy of the story."

New trial motions are routine and were expected from the other men. John Mitchell and John Ehrlichman, together with Haldeman, were convicted on multiple counts. Robert Mardian was convicted only of conspiracy.

Sirica is awaiting a presentence report before setting a date for sentencing. All four defendants said they will appeal after sentence is pronounced.

Trudeau Hopes European Trip To Reduce Dependency on U.S.

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal officials say to main thrust of Prime Minister Trudeau's European visit in March will be to "reinforce the third option"—that is, to reduce this country's economic dependency on the United States.

Economic matters will dominate the discussions, they predict. When he visits Bonn, Rome, The Hague and London in the first two weeks of March the over-riding topic will be increased trade between Canada and the European Common Market countries.

Trade matters may even arise during Mr. Trudeau's audience with the Pope March 7, his first visit to the Vatican since January, 1969, when he announced that Canada would send a diplomatic mission to the Holy See.

When officials talk of the "third option" in connection with the prime minister's visit the reference is to the various alternatives outlined by the government 2½ years ago toward reducing economic dependency on the U.S.

The first option mentioned was to leave things as they are, the second to establish a deliberate policy of cutting economic ties with the States. Both were rejected in favor of the so-called third option—trying to reduce dependency by increasing trade with other countries.

"It's hard to say if the policy is really working," Mr. Trudeau said recently." . . . The policy is working in the sense that we're looking for diversification, but I don't know if the percentage of trade actually has varied more than a fraction."

The third option was high in mind when Mr. Trudeau earlier visited Moscow, Peking and several western European countries. There were no dramatic breakthroughs in terms of trade, but the idea was to draw attention to Canadian products and the Canadian market.

"It's a matter of kicking both ourselves and others in the pants to make sure we don't have all our eggs in one basket," Mr. Trudeau has said.

"All we're saying is that we want buyers and sellers in the international markets to know more about what Canada has to offer. . . ."

Bricklin Sports Cars Now Rolling Off Line

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — Bricklin officials say more than 650 of the company's gull-winged sports cars have been made and production is moving rapidly toward the stage at which the government-assisted venture will break even.

Malcolm Bricklin, president of the parent General Vehicle Inc. of Phoenix, Ariz., said Friday that production is moving toward 25-30 vehicles a day—the break-even point—and his officers predict 32 Bricklins a day will be rolling off the assembly line by next month.

Bricklin Canada Ltd., the subsidiary which builds the two-passenger safety car, has been plagued by problems since the plant officially opened this summer. But Mr. Bricklin said any new auto plant faces similar problems and the venture was less risky now than when it began.

"We are surviving and surviving well," said the 35-year-old businessman and promoter, "every car we build is pre-sold."

The $7,500 cars are being shipped by truck into the eastern United States as they are produced and are distributed by a network of more than 200 dealers.

About 400 workers now are employed on the assembly line at Saint John and an additional 180 at Minto, N.B., where the acrylic glass fibre car bodies are manufactured.

The company hopes eventually to produce 1,000 cars a month in New Brunswick and to open a second plant in the United States.

Sarnia-Montreal Pipeline Approved

TORONTO (CP) — Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Friday he has worked out a financial plan with Interprovincial Pipe Line Ltd. for construction of an oil pipeline to Montreal from Sarnia, Ont.

He made the disclosure following a three-hour meeting with Interprovincial officials and said the "very specific document" would be discussed when the federal cabinet meets Jan. 13.

He would not give details.

Mr. Macdonald said in an interview that implicit in the plan is federal government financial backing should there be a shortage of oil supplies from Western Canada.

Interprovincial officials have asked the government for financial guarantees before it starts construction of the 520-mile Sarnia-Montreal line.

Interprovincial says it fears the pipeline will be uneconomical if oil supplies fall below 250,000 barrels a day.

Mr. Macdonald said most major problems were identified during "intensive discussions" Friday.

He again revised the proposed cost of the pipeline upwards to $200 million from the $180 million estimated a few months ago. One year ago the cost was put at $140 million.

Mr. Waldon said it is still possible to complete the pipeline by the end of 1976, but it is becoming "increasingly difficult."

The Toronto-based company applied to the National Energy Board last spring for permission to build the extension—western oil now stops in Sarnia.

But the company told a hearing this fall it might not be able to go ahead without financial aid from Ottawa.

Reasons for the reluctance is the dwindling reserves of Canadian crude oil which might mean there will not be enough oil in future to keep the line operating at capacity of 250,000 barrels a day.

At a meeting in November the energy minister said options ranged from a change in the company's rate structure to a minimum revenue guarantee to some form of government ownership.

Wiretap Of SIU Held Legal

TORONTO (CP) — Mr. Justice Thomas Callon of the Supreme Court of Ontario ruled Friday that Metropolitan Toronto police did not require court authorization June 15, 1974, when they tapped a telephone conversation between the president of the Seafarers' International Union (SIU) and Labor Minister John Munro.

Sergeant Harry Crawford of the police intelligence bureau said the conversation between Roman Gralewicz and Mr Munro, concerning a $500 contribution to Mr. Munro's election campaign, was intercepted 15 days before new legislation made it mandatory to obtain court approval before installing a wiretap.

Aubrey Golden, lawyer for the SIU, had asked the court to let the union know what evidence there was to justify police wire taps on the union's phone.

Because the wiretaps were made when court authorization was not needed, no written justification was given to the court and the judge dismissed Mr. Golden's application.

Lawyers Advised Bassett Not to Use King Diaries

TORONTO (CP) — John Bassett, publisher of the defunct Toronto Telegram, said Friday he obtained portions of former prime minister Mackenzie King's private diaries 20 years ago but decided against publishing them on the advice of lawyers.

The former prime minister's diaries for the years 1932 to 1944 were made public by the Dominion Archives this week in Ottawa. Earlier, volumes covering the years 1893 to 1931 were opened.

Mr. Bassett said the diaries were obtained by The Telegram from a disgruntled archives employee.

"I wanted to publish them because I loathed King," Mr. Bassett said. "He was a son-of-a-bitch."

"It shows he was crazy . . . having conversations with Sir Robert Borden and his old dog."

Mr. Bassett said the newspaper paid $4,000 or $5,000 for parts of the King diaries in 1953 or 1954 but added that he was not sure of the exact date.

"We didn't publish the stuff because it was strongly urged on me by my lawyers that we might get into trouble."

In Ottawa Jack Pickersgill, a former Liberal cabinet minister and a long-time aide to Mr. King, said he took no steps to prevent Mr. Bassett from publishing the diaries, but he added that anyone who bought them would have been buying stolen property and, at any rate, the copyright was held by Mr. King's four literary executors.

Kissinger Says Ford Backs Oil War Stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger says President Ford agrees with his statement that the United States could, in a grave emergency, use military force against Middle East oil producers.

"I reflect the views of the president," Kissinger told reporters Friday, referring to an interview with Business Week in which he said: "I am not saying there's no circumstances where we would not use force."

Referring to the interview, Kissinger said: "What I said was carefully considered. We do not consider the present situation the gravest emergency."

But in Everett, Wash., Senator Henry Jackson criticized Kissinger's statement.

"It's a delicate situation (in the Mideast) that calls for quiet diplomacy," the Washington Democrat said Friday in an interview at his home here. "I don't think any great power should speak in threatening terms to the world publicly."

Jackson, a likely candidate for the 1976 Democratic presidential nomination, said the United States should instead threaten withdrawal of its gunboats from the area. He said the United States' military presence in the Mideast is important to some oil-rich Arab countries who are less strong militarily than other poorer Arab countries.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey Says Belt-tightening Essential

Civic Programs May Have to Wait Until Economy Improves

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Belleville in the next two years:

There are solid grounds for civic optimism. But, any great expectations must be tempered by the realities of general economic uncertainties. New civic programs may be shelved until the economy stabilizes.

The qualified predictions came from Mayor Robin Jeffrey today as she suggested the tone of city hall government at the inaugural session of the 1975-76 city council this morning.

Her theme of "cautious optimism" included these contrasting reflections:

(1) There's no current alternative to fiscal belt-tightening. To maintain a reasonable tax rate now may mean cutbacks on proposed programs and services.

But —

(2) A still-expanding industrial settlement will also enrich the city treasury with new taxes, easing its struggle with inflating costs over the next two years.

The immediate tasks of the new council will be influenced by the prevailing economic moods of the community, Mayor Jeffrey warned. City hall politicians must take grassroots consultation with the citizenry before endorsing priorities, she suggested.

But such discussions "must be frank".

"The only way we can maintain a reasonable mill rate is to postpone proposed new programs or cut back on services.

"There is no alternative."

With budgets, governments are no different from households, said the mayor.

"There is only so much money to spend and what money is available comes from their pockets. Belt-tightening has to take place in the home and it has to take place in government."

She restated the theme later: "Although council is committed to proceed with further development, major projects and services, we'll be doing so in an inflationary economy — with the dollar value and spending eroded.

"New projects for 1975 and 1976 may have to be postponed until a more stable economic picture is apparent."

"But expanding industrialization in the past year has set a record — $7-million in construction values. Plants going up or on the way, by 1975 will create 300 new jobs paying $2.5 million.

But the record building alone will pump $300,000 in property and business taxes into city hall coffers by 1976.

This growing funds flow through 1975 and 1976 will "help us pay higher wage demands and increased service costs," said the mayor.

Meantime, predictions favor an economic upswing by late this year or early 1976.

The address, traditional key piece of city council inaugural sessions, came after the mayor — acclaimed to her second term — took the oath of office along with the 10 aldermen who will make local government policy for the next two years.

Other items for upcoming consideration suggested by Mayor Jeffrey:

— Servicing of the 150 acres still left for new industry. Future councils will need the income from further industrialization.

— Adoption of property maintenance ordinances which could make provincial funds available for home renewal loans — about $1,00,000 in total for owner-occupants with incomes below $12,500.

— More contact with municipal neighbors, for what she called "extended regional co-operation".

Teachers Still Bargaining

89,000 Students Wait For Schools to Open

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

More than 89,000 students in the Ontario separate school districts of Durham, Sudbury, Wellington, Carleton, Ottawa, Elgin and London-Middlesex were enjoying an extended Christmas break today while their teachers and school board trustees sat through crucial stages of contract bargaining.

The students, on holiday since Dec. 20, were to return to classes today, except in Elgin County where they are not due back until Tuesday because of a teacher development day there today.

About 33,000 students in Durham and Sudbury districts are expected back to school Tuesday pending ratification of tentative agreements reached at weekend bargaining.

Talks between Wellington teachers and trustees broke off in Toronto early today after the board refused a compromise proposal suggested by the education ministry. Details of the proposal were not known but a spokesman said it would have given the teachers approximately what they wanted.

The board also refused to accept a suggestion by the teachers that the two sides go to mediation—and then arbitration if necessary—which would have meant an immediate return to work.

Bargaining teams from Elgin were to meet in Toronto today, Ottawa teachers and trustees were to meet Tuesday, and Carleton teachers and trustees were scheduled to meet London-Middlesex has not replied to a ministry invitation.

Teachers and trustees from Sudbury, Wellington, Elgin, Ottawa and Carleton chose Toronto as a bargaining site at the invitation of Education Minister Thomas Wells who intervened in the disputes Friday.

Douglas Knott, chief provincial negotiator for the Ontario English Catholic Teachers Association (OECTA), said all the bargaining "won't be settled before the end of the week."

Negotiations in the seven school districts involve 4,168 teachers. The seven regions have 293 schools and about 89,200 pupils.

The OECTA said 85 per cent of the teachers—almost 4,000—submitted resignations to their boards effective Dec. 31, 1974.

A tentative agreement between the Durham separate school board and its 386 teachers, with 8,650 pupils in 28 schools, was reached late Friday and the teachers were to meet at 9 am today to vote on its contents

The tentative agreement calls for average salary increases of 20.6 per cent. This brings the minimum to $7,775 and extends the maximum to $19,200. The board also agreed to pay 75 to 80 per cent of a teacher dental plan.

A tentative agreement between the Sudbury separate school board and its 1,037 teachers, with 24,671 pupils in 83 schools, was reached Sunday afternoon and the teachers were expected to ratify the agreement today. Details have yet to be made public.

When negotiations broke off Dec. 27, the board was offering raises of 16.9 per cent, while the teachers were seeking 18 per cent plus a cost-of-living clause.

A request by teachers for a grievance procedure met with strong opposition from Sudbury trustees. The grievance request was not an issue in Durham negotiations since Durham teachers already had a grievance procedure going into bargaining.

Joe Glaab, negotiator for Wellington teachers, proposed Sunday that if the board agreed to mediation and that mediation failed, the teachers would agree to voluntary arbitration and return to work immediately.

Elgin teachers voted overwhelmingly Sunday to reject the board's offer of a flat $1,500 raise for teachers in all categories.

John Caruana, chief negotiator for Elgin teachers, said the raise would have meant an average increase of 14.3 per cent over one year.

In Ottawa, where salaries are the most contentious issue, the teachers want a 20-per-cent raise over one year and the board is offering 13 per cent. Schools there are unlikely to reopen before Thursday at the earliest, officials said.

The two sides in the Carleton dispute were apparently near agreement Friday, but a spokesman for the teachers said the board reopened non-monetary issues which the teachers had considered settled.

"We're almost back to square one," the spokesman said.

Carleton's separate schools will likely remain closed all week, he added.

The London-Middlesex board has refused to accept Mr. Wells' offer to meet in Toronto with the teachers until the teachers go back to work.

352 Days Left Until Christmas

Christmas trees were being discarded into the streets in Belleville Sunday for the annual city pickup. Rob Murray, age 2, was among the many who helped with the nostalgic chore of dismantling glittering yuletide centrepieces in the city's living rooms. The lights and tinsel have a long wait in storage before reappearing. There are still 352 days to Christmas.

Score Die As Ship Hits Bridge

HOBART, Tasmania (CP) — Officials believe at least 10, and possibly 20, people were killed when a British ore freighter rammed the Tasman bridge Sunday night and brought down a 240-foot section of the span that took the 11,200-ton ship to the bottom.

The bodies of five of the ship's 42 crew members were recovered, and two other crew members were missing. But police said they believed two and possibly four cars plunged from the bridge into the Derwent River 150 feet below. They had no idea how many persons were in the cars, but one vehicle may have held six occupants.

Rockefeller Named To Investigate CIA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional leaders say their planned investigation into the Central Intelligence Agency will proceed even though President Ford has appointed an eight-man commission to look into the spy organization.

Ford named Vice-President Nelson Rockefeller to head the commission created Sunday to "determine whether the CIA has exceeded its statutory authority." The CIA, which is limited by law to foreign intelligence, allegedly has spied on U.S. citizens in the United States.

The commission is to report in 90 days. Ron Nessen, White House press secretary, said the report will be sent to Congress and released to the public.

The other commissioners appointed by Ford were former California governor Ronald Reagan, retired Gen. Lyman Lemnitzer, former solicitor-general Erwin Griswold, AFL-CIO secretary-treasurer Joseph Lane Kirkland, former commerce secretary John Connor, former treasury secretary C. Douglas Dillon and Edgar Shannon, retired president of the University of Virginia.

Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott praised the commission members but said it was necessary for the congressional inquiries to go ahead.

Senator Howard Baker (Rep. Tenn.), who conducted his own inquiry into the CIA's links with the Watergate scandal, commended Ford for creating the commission, but said the commission did not reduce the need for independent congressional action.

U.S. Auctions Gold Bullion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States government opened bids today on two million ounces of gold put on sale as a lure to keep down imports of the precious metal.

Officials had no exact count of the sealed bids submitted in the auction, but they numbered more than 100.

The first dozen or so bids ranged from $45.10 an ounce to $188 an ounce for the 400-ounce bars being offered.

The high offer in the early bidding was from Leslie E. Ellisson of Wayne, N.J., for a single bar at $188 an ounce.

The early bids were all for amounts no greater than 400 ounces. Besides individuals, other bids came from jewelry and electronics manufacturers. Most of the bids were clustered in the $150 to $165 range.

The bid opening took place in a government auditorium where auctioneer George Jamieson, received envelopes containing the offers.

The amount of gold offered by the government at the auction totals less than one per cent of the entire U.S. gold holdings.

IRA Wants to Talk with Protestant Guerrillas

LONDON (AP) — The Irish Republican Army (IRA) has offered to prolong its ceasefire in Northern Ireland indefinitely if Protestant guerrilla groups will negotiate with it, London newspapers say.

The newspapers, quoting sources in Dublin, say the British government is studying the IRA proposal. There was no official confirmation of the reports.

The reports say the proposal did not include the IRA's long-standing demand for a British promise to pull out of Northern Ireland ultimately. Instead it calls on the British government to give its public blessing to direct peace negotiations between leaders of the Roman Catholic and Protestant extremist organizations.

There was no immediate reaction from the militants who now dominate the Protestants in Northern Ireland. But they have repeatedly warned against concessions to the IRA since the Catholic guerrillas proclaimed a Christmas ceasefire Dec. 23 and extended it until Jan. 16.

"Those people who think this ceasefire means it is all over are living in a fool's paradise," one Protestant spokesman said Sunday. "Only when the IRA is crushed will there be lasting peace."

The IRA's aims in the past have always included amnesty for its members, the return of British troops in Northern Ireland to their barracks and a British declaration of intent to withdraw eventually from the disputed province.

The Daily Telegraph says David O'Connell has resigned as chief of staff of the IRA's Provisional wing "so that he can mastermind political negotations with the British government." O'Connell is a vice-president of the IRA's political arm, Sinn Fein, which is legal in Britain and both parts of Ireland.

Students Back At Class

The front corridor of Kente Building at Loyalist College is crowded today as college officials accommodate a large number of student latecomers who did not show up for regular registration Thursday and Friday.

Ernst Kneisel, public relations director, estimated about 80 per cent of the about 1,000 student population did not register last week, necessitating followup procedures today in the corridor.

"I don't like to bandy figures about, but it was dead Thursday and Friday," he remarked. "It's teeming today."

Cause Of Blaze Sought

An investigation into a Dec. 26 blaze in an upstairs apartment at 204 Station St., which slightly injured three firemen, might be completed by the end of this week, said fire chief Leo Culhane today.

"It will depend on my own inspectors and the police department," he explained.

Firemen were called to the two-storey, rough-cast structure, owned by Tom Rogers of 54 Gilier St., at about midnight, and after extinguishing a blaze behind the stairs in a bottom floor closet, discovered smoke issuing from the upstairs apartment.

The apartment, one of four in the building, was gutted, and the tenant's name has not been released. The rest of the house sustained some water damage.

Chief Culhane said the building is still locked up, awaiting repairs, and the other tenants have moved to interim accommodation.

Tape Deck Stolen

City police report a tape player and 12 tapes, valued at $190, were stolen from the car of Robert Dykstra, parked at the rear of his residence, 3 Village Dr. The theft occurred some time between 1:30 and 8 a.m. Jan. 4.

Cooney Gets Contract

From The Ottawa Bureau
Of The Intelligencer

OTTAWA — Twelve Buffalo aircraft stationed at CFB Trenton and CFB Comox, B.C., will be modified under a $151,490 contract awarded to a Winnipeg, Man, firm, Supply and Services Canada announced today.

A Supply and Services spokesman said that the aircraft — nine at Trenton and three at Comox — will be modified between Jan. 9 and July 17 by CAE Aircraft Ltd.

The firm will install and test indicators which give the position of a crashed plane and vertical gyro-slash altitude indicators.

Supply and Services also announced that a Trenton firm, Cooney Haulage Ltd., has been given a $12,000 contract for the rental of tractor dump trucks at CFB Trenton.

The two were among 209 un-

The two were among 209 unclassified contracts — each worth $10,000 or more for a total value of $9,461,254 — awarded to Canadian companies during the week ended Dec. 20.

Parking Meters Damaged

TRENTON — A Trenton man escaped injury after the car he was driving crashed through four parking meters, a guard rail and jumped an embankment into a Front St. parking lot here Sunday.

The vehicle, driven by Arthur Gerald Whaley, 31, of 22 Nicholas St. sustained $2,500 damage. No estimate is available for damage to the meters or railing.

Police said the Whaley vehicle was travelling southbound on Front St. at a high rate of speed.

The vehicle struck a sign in front of the post office before it went out of control, travelling a total of 349 feet before coming to rest in a riverside parking lot, police said.

Town police said Whaley has been charged with dangerous driving and impaired driving.

Classes Still On

Classes have been called off for separate school students in seven districts in Ontario, but Hastings and Prince Edward county schools are not affected.

Separate schools teachers signed a two-year contract with the Hastings-Prince Edward separate school board last March. It will continue in effect until September, 1976.

The salary and working conditions being negotiated by other boards in the province has been satisfied here, said separate school superintendent E. J. Neville.

"They are not matters of contention in this area," he said.

Separate school teachers in Carleton, Elgin county, Ottawa, Middlesex, Wellington, Durham and Sudbury did not show up for work today, the first day of school after the Christmas holiday.

No Delays Expected

Major changeovers in the postal system in the Toronto area should have little effect on incoming and outgoing mail for Belleville, assured postmaster Roy Wainwright today.

Delays in mail delivery in Toronto have been predicted for about the next year, as a result of both emergency procedures undertaken following the Nov. 26 fire at the main Toronto post office, and coming moves to major new facilities.

Developments involve a switch to mechanization, and until this is running smoothly and postal staff become familiar wit hthe new methods, delays are expected.

Mr. Wainwright said most of the effect will be confined to the Toronto area, and Belleville should feel "not too much at all."

Recount Ordered

The December school board election in Ward 1, comprising the eight northern townships of Hastings County, was a close race, and its outcome is still in doubt.

Winner, by one vote, was George Lackey of Carlow. His slim margin defeated incumbent trustee Emerson Robinson, a member of the board since its inception in 1969.

Final count was 906 for Lackey and 905 for Robinson, said Bangor, Wicklow and McLure Townships clerk, Ruth Sears. First returns gave Mr. Lackey a wider margin, but they were found to be incorrect because one municipality telephoned wrong figures to Mrs. Sears election night.

County Judge Russell Honey will conduct a recount in Belleville. The date was first set for Jan. 13, but a change has been requested because of several inaugural municipal council meetings that day.

In the meantime, Mr. Kackey will be sworn in as a trustee on Jan. 8, at the inaugural meeting of the Hastings county board of education.

Ward 1 comprises Bangor, Wicklow and McClure, Hershel, Monteagle, Carlow, Dungannon and Mayo.

Break-in Reported

City police are investigating a break-in at Ken's Transmission at 2 Dundas St. E., which occurred sometime Saturday night or Sunday morning.

Chief Douglas Crosbie said the unknown intruder or intruders broke a window on the west side of the building to gain entry. Nothing, however, was reported missing.

And Away They Go!

Winter may have been slow — and uncertain — in arriving in the Belleville area. But things firmed up with colder weather Sunday — at least enough to send youngsters thronging to West Zwick's ski-toboggan hill. The result was an afternoon of bracing sport — long, long glides, interspersed with the tumbles that only add more zest to the recreation.

Mayor Says Public Faith In Government Shaken

Politicians have lost the confidence of the society they're sworn to serve, Mayor Robin Jeffrey warned today.

But they might help adjust a negative image by adding a word of their own to the formal terms of their official oath.

The word: "Fidelity."

Public confidence has been lost because too many politicians have not lived up to their oaths of office, she said in her inaugural address as a new city hall governemnt was sworn in for the next two years.

"There is no use of pretending that this feeling of distrust is not present," said the mayor "Corrupt elected and appointed government officials have caused this skepticism in the public. It's developed to such a degree today that our democratic form of government could be threatened.

Council can demonstrate in its work and decisions that its electorate's confidence "will not be betrayed."

"People expect the leaders of their government at every level to demonstrate integrity, show common sense and practice fidelity," said the mayor.

Her inaugural address came as she and the 10 other members of council declared to "faithfully and impartially" execute their duties.

She quoted a recent comment of Cardinal Emil Leger that society needs to return to the practice of fidelity.

"What greater example could any of us hav han that of this great Canadian?" she asked.

"Let us then add ourselves to the oath we have taken the word 'fidelity' — and use it in our duties to the people of Belleville and in our work with each other."

Quiet Weekend For Firemen

City firemen enjoyed an easy weekend of duty, with just a minor call.

Firemen responded to an alarm at 85 Cedar St. Saturday night when a fire in a fireplace began to burn a two-by-four piece of wood at its base. There was little damage.

Ellis Predicts:

Little Change in Riding Boundaries

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

There's a good chance the federal riding of Hastings may remain reasonably intact in any future proposals for changing national electoral boundaries, believes Jack Ellis, the constituency's MP.

Layouts of the country's ridings will be up for review again within the next year or so, he says — a sequel to the stormy reception given proposals for revising electoral boundaries in 1973. Suggestions then included amalgamating the present Hastings constituency into two other ridings.

But "I actually think there will be less change in the boundaries (proposed for Hastings) next time," said Mr. Ellis during the weekend.

The report of the 1973 electoral boundaries commission originally suggested drafting the riding as part of two new constituencies — Hastings-Prince Edward and Frontenac-Lennox and Addington.

Belleville would have become the centre of a constituency to include all of Prince Edward County and rural Hastings County municipalities south of Highway 7.

The remaining 18 northern townships of Hastings would have been incorporated with Frontenac-Lennox and Addington.

But the report hit heavy opposition in the Commons and MPs held out for a redistribution that would create 17 new ridings in the next election. The bill drew little attention when it was passed in mid-December.

The result now, said Mr. Ellis, is that another boundaries commission will be assigned to draft a fresh report, incorporating the new electoral districts.

He expected the commission would be appointed within the year.

The revisions suggested in 1973 also sparked opposition in Hastings.

In a brief to the commission at the time, Mr. Ellis opposed redistribution of the northern rural communities out of his riding into neighboring Frontenac-Lennox and Addington. They included the villages of Marmora, Madoc, Tweed and Bancroft.

But, says Mr. Ellis, he believes in keeping the riding of Hastings as representative as possible of the county of Hastings — "much as I'd be delighted to have Prince Edward as part of a riding."

The "historic" ties that bind Hastings County also give identity to it as a federal constituency.

In fact, it might make more sense to enlarge the riding to encompass the entire counney township and the town of Trenton are in neighboring Prince Edward-Hastings, represented by Conservative MP George Hees. The six northernmost townships — Bangor, Wicklow, McClure, Herschel, Monteagle and Carlow — are in Victoria-Haliburton, held by Conservative William Scott.)

Including the major urban centres of Trenton and Belleville, the population of an electoral district involving all of Hastings would approximate the quota guideline of 84,600 under which the 1973 commission worked, said Mr. Ellis.

Negotiators Predict Difficult Times Ahead

This year will see rough times in industrial labor bargaining, agree Bellevillians who are veteran labor negotiators.

Ian Reilly and Reg Loader side with recent national surveys warning of tougher moods around the bargaining tables of the nation's industry. Workers, they say, may emerge more militant.

Mr. Reilly is the Boot and Shoe Workers Union representative; Mr. Loader is a vice-president of the International Jewelry Workers.

Their predictions centre on these core problems:

— Labor: Frustrated by inflation will want to catch up — its bids spurred by big wage settlements including those by senior governments.

— Management: Fearing economic downturns, declining sales, rising costs, will be more resistant to demands.

Mr. Reilly's appraisal is blunt:

"I think it'll probably be a year of rough turmoil, hard negotiations — and maybe a lot of strikes.

"And," he adds, "a year of rising unemployment too."

Employers may be "tight" to deal with because of their fears of economic problems. But workers will "be needing more money to catch up."

"I would think there's going to be a hard time settling contracts," he predicted.

Both negotiators agreed the year could see more militancy among workers.

Union members have become more militant than in the past, agreed Mr. Loader.

Among pointers to this is the increasing number of proposals reached by union negotiators but subsequently turned down by the memberships.

This could also create a compounding factor in future negotiations.

Managements could be "leery" of setting top figures with bargaining teams if they think such offers will be rejected. In turn this will toughen the bargaining process.

But it "remains to be seen if there will be more strikes," added Mr. Loader.

The big baffler is the inflationary spiral and even settlements approximating cost-of-living increases can be deceptive, he said.

For instance: The overall cost-of-living index may rise 12 per cent. Selectively, this includes some items on which consumers can cut back. But such staples as food and housing — inevitable necessities — may have risen 20 per cent.

Thus, even with a 15-percent wage increase, workers actually could be "losing ground," said Mr. Loader.

No Rush To Beat Price Hike

Today's increase in liquor prices did not result in a headlong rush by Belleville district consumers Saturday to beat the boost.

If anything, said the manager of Belleville's central liquor store, Saturday's sales may have been below normal.

One possible reason, said Jim Matthews, manager of the Station St. Liquor Control Board store, may have been that price changes came so close after the Christmas holiday rush.

From today, a 25-ounce bottle of liquor of any brand goes up 50 cents, a 24-bottle case of Canadian beer is up 40 cents and a 26-ounce bottle of wine 20 cents.

There were indications some purchasers were stocking up before the Saturday deadline. But there was no big over-all demand — either from individuals or commercial establishments, said the store manager.

An increased federal excise tax accounts for 50 per cent of the increase. Productions costs, provincial sales tax and LCBO markup make up the rest of the increase, the liquor board said in announcing the higher prices last month.

Renewal Reminder

Renewals of motor-vehicle licences are slower this year in Belleville. Licence bureau worker Margaret McLaughlin holds reminder of what may help speed up processing if last-minute rush develops. It's the data card for licence applications — more involved than last year, but available for filling out in advance to help process renewals.

Demand Still Slow For 1975 Stickers

Motor vehicle licences are being renewed at a slower pace than last year in the Belleville district.

Licences have been on sale since Dec. 1. So far, only about 1,200 car owners have taken out new licences, reports George Cole, manager of the city licence bureau.

This is about 200 less than the same time last year — which also got off to one of the slowest starts in years.

There are about 20,000 automobiles registered in the immediate city area.

As a result, says Mr. Cole, there's "no doubt" of a last-minute rush if the present slow-paced trend continues.

Deadline for renewals is Feb. 28.

This year too, there's more complicated data card to be filled out by applicants. These are available at liquor stores as well as the licence bureau.

Mr. Cole said the cards mean more information must be processed by bureau staff-adding to pressures of any eleventh-hour rush.

Motorists can speed up the process-and make renewals easier on themselves by picking up the cards in advance at any of the outlets.

As in 1974, stickers will be issued for display on licence plates, the last set of which was issued as renewals two years ago.

Each for Himself

A look at New Year messages from leaders of have and have-not nations such as Canada and India is to be left feeling more confused, if not cynical, as ever on how best to further the cause of humanity everywhere in these difficult times.

Mr. Trudeau, vague and seeming to contradict himself, says in part: "In future, Canadians are going to be forced by circumstances into even greater sharing . . . it will not be easy either to share with the starving nations, as we have promised. . ."

Prime Minister Gandhi meanwhile accuses rich countries of "arrogance" in the way they view developing countries.

Not a word about India's development of nuclear military capability, with material supplied by Canada for what was to have been peaceful purposes, but rather a blast at wealthy and "egocentric" Western countries for lecturing India on how to remove poverty and curb population. Also she would like to see further investments abroad regarded more as a "service" to recipient lands than as a medium for corporate profit.

Thus, to listen to Mr. Trudeau it's a case of "once more friends, into the breach . . . somehow;" and to Mrs. Gandhi, "let's have it . . . but don't expect anything in return."

In short, everyone doing his own thing . . . or as the British would have it, muddling through.

A Bill of Rights

The Bill of Rights for Non-Smokers, referred to on Saturday, sets forth three articles; the first being the right to breathe clean air. Non-smokers, it states, have the right to clean air free from harmful and irritating tobacco smoke, and that this right supersedes the right to smoke when the two conflict.

Secondly, the right to speak out. Non-smokers, it goes on, have the right to express firmly but politely their discomfort and adverse reactions to tobacco smoke. They have the right to voice their objections when smokers light up without asking permission.

And thirdly, the right to act. Again, non-smokers have the right to take action through legislative channels, social pressures or any other legitimate means — as individuals or in groups — to prevent or discourage smokers from polluting the atmosphere and to seek the restriction of smoking in public places.

National Education Week on Smoking, during which the emphasis will be on the rights of non-smokers and the health risks faced by smokers themselves, starts January 11. It is a campaign well worth the attention of the public.

Is Ald. Meeks (who wants Council to permit smoking at meetings) listening?

Good Reading

A fine publication is the Chamber of Commerce's "What's Happening in Belleville."

Oriented primarily to the business community, the attractively-illustrated booklet is of interest also to the whole community. Indeed that as it should be, for upon the commercial health of the city depends the future of all who live here.

There is information about new companies and their personnel, and a look too at what is going on downtown and in businesses there. Lots too about the people who work in the city's commercial heart.

The cover of the January-February issue features the tots in the nursery class at Loyalist college, along with their student teacher. All in all it is good reading.

Youngsters Help

Five Oshawa youngsters, aged between 10 and 13, raised some $500 to help a neighbor family who lost two of their children in a Christmas Eve fire which also took the life of another young person. The festive season often brings its share of tragedy, but the action of the boys and girls in conducting a door-to-door effort to raise money deserves praise.

A Little Matter of $14 Million

Ottawa Quiet About Jean-Pierre Goyer's Oil Purchase

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA - So it has to be, well, nutty even to mention it in these free-spending federal days of $28 billion budgets, $84,000 Trudeaumobiles, and projected hefty parliamentary pay raises (upwards of 60 per cent for the Prime Minister.

But there still must be a few old-fashioned folk around who might regard a $14 million loss as a not inconsiderable plucking.

Especially when it comes out of their own taxpaying pocket.

That was the cost last Winter of the federal government panic in the brief, here-today-gone-tomorrow oil supply crisis..

You will remember when Supply and Services Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer, taking out what he termed "insurance" against an anticipated shortage of heating oil, went shopping for a few million gallons on the volatile world "spot price" market?

Jean-Pierre was that remarkable cabinet genius who as Solicitor General – the man-in-charge of the RCMP and prisons — managed to so upset both that the Prime Minister promoted him sideways to Supply and Services.

As Solicitor General he antagonized the RCMP to the point of an official not-so-secret protest strike, and crossed a new frontier in the world of crime and punishment by telling Parliament that rehabilitation of the criminal was more important than the protection of society.

Shunting him into the supposed cabinet blind alley of Supply and Services, the Prime Minister probably figured that Jean-Pierre had been dead-ended into a going-nowhere department where he could do little damage.

The PM likely never figured on Jean-Pierre plunging far over his depth in the uncertain world oil market..

But that is what he did, and managed to keep it a secret for months.

While Canada was still in an oil export position last Winter, Jean-Pierre bought five million gallons from Romania, paying just a shade under $1 a gallon, which was four or five times the going price.

Then he purchased another 21 million gallons from Caribbean suppliers at a lesser, but still grossly over-priced figure..

The total bill was slightly under $21 million.

The non-crisis vanished, world oil prices slipped, and Jean-Pierre was stuck – sticking the taxpayers – with 26 million gallons nobody needed nor wanted.

Not even the government itself could use it, and will be burning the unrequired $1-a-gallon oil into next Winter to heat federal buildings.

The Commons suspected all along that Jean-Pierre had boobed again, goofing up Supply and Services as he had the Solicitor General's Department.

But naturally, he would not tell, and who could blame him?

Former Conservative Prime Minister John Diefenbaker came closest to nailing him with a question as to whether a sympathetic oil company had offered Jean-Pierre 15 cents for his $1-a-gallon panic oil.

"When crazy offers are made," Jean-Pierre replied, "they don't come from us."

Oh no?

The Public Accounts records have blown the whistle on him.

He had made a "crazy offer" in panic to Romanian and the Caribbean oil suppliers which they couldn't refuse, in last Winter's un-crisis, and the whole caper, says the Public Accounts, is costing the taxpayer $14 million.

Diplomatically, Public Accounts put it this way:

"In view of the significant reduction in world oil prices subsequently (to Jean-Pierre's panic $1-a-gallon purchase) it is estimated there will be a loss of approximately $14 million to be recovered from future parliamentary appropriations."

And Parliament "appropriates," as you must be aware, in the form of taxation..

Jean-Pierre plays and you pay.

A Municipal Association That Northern Ontario Will Remember

The Sudbury Star

It was not an organization that was really well known to the public, but for 34 years the Sudbury District Municipal Association had its place in the scheme of things, and now that it is no more a word of appreciation is in order. The association, made redundant with the advent of regional government two years ago, voted itself out of existence, has its surplus funds to go to the Federation of Northern Ontario Municipalities, its records to the archives of Laurentian University.

As is almost implicit in its name, the SDMA was an organization of representatives of communities in the Sudbury district - in this particular instance, extending to Espanola and Chapleau - the purpose of which was to iron out differences and unite in efforts for the betterment of the district. It had a hand in many improvements and amenities, in many cases backed by or on a parallel course with efforts of the various municipal councils, the chamber of commerce and civic groups. These cover a generation, from the need for completion of highway paving back in the '40s right up to the regional government in the '70s, something with which the association had quite a bit to do in its original stages..

The association could speak with a united voice on many topics for the whole Nickel Belt, although it was not unheard of that its component parts, the municipalities it represented, did not go along 100 per cent with the SDMA points of view. Some of those same municipalities even questioned the value of the association's existence, from time to time, but it continued to exist until it became obvious it had run its course of usefulness. The Regional Municipality of Sudbury for the past two years has basically covered the territory and "made the pitches" that the SDMA for so long did. For communities in its outer fringes, such as Espanola and Chapleau, the Federation of Northern Ontario Municipalities will serve as a sounding board.

Because of its relative anonymity except among those in the municipal political field, serving on the SDMA could hardly be classified as headline grabbing or glory-seeking. There were things the association could do and those who made up the membership tried to get them done.

To quote from Othello: "O! now, for ever. Farewell the tranquil mind; farewell content!"

Overseas Interest in Ulster's Anti-terrorist Telephone System

Ulster Commentary

Just over two years after the introduction of the confidential telephone system in Northern Ireland more than 10,000 calls have now been notched up.

That much is known publicly — but nothing else, however. We do not release any information about the calls we receive," say the police. "After all the system is completely confidential."

There are now 17 confidential telephone numbers covering the Province and ranging from Belfast to Londonderry, Strabane to Ballymena, Newry to Newtownards.

A police spokesman said "The confidential telephone is a method by which the public can play its part in preventing crime and enabling us to track down dangerous criminals."

"The increasing extent to which it is being used provides its own evidence of the way in which people are turning to it in their own interests."

The basic principle of the system is its strict confidence.

When a person rings one of the confidential numbers they are answered by a machine and their message is then recorded. There is no contact whatever between the police and the caller. His or her anonmity is fully protected.

Essentially the only people who have anything to fear from the confidential telephone are the criminals.

The system has become an invaluable third ear in the fight against the law-breaker and the intimidator. The simplicity and effectiveness of the scheme have interested police forces abroad and a number of them are now studying ways in which they can use it in their own fight against crime.

It has made an important contribution to the dramatic increase in the rate of crime detection in the Province.

In the last two years, 2,900 people have been charged with serious crimes involving firearms or explosives, with murder or attempted murder, armed robbery, etc.

The pavilion at Crowe Lake, in connection with the summer hotel erected in 1923 by A.T. Neal of Marmora, was burned down last night. The building was valued at $10,000 and was a substantial structure containing beside dancing area, dining room and other room.

County council election yesterday were productive of a number of surprises by the indications are that a strong council has been chosen, remembering of course that 20 seats of the 31 went by acclamation.

Mackenzie King Had Self-serving Friendship with Vice-regal Family

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Madame Therese Casgrain, that great French-Canadian lady of politics and the arts, gave a simple explanation to the strange, strange ways of prime minister William Lyon Mackenzie King, with his interminable diaries, spirit contacts, talking to his dogs about decision-making at the highest level.

He never had a woman in his life to talk to she says, the congenial partner side - by - side through life who most men have in public affairs, or anywhere for that matter.

It's a simple explanation, perhaps too simple for a man who did have his own kind of associations with the opposite sex. It might have driven his permanent mate to distraction.

Would she really have outdone King's mother in the spirit world or the man's Victorian propensity to put it all down in "Dear Diary?"

I am trying to get around to King and Canadian foreign policy and seem to have been sidetracked by "his" women. But in a way, it was his early associations with the two daughters of a governor-general, using them for his own purposes, which won King a high British decoration in 1909, the CBE (Commander of the Order of the British Empire) at about 32 years of age and the first of the kind of kudos he hankered after.

Yet we have been told that King loosened the strong British ties which were weakening during the war years for what were to become the even stronger, closer and more compelling American ones.

And we read this today with our acute sense of nationalism and our concern with U.S. control.

Much of his private musings which found their way into Canadian foreign policy-making in the late 1930s and early 1940s now are revealed, though long suspected, in the opening of his private diaries for the years 1932-1944.

Especially interesting was King's determination that he, not the regal representative at the time, in the form of Lord Tweedsmuir, the Governor-General, should greet George V and Queen Elizabeth on their arrival in Canada in the late spring of 1939.

An entry for November 25, 1938, in the King diaries indicates his surprise that Tweedsmuir was writing to Buckingham Palace asking for direction on who should do the honors at the royal reception planned for the next year.

Mr. King in his diary gave his victory in the matter such prominence as to call it, "the acknowledgement in writing . . . of the complete national sovereignty of the Dominion."

He personalized it to such an extent that he saw Tweedsmuir as the official greeter of monarchy on Canadian soil and not himself as betraying, "the house of my grandfather" (William Lyon Mackenzie, leader of the 1837 rebellion in Upper Canada for responsible government.)

Meeting George V, King admitted to "Dear Diary" he would "complete the work of my grandfather and of Liberalism thus far in Canada."

No wonder we Canadians will go on speculating about the real nature of this cautious, often steely-hard, weird and very lonely leader, unless of course the Diefenbaker papers are just about as frank and as strange in their own way.

One doubts that Dief will really "lay it on the line" in the style of Mackenzie King. I am told he doesn't talk to his dog about politics. And he has lived happily with two gracious and understanding ladies.

British Companies Benefit from University Research Facilities

BBC London Letter

The University of Bath in the west of England, which is a technological university, decided three years ago to go into business on its own account. It set up its own company, South Western Industrial Research Ltd, University of Bath, offering its specialised research facilities for the benefit of outside industry. BBC World Service looked at how the idea has worked out in practice.

Bath is one of Britain's newest and most lavishly equipped universities. It is perched high on a hill overlooking the city and building work on some of the blocks is still going on. The research company's headquarters are housed in the main university building and there one of the directors, Mr. Roy Forsey, explained what started off this rather novel move away from the conventional academic pattern. He told BBC listeners:

"We realised the university could do much more than act as just an information source, and so it was decided to capitalise on this by setting up a department within the university which would undertake contract research.

"This is research which has a direct objective rather than the open-ended academic type of research which might normally be done within the university."

Most firms, especially the smaller ones, find it too expensive to maintain their own research and development departments. They would normally turn to private consultants. But now, if they have a problem, they can bring it straight to the university which has a fully trained research staff backed up by the most modern equipment ready and able to help them.

The sort of problems the university's researchers tackle are many and varied. There are in fact as many as 80 projects running concurrently, each taking anything from a few months to several years.

They are working for example, on the electrical regeneration problem how to produce a long life battery for use in electrically powered vehicles.

Recently they were contracted by a well known rubber company to try to find out mathematically why the properties of a radial tyre are superior to those of a cross ply.

And one important study they are at present engaged on is the effect that wind and wave vibrations can have on oil platforms anchored out in the North Sea.

The specialised equipment at the university includes a wind tunnel, an electron microscope and a mass-pectrometer — a very powerful tool used by chemists in the detection of trace elements in such things as foodstuffs.

The latter was used recently to help solve a rather tricky problem. A food manufacturing firm became aware that some unknown toxic element was tainting food in one of its cold stores.

It consulted the university company which was later able to establish that it was a jointing compound used in the floor of the food store that was responsible for the damage.

Successes such as these have helped to bring Bath's technological and scientific research into considerable prominence. And its services are in demand not only from firms inside Britain but fro mseveral abroad as well.

What, though, happens to the money that it earns? As Roy Forsey explained, it's all ploughed back into the university to provide funds to support further research.

Broadcasts to Foreign Parts

Radio Canada International

New morning programs to Europe and Africa are the highlight of our new winter — spring schedule. Starting with English at 0530 GMT, the English and French newsrooms of Radio Canada International will provide two hours of alternating 20-minute news programs, covering international and Canadian developments.

Indeed, all English service to Europe and Africa is being improved, with the use of transatlantic cable facilities and relay stations in England and Malta. The new 57-minute evening program to Africa, from 1800 to 1857 GMT, should encounter much better reception than its 45-minute predecessor.

Finally, for South Pacific listeners, there is an important time change. 0900 to 1000 GM should prove more convenient in most areas than the former 0830 to 0930 GMT slot.

Berlin Retirement for U.S. Pilot

West German Information Bulletin

Captain Jack Bennet has been flying aircraft most of his working life, first war planes in the U.S. Air Force and then passenger airliners. He has done the run through the air corridors to West Berlin more times than he can remember. Now, he is retiring in Berlin with his wife Marianne..

Jack became an airline pilot in 1946, and flew his first Clipper to Berlin on May 18 of that year. It was in 1946 that he became the first American civilian pilot to land a scheduled flight from the U.S. to Germany..

In 1948, he had another first: He was the first flight captain to fly in food and medical supplies at the start of the air lift to save West Berlin, which was beleaguered by the Communist blockade.

Willy Brandt, during his time as Governing Mayor of the city, preferred to fly with Captain Bennett, and in 1965 he awarded his friend the Federal Republic of Germany's Order of Merit..

Now Jack is turned 60, and under U.S. regulations has to hang up his headphones for the last time. He speaks fluent German. On settling in the divided city, he muses: "Well, you know, I've got special relations to Berlin."

Amateur Naturalist

Hans Faffael of RR 1 Foxboro tries to coax a feathered friend down to feed from his hand. The flock of birds however, did not want to co-operate, probably due to the strange presence of the photographer. Mr. Raffael has cleared land using department of lands and froests instructions to attract wildlife to his farmland.

Birds Abound

Farm Becomes Haven for Wildlife

By CHRIS ALMEY
Staff Correspondent

FOXBORO — Hans Raffael has his own zoo, but there aren't any bars caging the animals. They fly and run around freely on his 95 acres of land located on Mudcat Lane, about a mile from the Thurlow Wildlife Management Area. The reason he has more than the usual number of birds around, is due to his effort of planned woodlot thinning.

Starting ten years ago, he has so far opened up dense underbrush on about 20 acres. "I asked the district forester at Tweed for advice, and he gave all the help I sought," Mr. Raffel said in an interview. The result was "The number of ruffed grouse here has tripled."

The superintendant of maintenance and shops at Stanley Structures in Belleville, Mr. Raffael said he is trying to duplicate the environment that he saw in Europe. "I came from Cologne, and on a Sunday morning walk you could see pheasant and deer ... herds as big as 12."

He said he has seen as many as four deer together on his land, and watched wolves catching mice. There are beaver next door, and they have flooded a bit of his land, attracting ducks, a Heron and Bitterns.

Mr. Raffael dug his own pond for ducks right behind the house, but has left some of the lowlands untouched, since it is a natural nesting ground for woodcocks.

This winter so far has been easy for the birds. The Raffeal family has had as many as ten feeders in use, but only operate two stations this season. In past winters they have purchased 500 pounds of grains to feed juncos, finches, cardinals, grosbeaks and chickadees. Their own geese provide fat for woodpeckers.

"One year I thought the grosbeaks would never leave," says wife Brigitte. "They were still here in May. "Mr. Raffeal says that cars have stopped in front of the house when the trees around have been turned yellow by the birds.

Mr. Raffeal stresses that once you start to feed the birds in winter, you must continue, since they become dependant upon human handouts.

Back in the fields an abandoned car lies rusting. This "eyesore" is a home for snakes.

Despite his appreciation of the department of lands and forests, Mr. Raffael said he has had one disagreement hassle with them.

"Bob Whiten of the Quinte Humane Society gave me a baby great horned owl to look after. It war in a small cage and started to grow to quite a size.

"We fed it raw heart, and had to teach it how to fly. I wanted the lands and forest people to band it in case anything happened to it, but they said it wouldn't survive in the wild. I told them I didn't raise it as a pet, so the night before they were going to get it, I released it.

"He was 22 inches high and they wanteu to keep him. Every time I go to the Sportsmans Show in Toronto I see the caged animals, and it doesn't go down well with me.

"Six weeks later my wife could still call the owl ... Joey, Joey, snapping her fingers, and it would come. That was the last time we saw him, however".

Population Explosion

Several thousand snowmen popped up all over the Quinte area during the school holidays for Christmas and New Year's. Touring Belleville, Frankford, Trenton, Brighton, Marmora and Madoc, this photographer found the most artistic one in Stirling, the biggest in Marmora, and the most photogenic, this one just north of Brighton.

Higher Cost of Winter Feed Doesn't Stop Bird Lovers

PICTON — It's "up with the birds" this winter for many residents of Prince Edward County. According to one local feed distributer, the high cost of living hasn't deterred bird lovers from supplying their feathered friends with lots of bird seed. Both the Picton and Wellington branches of Master Feeds together have sold approximately 3½ tons of mixed bird feed so far this season.

Selling for about 20 cent a pound, most mixtures contain a combination of sunflower seed, creacked corn, wheat, millet and a small quantity of grit. The grit, say feeding station operators, is essential during winter months when birds are unable to procure it through the deep snow .

Some county bird watchers have elaborate feeders that swing like a weather-vane in the wind, this keeping the food away from the storms, along with heated water and a menu enough to make a gourmet blush.

Others have a tiny self-feeder hanging from the clothes line with a large chunk of suet nearby, while still others are content with simply throwing a scattering of bread crumbs on the snow.

Miss Marie Foster, Northport, a retired school teacher, says she feeds the birds because she recognizes their ecological importance and derives pleasure from having them around.

Mr. and Mrs. Victor Camp, RR 1, Picton say they provide welcome company during the winter months around their East Lake farm.

"Even though we have dogs and cats, it is lonesome here until the first, birds arrive at the feeder," the Camps agreed.

Joseph Skratt, a Picton schoolteacher, says an aggregation of birds around the dooryard "brightens up the winter."

"I'm interested in the varities and am always on the look-out for new species at the feedering station," comment Mr. Skratt, whose wife gave him a bird feeder for Christmas this season.

Indeed, the variety is exceptional in Prince Edward County. It's location on the share of Lake Ontario encourages the appearances of many rare and unusual birds.

Many feeding station operators interviewed agreed it was this element of expectation which makes winter bird feeding rewarding.

Car Leaves Highway

PICTON — A single-car accident Friday afternoon on Highway 33, two miles east of here, resulted in $700 damage to a vehicle driven by Laura McAuley, 39, of RR 4, Picton. The vehicle went out of control when it struck a slushy section, entering ditch and striking a tree and a fence. Damage to the fence was estimated at $25. There were no injuries in the mishap.

Three Cars Collide

MADOC — Damage totalled $850 dollars in a three-car crash at this village's main intersection Saturday.

Police said cars driven by Mrs. Amelia Morrison, Madoc, and Leo Joseph Roy, 67, of nearby Moira Lake, collided at St. Lawrence and Durham streets.

Both cars then were in collision with a third vehicle, waiting for traffic clearance. The third car was driven by Tony Marvin Pounder, 17, RR 2 Madoc, police said.

Icy Roads Blamed in Crash

CARRYING PLACE — Icy conditions contributed to a single-car accident at 1:15 Saturday morning on the Rednersville Rd., 1½ miles east of here. Taken to Belleville General Hospital with cuts and bruises was 16-year-old Jeffrey Lobb of Belleville. His vehicle entered the ditch colliding with a utility pole. The Lobb vehicle received $1,000 damage and damage to the pole was estimated at $100.

Farm Club Gathers

Annual meeting of the Hasting Farm Service Club will be held Friday, Jan. 10 at the Legion Hall, Stirling.

The day-long meeting will begin at 10 a.m. and continue to adjournment at 4 p.m. Lunch will be served for those who reserve it at noon and guest speaker Bill Hurst of Brighton will present a special crop report at 2:30.

When it was established in 1967, the farm service club amalgamated the county's soil and crop improvement association, plowmen's association and farm safety council.

The club has expanded its activities to include providing leadership in special activities, programs and bus trips, bursaries for Hastings students at the Kemptville College of Agricultural Technology and introduction and maintenace of supplies of new equipment such as spray calibration bottles.

In addition, the club operates the Pancake Hill Farm as the centre of work on forages, fertilizer, low-cost fencing method, basic cattle handling equipment and livestock testing methods.

Wellington Arena Opens With Centre-ice Ceremony

By TERRY SPRAGUE
Staff Correspondent

WELLINGTON — That was summed up as "an investment to help parents raise good children to become good citizens'' was recognized Saturday night at the official opening of Wellington District Community Centre. The ceremony, preceded by a dinner in the upstairs community hall, was held at centre ice between the first and second period of a hockey game between the Picton and Wellington Peewees. On hand for the event were Wellington Edward County Warden Keith McDonald, MPP James Taylor, the Wellington District Arena Board and members of Prince Edward County Council.

In making the dedication, Delbert Boyle, chairman of the Wellington Arena management committee, gave thanks to the warden and members of Prince Edward County Council for their generous grant and congratulated them on their wisdom in seeing the need for a new arena.

He also tendered his thanks to the arena board for their help and support through out the project and MPP James Taylor who "obtained every available dollar in the way of provincial grants".

Recognition was also given John Guthrie of Belleville, the engineer; Weiger De Jong of Stirling, the contractor, and all service clubs and church groups and anyone who assisted in any way.

"Together, you are the real builders of this arena," he stressed.

The old arena was destroyed by fire Dec. 18, 1973. Construction began on the new building early in June and was completed Dec. 16 of last year, at a contract price of $294,373.87.

In an interview, Mr Boyle stated that the construction price amounted to approximately $325,000 due to the need for additional equipment and the cost of demolition of the old structure. The largest grant received was from Prince Edward County Council in the amount of $154,000 with an additional government grant of $75,000 received. A number of fund-raising projects also assisted in the construction of the arena.

The Wellington District Community Centre serves part of Hallowell Township, part of Ameliasburg Township, all of Hillier Township and the communitites of Bloomfield, Hillier and Wellington.

The new structure is 220 feet long and 100 feet wide and features a 120 feet by 30 feet upstairs community hall, six dressing rooms and seating capacity for 600.

Mr. Boyle, who led the fund drive and said it took 117 meetings to make the project a reality, added, "As a committee, we may have pointed out the way, but it was the people's dedication and determination that did it."

Arena in Action

Wellington Peewees and Picton Peewees faced off for the first game in the new Wellington District Community Centre on the weekend. During a lull in the action, a young spectator takes advantage of the canteen facilities.

Empty Farmhouse Target of Thieves

TWEED — Provincial police are investigating the burglary of a summer home southeast of here in which household and farm implements were taken.

Police said they believe the break-in — at an old farmhouse, now owned by William Edward Boustead, 70, of Port Credit, Ont. — may have been staged around the Christmas holiday.

Last time the owner checked the house was near the end of November. Police were called when a next-door neighbor noticed a door had been forced.

Items listed as missing include a roto-tiller, electric heater, dishes, kettles, frypans, wash basins and two oars.

Snowmobiler Injured

MADOC — A snowmobiler underwent surgery for back injuries Saturday after he was hurled against a tree when his machine went out of control ascending a snowbank near here.

Kenneth Allan Wilman, 24, RR 2, Marmora, was injured when his snowmobile went out of control on the Old Marmora Rd. four miles west of here.

Mr. Wilman was picked up and taken home by two companions with whom he had been snowmobiling, when the mishap occurred around 1 a.m.

He was then taken to hospital in Belleville and later transferred to Kingston General Hospital for treatment.

Quinte Cuisine

"This isn't really Grandma Marshall's Cream Pie," says Leila Marshall, whose recipe was suggested to Quinte Cuisine by a long-time neighbor and pie lover, Garnet Hamilton.

Mrs. Marshall explains that the old family recipe came from her husband Sam's grandmother who lived at Thomasburg.

"It should really be called Grandma Adam's Cream Pie," she says.

Whatever you call it, this pie is fast, easy, and memorably good.

Grandma Marshall's Cream Pie

one cup thick cream OR one cup evaporated milk 1½ cup of brown sugar
nutmeg to taste

Add the sugar to the cream to thicken it, and then beat it with a spoon just until the sugar is thoroughly mixed. Sprinkle with nutmeg.

one pound shortening five heaping cups flour pinch or two of salt water as needed

Cut the shortening into the flour and salt. Add water slowly as you mix the dough until it has the right consistency for easy rolling.

Line an eight-inch pie pan with the pie dough. Add half the sugar and cream mixture.

Then, roll out a circle of pie dough (the same diameter as the pan) as thinly as possible. Place this layer on top of the pie. Add the rest of the cream and sugar on top of this layer, and cover with an other layer of pie dough. This top crust should be thin, but not so thin as the middle one.

Prick the crust with a fork, and bake the pie in a 350-degree oven, for between 40 and 60 minutes, until the top crust is nicely browned and you can see the cream bubbling at the edges.

Do you know any good cooks? The Intelligencer is looking for cooks in the area willing to share their recipes with our readers. If you're a good cook, or if you know one, write The Women's Department, The Intelligencer. Be sure to include his or her address and phone number.

50th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Jones were honored on the occasion of their Golden Wedding Anniversary recently.

An open house was held at their RR1, Corbyville home.

They were married in Belleville on December 24, 1924 at the Methodist Parsonage with Rev. H.B. Kenney officiating.

Prior to the open house, Alma Ross, their daughter, Eleanor and Carl Latchford, daughter and son-in-law and sons and their wives Albert and Madlyn and Robert and Jean, gathered with their families to make a family presentation.

At the open house, flowers and gifts and cards were received including best wishes from John Diefenbaker, Robert Stanfield, Jack Ellis, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, Governor-General Jules Leger and Madame Leger along with best wishes from MPP Clarke Rollins who attended the celebration.

Eighteen grandchildren and four great grandchildren attended.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Jones

People and Events

The Belleville Christian Women's Club will hold a coffee and dessert Wednesday, January 15 beginning at 1.15 p.m. at the Four Seasons Hotel.

At the meeting a special feature will be a demonstration of craft ideas using "bits and pieces most people throw out".

Brenda Thiffeault will sing at the meeting.

Guest speaker is Erma Davidson, a poet and songwriter.

For reservations to attend the coffee and dessert — the cost is $1.75 — telephone Willy Stokmans, 962-5849 or Naomi Blackwell, 962-6049.

Hurter —Hart

The Church of St. Michael the Archangel was the scene of the wedding of Seanna Elizabeth Hart and Alfred Timothy Hurter in December.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.P. Hart and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A.M. Hurter, Beaconsfield, Quebec.

Rev. John Grainger performed the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an organza gown with empire waist and wedding ring collar. Her veil was trimmed with scalloped chantilly lace and she carried red roses and stephanotis.

The bride's sister, Karen St. Amand, was matron of honor in a green velvet gown. She carried bronze mums.

Elaine Casselman and Patricia Lindsey were attendants in gold velvet gowns.

Robert Hurter, the groom's brother, was best man assisted by ushers Brian MacRory, Montreal and Keith Lindsey, Ottawa.

A reception was held at the Officers' Mess, CFB Trenton.

The couple will reside in Montreal.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Timothy Hurter

Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Richard Yaskew

Yaskew — Morrison

Mary Ellen Morrison and Irwin Richard Yaskew exchanged wedding vows in December in a candlelight service at Eastminister United Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Morrison; the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Yaskew Rossburn, Manitoba.

Rev Alex MacDowell and Father Stitt officiated

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a long gown of crepe with a mandarin neckline, and featuring alencon lace. Her four tier waistlength veil was caught in a headpiece of nylon and flowers and she carried red sweetheart roses and baby's breath.

Sharon Cummings was maid of honor; the bride's sister, Valerie Jean Morrison, and Gail Hunter were bridemaids. The attendants wore long red crepe gowns and carried a large white mum.

The groom's brother, Ronald Taskew, Rossburn, Manitoba, was best man, assisted by the bride's brother, Robert Morrison of Peterboro and William Armstrong, Ottawa.

A reception and dinner at the church followed the ceremony and later, a social evening was held at the home of the bride's parents.

After a wedding trip to Peterboro and Ottawa the couple flew to Manitoba and later motored to Fort St. John, British Columbia where they will reside. The groom is an RCMP. officer in that area.

NO SURPLICE SINGERS

ADDINGTON, England (CP) — The distractions of affluent modern society are blamed for a dearth of choirboys in England. "There are so many other demands on young people's time," says Lionel Dakers, director of the Royal School of Church Music in Surrey. Besides which, 25 pence (56 cents) a week isn't much inducement, he adds. He plans a TV competition to find a Choirboy of the Year, with first prize of &1,000 ($2,300).

Art Show Now Open

The 16th annual juried art exhibition of the East Central Ontario Art Association opened at the Corby Library Saturday.

The show, already exhibited in Peterborough, Scarborough and Picton, will remain in the library's upper gallery until January 25.

Bea Williamson, Belleville's representative to the association, said Saturday it's the only travelling show in Ontario.

She said the 40 art works in the show were selected by adjudicators John Bennet and Libby Altworker from 150 submissions. Members in the association are from the area bounded by Belleville Toronto and Bancroft.

The Dora Purden Memorial Award for best in show went to Laurine Sage, Oshawa, for her acrylic, Saturday Morning.

Other awards winners were Jake Mol, Agincourt; Robert Creighton, Port Hope; Betty Weir, Peterborough, D'Arcy Proctor, Pontypool and Audrey MacLean, Oshawa.

Local exhibitors include Muriel Andrews, Belleville; Donnah Cameron, Carrying Place; Ethel Evans, Picton; Meg Pederson, Carrying Place;; Jerry Stapley, Stirling Barbara Whelan, Belleville and Bea Williamson, Belleville.

The show will move to Port Hope in February and Lindsay in March.

Final Touch

Bea Williamson makes the final adjustment while hanging her oil, A Day in the Country, one of 40 art works currently exhibited at the Corby Library. Mrs. Williamson, Belleville's representative to the East Central Ontario Art Association, is one of seven area artists represented in the association's 16th annual juried show.

Ann Landers

'Tasteless' Tells About Tumor

Dear Ann Landers: Since Christmas is the season to be jolly, I wanted to share a mimeographed note that fell out of a Christmas card. No opinion is needed. I have already formed my own.

"Dear friend, I thought you might like to know that the doctors removed a tumor the size of a baseball from Gertrude's stomach. It was not malignant, Lord be praised. She is getting along fine. Gert ate a corned beef sandwich last night, her first in years. It looks like we will have a happy 1975, after all. Hope you do, too." (Signature deleted.) How's THAT for taste?—Philadelphia

Dear Phil: "To each his own," said the lady as she kissed the baboon.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm 44 years old, although I could pass for 35 easy. When my husband died three years ago I went into a depression. My daughter and son-in-law were a great comfort to me. I love them both very much.

I'm ashamed to admit it but I began to love my son-in-law TOO much. We became involved in a sexual relationship which I thought would end in a few months, but it didn't.

Now I find I am pregnant and don't know what to do. I haven't told my son-in-law, but my daughter has already commented on my added weight. (She has no idea what has been going on.)

Because I am in the menopause I wasn't sure I was pregnant until I went to the doctor yesterday. He confirmed it.

Please, Ann, tell me what to do.—Frantic

Dear Fran: Go back to your doctor immediately and ask him what he feels is the best approach to your problem. You should discuss some important facts with him which you omitted from your letter. (1) Would abortion violate your religious principles? (2) Would it be safe at this time? (3) How would you, a widow, feel about raising a child without a husband?

I strongly advise against revealing the identity of the child's father should you decide to have it. Such a revelation would almost surely ruin your daughter's marriage and create endless problems. Good luck to you. You'll need it.

Dear Ann Landers: Last night I heard my husband laughing and asked him what was so funny. He said, "That Ann Landers is something else!". So I read the column, and now I'm writing—something I never thought I'd do.

I've been married 40 years, raised three children of my own and several for relatives. Our kitchen has always been a happy place. I've seen tiny tots on chairs frosting cookies, teenagers making fudge, and college boys broiling hamburgers. I have also stood in that kitchen for hours, cooking for neighbors who have had a death in the family.

We have a rule in our house If you are too busy to do the dishes, don't worry—somebody will do them. The rule works and nobody gets mad.

This morning when my husband left for work he gave me an extra kiss and said, "Thanks for your messy kitchen." I know what he meant. My kitchen looked like a tornado had hit it, because I've been busy with a relative's sick child. Those silly dishes can wait. They aren't people who need love.—Michigander

Dear Mich: People ARE more important than things, but your "standing rule" wouldn't work in most families. They'd run out of clean dishes and somebody would always be mad.

DUMP DRINKS

TOKYO (AP) — Guests and hosts rose in Peking's Great Hall of the People and poured their drinks into the ashtrays. It's an old Zairean custom. The incident happened during a banquet given by Zaire President Sese Seko Mobutu, the Hsinhua news agency said. Mobutu explained that the custom was in memory of one's ancestors and a way of seeking their protection.

She Became Minister, Ordination Protested

TORONTO (CP) — Ten years ago, Ann Bartram was ordained a minister of the United Church of Canada amid a storm of protest.

Opposition was so strong, she says, that she considered saying "to hell with it" and walking away. But after talking with her husband, Bill, she decided to stay and fight. Hours later she was Rev. Ann Bartram

At ordination, she was sure she would be a parish minister — specialized ministeries were not the vogue at the time—she said in a recent interview.

The church sent her to Elk Lake, Ont., about 30 miles south of Kirkland Lake.

She had three communities to look after, 108 miles apart on rough logging roads. Mrs. Bartram described them as a mining town, lumber town and ghost town.

The church manse, she says, was "a large building covered with tar-paper, full of holes and a front door hanging from a broken hinge."

There was no bed, no stove, no refrigerator.

The couple had a baby there and Mrs Bartram blames lack of medical help for its death at three months. They since have had a daughter who is six.

The 18 months up north were practically the extent of Mrs Bartram's role as a parish minister.

Since then, she and her husband have made several moves.

Mrs Bartram became associated with the Toronto Institute of Human Relations, a church-related organization to train counsellors

Canned Mackerel Good Eating Value

HALIFAX (CP) — Bob McClelland, marketing director for National Sea Products Ltd., says canned mackerel is one of the most nutritious fish available and one of the most economical protein foods in the country.

It is also largely unknown.

"Many consumers know and like salmon and tuna so well they have neglected to taste or even notice mackerel, which happens to be a member of the tuna family," he said. Canned mackerel can be substituted in almost any tuna or salmon recipe at large savings per protein dollar.

A seven-ounce can of mackerel sells for a suggested retail price of 33 cents, or 4.7 cents an ounce. Consumers must pay 11.7 cents an ounce for tuna or 14 cents an ounce for sockeye salmon

Substituting 14 ounces of mackerel a week for 14 ounces of salmon would save a family of four about $68.12 a year.

Research also shows that if 14 ounces of mackerel are used in place of 14 ounces of stewing beef once a week the family can save $30.16 a year.

A 1973 study by the fisheries and marine service branch of Environment Canada says mackerel contains significantly more iron, vitamin A, thiamine and riboflavin than canned salmon or tuna, and has a protein content equivalent to salmon.

Mackerel, like other seafoods, is more easily digestible than many other forms of protein.

Little Bits of Philosophy From Old-Time Scribbler

"All noise is waste. So cultivate quietness in your speech, in your thoughts, in your emotions. Speak habitually low. Wait for attention and then your low words will be charged with dynamite.'"

I quote the above from an exercise book which must be half a century old; by a school child - unnamed - and sent to me by a teacher-reader..

The book is the size of a scribbler, full of clippings, poems written in careful scripts, and little bits of philosophy.

There are riddles: "What is always behind time? (the back of a watch)." "What goes up and down at once? (stairs)" Well, you get the idea..

As for mottos - I like this one: "Politeness is to do and say the kindest thing in the kindest way."'

I think it was a very kind thing for that poetry-loving teacher to send me her precious 50-year-old exercise book, don't you??

Dear Doris: My husband has taken to locking all the doors and windows most of the time. At nights he will go around and check all the doors, then go around and do it all again, several times. I have seen him go and lock the front door, then go back and check it as often as 15 times..

I even remind him that he has done it before, but he pays no attention. Is there something wrong with him?

Anxious.

Dear Anxious: I'd say, so. Sounds like the same type of behavior as in the compulsive handwashing syndrome. Which gets into the area of mental ill-health.

A psychiatrist might suspect some deep rage - against who knows what? - at the bottom of such repetitive acts. He cannot express his anger - really express it - so subconsciously transfers it to a compulsive act.,

The solution is to identify the rage, which may spring from away back, or from clashing - unspokenly - with his boss or someone else important to him. A psychiatrist must be the one to do the identifying and treating.

Then when he gets the harmful emotion out and looks at it, and takes more constructive action about it, the symptom (door - locking) will go away. Your family doctor should help you get him to the right practitioner..

Dear Doris: Do you or any of your readers know the author and name of poem from which these lines were taken? They were taught in Ontario literature books in the 1920's:

"The goldenrod is yellow,
The corn is turning brown;
The trees in apple orchards
With fruit are bending down."

My mother-in-law would dearly love to know more about the above.

Mrs. J.C.D.

Dear Mrs. J.C.D.: Perhaps a reader can help. We'd love to delight the heart of your mother-in-law with a complete copy of this old favorite.

Single Fathers Can't Get Help

PENETANGUISHENE, Ont. (CP) — Harold Currie's wife died in 1972. Since then, the father of three has been struggling to keep his family together at home.

But government threats to cut off financial assistance might make the task more difficult. So Harold Currie has become the fourth man in recent weeks to fight Ontario welfare laws which they say discriminate against single fathers.

They are challenging a law which allows assistance to single mothers while denying it to single fathers unless they are blind, disabled or permanently unemployable.

In 1967, before the death of his wife Miriam, Mr. Currie scoured the Penetanguishene area looking for a spot to build a house for his family. He finally found a 5.5-acre plot overlooking Georgian Bay and bought it for $1,000. Afterwards he scrounged the area for materials to build his present one-room, $1,000 home.

Then Mr. Currie's problems began. His window-cleaning business gradually fell apart as he spent more and more time helping his wife through the terrors of cancer and shouldering the parent-housekeeper role.

In late 1970, he asked for welfare and the family since has been existing on the $87 welfare cheques which come twice a month. But each year Simcoe County has threatened to cut them off.

The county did stop payments last year but afterwards said that the cheques would continue until a welfare review board had considered the family's situation.

Welfare administrators have told Mr. Currie he should find work now that his children, aged 7, 9 and 10, all are in school.

But it's a difficult task for a man like Mr. Currie who lives in the country and has only an eighth-grade education.

"If I could find full-time employment that was sufficiently remunerative that I could hire someone to assume the homemaker role, I would," said Mr. Currie, 41.

"If I was misusing the funds or taking advantage of them, then I could understand it.

"But instead of encouraging me they're criticizing me. They say I should be acquainting my children with the work ethic."

He said he cannot comprehend the possibility that the state might break up his family or force him to sell their home.

International Labor Condemns Discrimination

GENEVA (Reuter) — The modern working woman is making progress in the fight against sexual discrimination but she still has a long way to go before she achieves equality with her male colleague, the 125-nation International Labor Organization (ILO) said today.

In a report which will be a central topic at the annual ILO conference here in June, the organization said a woman may only earn half as much as a man in the same job but she sometimes works almost twice as long as her husband each week if her household duties are taken into account.

The report said women suffer from the "blatant discrimination" of unequal pay for work of equal value and for a common male attitude that certain types of labor are "men's work," and that even well-qualified women tend to be prevented from attaining top posts.

Delegates to the ILO conference — 1975 is International Women's Year—will be asked to issue a solemn declaration proclaiming women workers' rights to equality.

Books By And About Women

LOVERS AND OTHERS

By Joan Sutton

Clarke, Irwin and Company Ltd. $5.95

This new, book by Joan Sutton, a Toronto women's editor, lacks most what it is supposed to be about: Loving.

The dustjacket will tell you that its essays are "lyrical and forceful" and that the book is about loving and living and giving; what's inside will tell you it's about the dangers of loving and living for women in an-imagined jungle men have created. The words are lyrical; the feeling is one of mistrust and bitterness.

Lovers and Others is a book of warnings and I-told-you-sos. It's a book that tells women to behave because men are basically bad. If it does not praise, it at least sanctifies the sexual double standard.

The book is littered with women who look younger than their age (good) because they are "innocent" and women who get wrinkles and "look older" (bad) when they begin love affairs. There are warnings about summer bachelors and admonitions that their wives ought to be at home instead of the cottage. And there is "the other woman" who breaks up a marriage and who must "live with it all her days, and the chances of her making him happy, and remaining happy herself are very slim indeed."

Mrs. Sutton is very fond of innocence, very worried about defenseless women and very wary of men who would take advantage.

It's a book for wives who know their husbands are but a step from infidelity and must be guarded at every moment. It's a book for women who believed their mothers.

LABOR TROUBLE

HALIFAX (CP) — Brian Cooper of Peterborough, Ont., president of the Canadian Restaurant Association, said in an interview here that by next year one of every three meals will be eaten in a restaurant. But because of the unavailability of restaurant labor, the business will be hard-pressed to meet the demand.

Canada Just Has Slowdown Declares Leading Economist

OTTAWA (CP) — A leading Canadian economist has challenged the pervading doom-and-gloom theories of world economists and forecasts for Canada at least, an expanding economy in the last half of this year.

Arthur Smith, former chairman of the Economic Council of Canada, and now president of the Conference Board, says he expects the economy to expand at a rate of five per cent a year by the latter part of 1975.

"Of course if that ever comes about [illegible] 1976 could turn out to be a very strong year," he said in a taped interview on CTV's Question Period for broadcast Sunday.

Only the last half of the interview was broadcast because a hockey game cut into some of the time normally alloted to the program.

The Economic Council of Canada is a federally funded research agency. The Conference Board is an independent, non-profit economic forecasting and research group.

Dr. Smith said the Canadian economy is experiencing a slowdown, not a recession.

He acknowledged that "the world is now in a worldwide recession and that a great many countries are now experiencing a setback."

"The United States is in one od the largest recessions since the recession of 1938," he said. And Canadians, he warned, fare a difficult period of adjustment.

High consumer demand for goods and services until now have "put pressure on our supply capacities" to cause the slowdown, he said.

But he indicated he was confident people would learn to use resources more efficiently, to end the cycle and encourage further growth.

China Experiences First Trade Deficit

NEW YORK (AP) — China, normally a cash-on-the-barrel-head trader had its first big international deficit in 1974, United States financial institutions say.

New York's First National City Bank estimated it at about $735 million.

City Bank economists joined others in predicting that China may be counting on vastly-increased oil exports from newly-exploited reserves to close the gap. Some estimates put these reserves as larger than those of Saudi Arabia.

China long has insisted on cash deals. However, Foreign Trade Minister Li Chiang recently wrote that Peking will never "grovel for foreign loans," but said that "methods of payment are negotiated by the two business parties in the light of common international practice."

But this innovation was not seen as reducing China's traditional self-reliance: a major reason, said a survey by City Bank, was the rising curve of oil exports.

Japan extended export credits to China in 1972. In 1973 China sent Japan 7.1 million barrels of oil at $4.59 a barrel and in 1974 another 28.1 million at $14.80 a barrel.

Bishop Says Canada Breaks Food Promises

CHATHAM, Ont. (CP) — Rt. Rev. David Ragg, bishop of Huron, said Sunday Canada is not following up on promises it made at a world food coference in Rome last fall.

Bishop Ragg, here to open a year of centennial observances at Holy Trinity Church, said Canada promised delegates to the world food conference that it would spend $50 million immediately and provide a million tons of grain annually for three years to help feed the world's hungry.

But, he said, Canada has not followed up these promises with the short-term action or long-term commitments needed.

Bishop Ragg said the federal government's failure to bring a quick end to last year's Great Lake's shipping strike, on which the early movement of foreign food aid depended, was an example of Canada's reluctance to take the kind of immediate steps required to help starving countries.

He likened Canada's approach to world food aid to applying a bandage to a festering and deep-seated wound.

Striking closer to home, Bishop Ragg described Ontario land policies as "perfectly rotten."

The continued loss of highly-arable land in Ontario cannot be countenanced, he said. A new community planned for the Simcoe district should be shifted to low-grade agricultural land.

"We cannot afford to lose another acre," he said.

Canoeist Plans Long Journey

NEW ORLEANS, La (AP) — A Minnesota man plans to begin a canoe trip upstream from here for the full length of the Mississippi River on Tuesday, then continue on for a 9,000-mile total trip to Nome, Alaska.

Jerry Pushcar, 25, of Biwabik, Minn. said he plans to launch his 17-foot canoe in the Gulf of Mexico, 100 miles below New Orleans. The canoe is wooden and weighs 78 pounds.

"I expect to be back in Minnesota by late May," Pushcar said. "The entire trip will take about three years."

The route from Minnesota north will be up the St. Croix River, across Lake Superior, up the Voyageurs Trail through Rainy Lake and Lake of the Woods.

"I expect to camp the first winter in the Lake Athabasca region of Canada and in Alaska the second winter. The route will be through Great Bear and Great Slave lakes, the Mackenzie River, across the mountains to the Tulon and then to Nome," Pushcar said.

He said he would make the entire trip alone, but might take his dog. He expects to be resupplied at settlements along the way and said he would carry emergency supplies for about one month.

"The purpose of the trip, upstream, is the trip itself, and to see the country," Pushcar said. "I plan to keep a diary but have no other projects for the journey."

Yukon Road Workers Flown Over Drifts

WHITEHORSE, Y.T. (CP) — Thirty-four persons were flown to a Yukon highway maintenance camp Sunday after being stranded on a road in the extreme northwest corner of British Columbia Saturday night.

Ches Campion, Yukon highways superintendent, said the travellers, bound from Haines, Alaska, to Haines Junction, Y.T., were travelling in a convoy on the Haines Road after leaving Haines Friday. The road parallels the St. Elias Mountains, the highest range in North America.

Mr. Campion said the convoy was led by snowblowers and graders but was stopped by 25-foot drifts about 82 miles out. Included in the convoy were several cars and four transport trucks.

The highways department spokesman said a helicopter from Haines Junction took the stranded travellers to the maintenance camp, about 75 miles north of Haines.

He said road conditions are the worst in memory and it will be some days before the road is reopened.

Winds in the area last week were reported at more than 100 miles an hour.

Tanzania Demands Parley On Rhodesian Constitution

DAR ES SALAAM (Reuter) — Tanzanian Foreign Minister John Malecela said Sunday that Rhodesia's black nationalist groups would resume their guerrilla war if Britain did not call a constitutional conference to work out a settlement

At a dinner for British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan, Malecela said the Rhodesian nationalists had agreed to suspend fighting on the understanding a constitutional conference would be called soon.

"The price for not calling the conference would be the resumption of fighting activities by the liberation movements," he said.

Callaghan said at the dinner that the gap between the two sides in the rebel British colony was still wide but that the problem had been pried open and that chances for a settlement were greater than ever.

Earlier, he told reporters he did not expect to meet black Rhodesian nationalist leaders on his current trip, but might see them soon, possibly in London.

Callaghan flew here to discuss with Tanzanian leaders the timing and place of a constitutional conference on Rhodesia, which unilaterally declared its independence from Britain in 1965 over the issue of black-majority rule.

Liddy Defends Watergate, Says Judge Sirica Like Him

WASHINGTON (AP) — G. Gordon Liddy, sentenced to up to 20 years for his part in the Watergate scandal, says he and U.S. District Judge John Sirica, who imprisoned him, are two men who think alike.

"I really can't be too critical of John Sirica;" Liddy said in an interview. "He believes that the end justifies the means. He puts that into practice. He does what is necessary."

Liddy commented in an interview with Mike Wallace, to be televised Sunday night on CBS's 60 Minutes.

Besides commenting on Sirica, Liddy called former White House counsel John Dean a "stool pigeon," and former Nixon re-election committee head Jeb Stuart Magruder an "accomplished, skilful liar." He said former president Richard Nixon was "insufficiently ruthless" in dealing with Watergate problems towards the end of his presidency.

Liddy, free while one of his sentences is being appealed, has received a sentence of six years and eight months to 20 years for his role in Watergate, 18 months for contempt of court and one to three years for his role in the Ellsberg conspiracy case. He served about 18 months before being released on bail.

He refused during the interview, as he has in court and before congressional committees, to talk about what he knows of Watergate. But he described Watergate as a justified intelligence-gathering operation.

"If one is engaged in a war, one deploys troops, one seeks to know the capability and intentions of the enemy and things of that sort," he said. "If one is engaged in politics one deploys his political troops, one seeks to learn the capabilities and intentions of the other side."

Asked his opinion of Dean, who, along with Magruder, were two of the prosecution's major witnesses in the Watergate cover-up trial, Liddy said: "I think in all fairness to the men you'd have to put him right up there with Judas Iscariot."

He said that when he is returned to prison, he would rather not be sent to the minimum-security facility where Dean is being held, because "I'd rather have an honest bank robber any day in the week, as a cellmate."

Watergate Surprised Nixon Says Prosecutor

NEW YORK (AP) — The chief prosecutor in the Watergate cover-up trial has told Time magazine he doesn't think former president Richard Nixon knew in advance of the Watergate break-in.

Time said prosecutor James Neal stated flatly that Nixon didn't authorize the bugging.

In support of his opinion, Neal said that tapes showed Nixon experienced "some surprise" when told of the break-in.

Neal, who resigned last week after the trial, said Nixon was at least indirectly responsible for the actions of his aides.

Sisters Are Slain

NEW YORK (AP) — Three sisters were shot dead in the Bronx on Sunday by a friend of one of them, police said. A suspect later turned himself in.

Detectives said the man, armed with a hundgun, shot his girl-friend twice in the chest following an argument at a Bronx apartment.

Police said the gunman then encountered the woman's two sisters on the street outside the apartment and shot them.

IMPORTANT CHANGES
CANADA PENSION PLAN
EFFECTIVE JANUARY 1st, 1975

Equal Protection for males and females

Survivors and dependents of female contributors also to be eligible for benefits.

Several changes were recently made to the Canada Pension Plan. These will result in substantially increased monthly benefits for 1975 and subsequent years. There are other important changes, too. One of these is equality for the spouses and dependent children of male and female contributors.

This means that for female contributors, in addition to being eligible for a retirement pension and disability protection for themselves, and a death benefit payable to their estates, as has been the case in the past, their spouses and dependent children are now eligible for benefits as follows:

Benefits for Surviving Spouses
A monthly pension payable to the widower who at the time of the death of the contributor is over 35 years of age, or under 35 years of age but is disabled or has dependent children; that is, a benefit similar to that which has always existed for widows.

Benefits for Orphans
A monthly benefit payable to unmarried dependent children under 18 and to unmarried dependent children between 18 and 25 attending school or university on a full-time basis.

NOTE:
In order for survivors to qualify, the contributor must have died in January 1968 or later and must have contributed for the minimum contributory period, which is three years for deaths occuring before January 1, 1975.

Benefits for Children of Disabled Contributors
A monthly benefit payable to unmarried dependent children under 18 and to unmarried dependent children between 18 and 25 attending school or university on a full-time basis, where the contributor concerned is in receipt of a CPP Disability Pension.

NOTE:
In all cases, it is necessary to make application for benefits. If such applications are approved, payments can only be made currently—that is, from January 1, 1975. No payment can be made for any period prior to that date.

Other Changes:
- You no longer have to retire to obtain your CPP retirement pension at age 65.
- CPP retirement pensioners may work without having their earnings from January 1975 onwards reduce their pensions.
- The earnings ceiling—that is, the maximum amount on which contributions can be paid and on which benefits can be calculated—is being raised to $7400 in 1975 and to $8300 in 1976. The initial amount of earnings, on which you are not required to contribute, will be $700 in 1975.

MAXIMUM MONTHLY CPP BENEFITS
Effective January 1975

Retirement Pension	$122.50
Disability Pension	$139.35
Surviving Spouse's Pension—under 65	$ 88.31
over 65	$ 81.67
Orphan's Benefit	$ 37.27
Disabled Contributor's Child's Benefit	$ 37.27
Death Benefit (Lump Sum)	$740.00

Joe Martin (right), first vice-president of Royal Canadian Legion Branch 100, Brighton, presents Don Bell Sports trophy to Picton Kiwanis coach Ken Ireland (centre) and team captain Andy Greig. Picton squad took top honors in the eight-team tournament sponsored by Branch 100.

Top Brighton Event

Picton Tourney Champs

BRIGHTON — Forced to settle for "second best" when they lost the A championship final to Napanee in 1974, Picton Kiwanis Bantams went all the way in the 1975 edition of the Brighton and District Minor Hockey Association event here, Saturday.

Matched against Campbellford in the A section final, the Ken Ireland-coached Picton squad won it all but needed a 4-1 edge in shots on goal in a five-minute overtime period which failed to produce a goal, after the teams finished the regulation time deadlocked at 3-3.

"These things have to be decided somehow," observed tournament convener Gerry Poupart.

Agreeing that coming out on the short end of a shots on goal tabulation was a tough way to lose a championship, Poupart hastened to add that "without some method of breaking a tie, we could go on all night."

Shots on goal usually enter the picture when teams are tied in tournament play. When that fails to decide a winner, a series of penalty shots generally settles things.

The Picton-Campbellford final was a cliff-hanger all the way.

In front 2-1 after one period, Picton found itself down 3-2 heading for the third frame.

Picton's Daryl Crane forced the overtime when he connected for the third period's only goal. That made it 3-3 and neither team could connect for the deciding tally in the extra five-minute frame.

Other marksmen for Picton were Bob Bowen and Don Hall.

Campbellford goals were scored by Randy Fisher, Tim Blake and Terry Quinn.

Picton picked up the Don Bell Sports Trophy which was presented by Joe Martin, first vice-president of Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 100, sponsor of the event.

The champions advanced to the title match by defeating Cedar Hill 5-1 and shading Napanee 3-2.

Campbellford got by Brighton on a 16-14 spread in shots on goal after the teams played to a 1-1 tie, and then tripped Stirling 4-1.

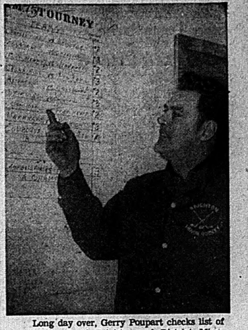
Cedar Hill took B honors and the T. A. Short Construction trophy with a 9-2 defeat of Colborne.

In other years, any profit from the annual tournament has been turned over to minor hockey. The Branch 100 building fund will get the proceeds this year.

Poupart, involved in the event as its convener for four years now, says the tournament is not planned as a money-making project but aims to provide the hockey players with a full day of good, clean hockey and give the youngsters an opportunity to display their abilities and their sense of good sportsmanship.

"The Legion has been very good to us over the years and the pledging of proceeds from our tourney to the building fund is our way of saying 'thank you'," explained Poupart.

Branch 100 plans to build an addition to its present quarters here. It is expected the project will get under way in the near future.



Long day over, Gerry Poupart checks list of results in annual Brighton and District Minor Hockey Association Bantam Tournament. Poupart has convened the event for four years and terms Saturday's tourney, won by Picton Kiwanis, as another top notch effort by everyone involved.

10 Sutton Rangers No Match for Huskies

FRANKFORD (Special) — Sutton South Shore Rangers, their ranks depleted to 10, dropped an Ontario Hockey Association Junior C match to Frankford Huskies here, Friday, 9-3.

Gary Payne and Rob Arbuckle each fired a pair of goals for Huskies.

Finding the mark for one each were Lou Doucette, Paul Bedard, Al MacIntosh, Ken Jacket and Peter Crawford.

The winners took nine of the 15 penalties, including a five-minute fighting sentence. Included in the visitors' total were a fighting major and a misconduct.

Sutton marksmen were Perry Lang, Paul Trivett and Dave Hirst.

Sage Sparks Bearcats

The Bearcats of the Northern Electric Hockey League sparked by a five goal performance from Grant Sage skate to a 14-0 victory over the Falcons in the first of two game played on Sunday.

Rod Salter and Ron McFarlane each had a hattrick for the winners with Larry Lupenette adding a pair and Terry Casselman rounding out the scoring with his single.

Rick Hutchinson recorded the shutout for the Bearcats.

In the second game of the evening Rick Rosebush continued his scoring drive adding three goals to his team's winning effort as the Rebels came up with a 7-3 victory over the Yankees.

Bill Dugeon, Phil Hayward, Dave Branigan and Joe Scahlan all had singles for the Rebels with Gord Sine, Joe Eaton and Bob Baitley replying for the Yankees.

Tight Fit at Loyalist

Trent Nips Lords for Title

By MARK BRETT

Sports Staff

The Loyalist Lancers basketball team must be wondering just exactly what it takes to come out on top in a close scoring game.

The Lancers lost both of their games by two points in their fourth Annual Invitational Tournament held at the colleg on Saturday.

Trent University was the eventual winner of the tourney is a see-saw battle that ended up with Trent taking a 50-49 decision over last year's tournament winner, Durham College.

In the opening game the Lancers met Sir Sanford Fleming College of Lindsay who fought back from a 20-16 first half deficit to gain a tie sending the game into overtime.

The game was still tied at the end of the overtime period but at the sound of the buzzer the ball was in the air and as fate would have it, it found the mark, giving Lindsay the victory. Final score was 48-46.

Bill Kyle of the Lancers was the game's high scorer dropping 20 points into the opposition's basket.

Gary Choel was the big gun for Lindsay counting 17 points in his team's winning effort.

"We were running hot and cold," offered Lancer coach Rob Stinson at the conclusion of the day-long event. "That was our problem against Durham in the second game too, we just were'nt playing consistent ball."

In the second and what proved to be the final game against Durham, the Lancers battled back from a 24-21 first half setback and in the latter stages of the game came on with a flurry of points almost pulling off a tie.

"I thought that we could do it, but time just ran out on us," said Stinson.

Carl Ward and Kyle each connected for 11 points for the losers while Dave Fitchett scored 14 points for the Durham team. Final score was 41-39 for Durham.

Trent got off to a bad start being upset in their first game by Conestoga College by another close score, 47-44.

The eventual champions were then matched against Lindsay who were hot off of wins over Loyalist and Georgian, whom they defeated 61-43 earlier.

Trent came into its own against the undefeated Sir Sanford Fleming holding a commanding 32-14 lead at half time and adding another 15 points in the second half to give them the 47-36 win.

Meanwhile at the other side of the tournament schedule Durham came up with their third win of the day, downing Conestoga by a 50-44 margin, to advance to the final game against Trent.

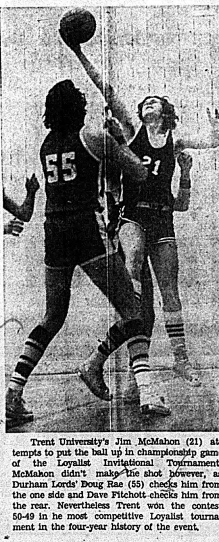
In the championship game the lead changed hands so often, spectators had to concentrate.

At half time, Trent held a slim 26-25 lead.

In the second half, Durham threatened to break the game open as Bob Krawec exploded for 11 points. Durham held a 40-35 lead with six minutes remaining in the game but several foul shots by Trent put them right back into contention before Tony Leighton tied things up for Trent.

The lead changed hands five times in the final 85 seconds before Jamie Chapman of Trent was awarded two foul shots. Chapman made no mistake on either shot, counting the winning point with 18 seconds remaining.

With five seconds remaining it was a battle of the giants as Keith Braum of Trent and Doug Rae of Durham, the tallest players on both teams came up with a jump ball. Both players were called on the line by the referee on the first attempt and on the second try Rae won the draw knocking the ball right to Leighton of Trent. Leighton was then fouled from behind with two seconds left in regulation time, he missed the shot but it didn't matter as time had run out for last year's winners.



Trent University's Jim McMahon (21) attempts to put the ball up in championship game of the Loyalist Invitational Tournament. McMahon didn't make the shot however, as Durham Lords' Doug Rae (55) checks him from the one side and Dave Fitchott checks him from the rear. Nevertheless Trent won the contest 50-49 in he most competitive Loyalist tournament in the four-year history of the event.

Picton Trips Napanee

Only one game was on tap in the Quinte District Church Hockey League on the weekend with Picton coming up with a 7-4 win over Odessa in Napanee.

In the other game scheduled between Kingston and Frankford the Kingston team was awarded the game by default. Belleville was idle in the five-team league.

Ron Smith led the way for Picton, scoring four goals in his team's winning performance. Paul Hill had a pair of goals, with Terry Hicks counting a single.

Odessa scoring was divided equally between Glen Macklin, Carl Hart, Stan Lapoint and Ray Calver all counting one each.

Standings to date in the league see Belleville and Kingston tied for first place with 11 points, Frankford is close behind with 10 followed by Picton with seven points and Odessa in last spot with one point.

Shells Tune Up For Tournament

Belleville's Shell Juveniles got on the right track for the upcoming Belleville Juvenile Tournament with an 8-0 win over a shorthanded Stirling team Saturday night. The exhibition victory was led by John Murphy's hat trick and the stingy goaltending of Jeff Gorman.

Gary Thompson added two goals to the local attack with singles going to Ken Just, Martin Thistle and Mike Crawford.

Thursday at 8.30 p.m. the Shells are in Stirling for a return bout. That game too is a tune-up for Sunday's eight-team tourney in Belleville.

The Lions Major Midgets were on the winning end of their first 1975 score as they defeated Whitby Juveniles 7-5. A mix up on the exhibition contacts resulted in Whitby sending down its juvenile squad rather than the midgets. Nevertheless, the locals put in seven goals while Whitby only managed to put five past Belleville's Alan Porte.

The Lions got a goal each from Marty Lowry, Pat McGinn, Tony Meagher, Calvin Pope, Clint Riendeau, Sandy Waterson and Tony Bennett.

Belleville Dixie Lee Minor Peewees also won their Ontario Minor Hockey Association ehibition contest on the weekend defeating Frankford 2-0. Craig Saxby and Steve Molaski were the local marksmen. Jeff O'Neil recorded the shutout and Rich Manderville, Stu Emerson, Bryson Lamble and Steve Thompson picked up assists.

The Rollins Major Peewees weren't quite as fortunate as they went down three straight games at the London Invitational Peewee Tournament.

Friday they lost 5-2 to Oshawa. Jamie Robertson and Robbie Soule picked up the goals. Saturday they dropped an 8-1 decision to Peterborough. Danny Rose got the only goal of that game. Later the same day they lost 4-2 to London, Charlie Doran and Danny Rose did the scoring in that one.

Edwards Upsets Riley

KINGSTON (Special) — Belleville's Bill Riley rink was upset in the first round here Sunday of the Ontario Curling Association senior's playoff.

Jake Edward's hometown crew defeated the Riley rink 6-4, 8-10 6-4 in the best-of-three match.

"They should go all the way," said Riley, who last year skipped his Quinte Curling club rink to the Ontario Senior Championship. His rink this year consisted of Vaughan Storey, lead, Chris Glikhero, second, and Bill Spinelli, lead.

It is the same rink that won the championship in 1974.

WILL MISS GAME

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota North Stars forward Henry Boucha will miss at least one National Hockey League game as a result of a laceration just above his right eye but there is no direct injury to his eye.

Frank Morrell (right) skipped his rink to the championship of the Royal Bank Mixed Bonspiel on Friday and Saturday at the Quinte Curling Club. The rink went undefeated and held the highest point total of the two day affair to earn top honors in the first event. Other members of the local rink are (left-to-right) Paul Henderson, second, Donna Hebert, lead, and Jean Sisler, vice.

Royal Bank Trophy Won by Morrell

Frank Morrell's rink scored the most points in the annual Royal Bank of Canada Mixed Bonspiel at Quinte Curling Club, Saturday.

Curling with Morrell's Quinte Club foursome were Paul Henderson ,Betty Parsons and Mae Cathcart.

In its final outing a win over last year's winning Vern Goodwin rink, the Morrell entry used spares Donna Hebert and Jean Sisler who subbed for Parsons and Cathcart who were unable to make the important game.

Twenty-four rinks participated in the three-game event.

Other three-game winners in the two-day competition were Bill Henderson's Quinte rink with Marlene Henderson, Bob Burkitt and Ev Burkitt, and Shorty Jenkins' CFB Trenton entry which included Kitty Vaters, Tony Pasula and Pat Hope.

Royal Bank manager Max Dayman presented the trophy to the Morrell rink.

33rd Loss for Caps

By GLENN COLE
The Canadian Press

Washington Capitals are heading for what could be the worst season ever by a National Hockey League club.

The Capitals have three wins, 33 losses and four ties. They have scored 80 goals while allowing 216.

BARRY GIBBS

Washington was blanked 3-0 by the Flames at Atlanta Sunday—its 20th road loss in as many tries.

New York Rangers topped Vancouver Canucks 6-2, Montreal Canadiens defeated Chicago Black Hawks 6-4, Buffalo Sabres downed St. Louis Blues 4-2, Toronto Maple Leafs edged Detroit Red Wings 1-0, and California Seals surprised Philadelphia Flyers 5-1.

The Capitals were blasted 10-0 at Montreal Saturday night, Toronto downed the Black Hawks 6-3, Atlanta defeated St. Louis 4-1, the Rangers topped New York Islanders 5-3, Philadelphia and Los Angeles Kings tied 2-2, Pittsburgh Penguins edged Vancouver 4-3, Kansas City Scouts upset Detroit 2-1, and Boston Bruins bombed Minnesota North Stars 8-0.

"We're trying our best," says Caps coach Jimmy Anderson. "But it's the same thing with Kansas City. It's going to take time.

"Sure we're struggling. But the league could have helped us more in the expansion draft. I know one thing—I don't have one quitter on this club."

In their weekend games against Montreal and Atlanta, the Capitals were outshot 92-37. Montreal had a 47-17 edge and Atlanta 45-20.

Eric Vail, back in the Atlanta lineup after recovering from an arm injury, scored twice for the Flames Sunday and goaltender Phil Myre registered the shutout.

At New York, the Rangers won their sixth in a row by defeating the Canucks for the first time this season.

The Canucks, who started a seven-game road trip in Pittsburgh Saturday, are missing five regulars.

Chris Oddleifson is out with a broken jaw, Mike Robitaille has a hip injury, Paulin Bordeleau a sore ankle, Dennis Ververgaert a shoulder problem and Andre Boudrias is ailing.

The Rangers had Walt Tkaczuk back in the lineup for their games against the Islanders and Vancouver. Tkaczuk, who broke his right leg Nov. 24, had a goal and an assist against the Canucks.

The Canadiens stretched their unbeaten streak to 17 games with their win against the Black Hawks in Chicago. Guy Lafleur, who had three goals and three assists against the Caps Saturday, scored the game-winning goal late in the second period.

J. P. PARISE

Two goals by Rene Robert paced Buffalo over St. Louis while Doug Favell's shutout goaltending and Lanny McDonald's second-period goal gave the Leafs their win over Detroit.

Larry Paley scored two goals and Dave Gardner had a goal and two assists as the Seals downed the Flyers before 11,157 fans, the largest crowd of the year in Oakland.

Meanwhile, Minnesota sent defenceman Barry Gibbs to Atlanta for rookie forwards Dean Talaous and Dwight Bialowas and traded veteran forward Jean-Paul Parise to the Islanders for forwards Ernie Hicke and Doug Rombough.

Tonight, the Scouts are at home to Minnesota.

Canada Shaded 4-3

Championship to Soviets

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Soviet Union retained its world junior hockey title Sunday by converting Canadian errors into a 4-3 victory before 10,551 spectators in Winnipeg.

A tie would have given the Canadians the championship on a better goals-for-and-against record.

Meanwhile, Sweden got a power-play goal midway through the final period to tie Czechoslovakia 2-2 at Brandon, Man., and, in the final game of the round-robin tournament, Finland downed the United States 4-2 in Minneapolis.

The Soviet Union ended the series unbeaten in five games followed by Canada 4-1-0, Sweden 2-2-1, Czechoslovakia 1-2-2, Finland 1-3-1, and the U.S. 0-5-0.

Coach Jackie McLeod said his Canadians "came up a little short."

"We've got a lot of big shooters on this club," he said, "but they didn't get the shots away enough. The Soviet defence played well."

Bryan Trottier of Lethbridge, Alta., Broncos, one of the 24 Western Canada Hockey League players who made up the Canadian team, also praised the Soviet defence.

"They're very tough in the slot," he said. "Every defence we played here was tough, but not in the same class as the Russians."

Errors by Canadian defencemen produced all the Soviet goals. The first came on a first-period power-play when, the puck was checked into the net by Canadian defenceman Kevin McCarthy.

The second one came after both Canadian defencemen missed a loose puck at the edge of the goal, and the third and fourth goals were set up when the defence gave up the puck inside the blueline and then allowed Soviet forwards to skate in unmolested on goaltender Doug Soetart.

Soviet coach Yurj Morozov said the Canadian defence "made many mistakes. The first and second goals were primarily on defensive failures by Canada."

The Soviets held period leads of 2-1 and 4-1 but a Canadian rally in the third cut the margin to 4-3.

Danny Arndt, who scored Canada's third goal at 16:07 with a quick shot when Brian Klassen won the faceoff, had a chance to tie the game moments later on a similar setup.

"He tried for the opposite corner that time and the Soviet goalie made a tremendous save," said McLeod.

In the final minute Brian Sutter had half an open net, but his shot from the edge of the crease hit the outside edge of the goal.

Boris Alexandrov scored twice for the Soviets and Victor Khatulev, the most valuable player in the tournament, and Boris Chuchin added one each. Trottier, Arndt and Rick LaPointe scored for Canada.

In Brandon, defenceman Bjoern Johansson scored at 8:58 of the final period to give Sweden the tie and preserve its hold on third place. Kent Nilsson got the other Swedish goal. Jiri Exl and Peter Stanstny scored for Czechoslovakia.

In Minneapolis, third-period goals by Pertti Jarvenpaa, Tapio Levo and Matti Hagman gave Finland its first win. Kari Makkonen got their other goal.

Ron Madson and Mitch Corbin scored for the U.S. The final game was marred by 25 penalties, including four match penalties. It ended with two separate fights in the final second of play.

Crusaders Stick to Live Action And Catch Toros Watching Replay

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Instant replay is the nemesis of sports officials and a friend of the fans, and Sunday, it almost turned into the downfall of Toronto Toros.

Tom Simpson scored his 28th goal of the World Hockey Association season, giving Toronto a 4-2 lead over Cleveland Crusaders at 17:53 of the third period.

Seconds later, the goal was replayed on the giant television screen in Cleveland's new Coliseum.

"I thought that goal put the game away for us," said Toros coach Billy Harris. "But everybody on the bench started yelling to Simpson to watch it on the instant replay screen."

While it was being replayed, Cleveland scored.

"He looked up to watch it and seconds later it was 4-3," said Harris. "You learn something in every game and I guess that's what we learned today."

The Toros held on to the 4-3 margin despite Gary Jarrett's second goal of the game at 18:04 of the third period.

The win pushed the Toros back into first place in the Canadian Division, one point ahead of Quebec Nordiques who held the lead briefly after beating Toronto 3-1 Saturday.

In other WHA games Sunday, Phoenix Roadrunners defeated Indianapolis Racers 2-1, Minnesota Fighting Saints whipped New England Whalers 9-3, Michigan Stags beat Vancouver Blazers 3-1 and Chicago Cougars edged Edmonton Oilers 3-2.

BILLY HARRIS

In other Saturday games, the Whalers played their last match at Springfield, Mass., before moving to new quarters at Hartford, Conn., and beat Vancouver 4-3 in overtime. San Diego Mariners beat Cleveland 2-0, Indianapolis tied 4-4 with Chicago and Houston Aeros beat Michigan 5-2.

The Toros jumped to a 3-1 lead on first-period goals by Gavin Kirk, Vaclav Nedomansky and Frank Mahovlich and stayed in front with the help of sharp goaltending by Jim Shaw who made 41 saves.

"Shaw is the guy who helped us win that game," said Harris. "They could have scored 10 goals but we were very fortunate that Shaw was hot out there."

Minnesota treated 7,022 home fans with seven goals in the second period on the way to victory over the Eastern Division leaders.

The Fighting Saints, who picked up their eighth win in the last 10 games, were led by three goals from Fran Huck and two from Mike Walton.

At Detroit, the Stags saved all their offence for the final five minutes when J. P. LeBlanc scored twice and Gary Bredin once. LeBlanc scored his second goal into an empty Vancouver net.

Claude St. Sauveur scored the Vancouver goal in the second period.

Goalie Dave Dryden stopped 41 shots, including 20 in the first period, to help the Cougars win at Edmonton.

FRAN HUCK

Chicago took a 2-0 lead on second-period goals by Mark Lomenda and Ralph Backstrom. The Oilers outshot the Cougars 14-5 in the third period but only Bobby Sheehan and Barry Long beat Dryden while Jan Popiel scored to keep Chicago ahead.

Howie Young's third goal of the season in the third period broke a 1-1 tie to give Phoenix the win at Indianapolis. Young also set up Murray Keogan's first-period goal.

In off-ice activity, Winnipeg Jets announced they have traded goalie Ernie Wakely to San Diego Mariners for a player to be announced later.

It's Bill Friday To the Rescue

HAMILTON (CP) — Bill Friday, who handed in his resignation as referee-in-chief of the World Hockey Association two weeks ago, stepped into the breach Saturday when the WHA found its officiating staff depleted.

The veteran referee volunteered to handle the Toronto Toros-Quebec Nordiques game at Quebec City in the absence of Brent Casselman.

Friday resigned his estimated $50,000-a-year position — the highest paid official in pro hockey—two weeks ago because of the pressures involved. The resignation was to take effect Jan. 1

Now, however, he may reconsider his stand and at least finish out the season.

"The situation has improved to the point where they (the WHA) realize that the body is not made of steel, particularly at my age," said Friday, who is 41.

His original plan when he quit was to take a holiday in Florida to determine where his future priorities were. As it turned out, he was forced to take an extended rest period with a pinched nerve in his back.

Friday said he will meet Monday in Toronto with Bud Poile, the WHA's vice-president of hockey operations, to discuss his future in the league.

"We'll likley work something out so that I'll finish out the year," said Friday, adding that one point he'll want cleared in the discussions will be a reduction in the workload that calls for him to work 70 games and travel 120,000 miles a year.

Holland Pots Three

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rookie Jerry Holland of Providence scored three goals—his third three-goal game of the American Hockey League season—to power the Reds to a 5-3 win Sunday over Virginia Red Wings.

The 20-year-old left winger now has 26 goals in 36 games and is approaching the record for most goals scored by a rookie—42—set by Wally Hergesheimer of Hershey in 1950-51.

In other games Sunday night, Nova Scotia Voyageurs shut out Springfield Kings 7-0, Richmond Robins needed overtime to edge New Haven Nighthawks 4-3, and Rochester Americans stopped Baltimore Clippers 5-3.

Tragedy Strikes Astro Pitcher

HOUSTON (AP) — Autopsy reports were expected today on the bodies of Houston Astros' pitcher Don Wilson and his five-year-old son, Alexander, both found in their carbon monoxide filled home Sunday.

Wilson, 29, preparing to start his 10th season with the National League baseball club, was found in his car in the attached garage of his fashionable home.

Alexander was found in a bedroom above the garage. Mrs. Wilson was listed in fair condition with injuries that included a broken jaw.

The Wilson's nine-year-old daughter, Denise, was in critical condition and remained in a coma late Sunday night.

Mrs. Wilson phoned the fire department Sunday.

Jack MacGillis of the fire department ambulance service said a woman called saying she could not wake up her children and her husband was in the car.

Juvenile officer T.R. Trinkle said he talked to Mrs. Wilson at the hospital but she was under sedation.

He quoted her as saying she awoke after hearing a car motor running and went to check on the children.

She said the children "sounded like they were crying in their sleep."

Trinkle quoted her as saying she picked up the boy and took him to the master bedroom and shut the doors to both the daughter's bedroom and the master bedroom. She said she could not go back to sleep because the car motor was still running so she went to check and found her husband.

She said she called a registered nurse friend who told her to check for a pulse.

She said she did not know how she suffered the broken jaw.

Authorities said the garage and house were filled with automobile exhaust fumes. However, G. Sheldon Green, assistant Harris County medical examiner, declined to speculate on the cause of death.

"It was a terrible shock," said Astros' general manager Spec Richardson. "The whole organization is very sorry over this tragedy."

Wilson tailed off to an 11-13 record and a 3.07 earned-run average last year, but he pitched two no-hitters in his career and narrowly missed a third last September when manager Preston Gomez pulled him after eight hitless innings.

Bobby Risinger, in charge of Astros' publicity, said he had talked with Wilson several times during the off-season and he was looking forward to the 1975 season and hoping to win 20 games.

Joudwa Clicks For Champions

OTTAWA (P) — Murray Mark scored two goals to lead McMaster Marlins to a 6-1 championship victory over Queen's Golden Gaels Saturday at an intercollegiate hockey tournament here.

In addition, Mark was named to the all-star team and voted most valuable player with six goals in two games.

Gary Smith, Skip Foster, Carl Harango and Kevin Joudwa also scored Saturday for McMaster while Bill Van Camp and Frank Coffey scored twice each for the Gaels.

In the consolation game, Ottawa defeated Loyola of Montreal 6-5 with Bill Fox getting three goals, Ed Cloutier two and Paul Guillerier one.

Mike Culleton scored two Loyola goals with Dave Wilson, Steve Benoit and Bart Shawchuk getting one each.

Fox and Van Camp joined Mark as all-star forwards while Paul Ciemmy of McMaster and Ron Swan of Queen's were the all-star defencemen and Clyde Harris of Queen's the top goalie.

In opening-round action Friday, Queen's defeated Loyola 4-3 and McMaster battered Ottawa 9-3.

Senior A All-stars Nipped by Soviets

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — The Soviet Central Red Army team edged the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A All-Stars 5-4 Saturday in an exhibition game.

But the atmosphere in the All-Star dressing room after the game was as good as that of a winning team.

"We should have won it," said playing coach Darryl Sly. "Everybody tried tonight but a lot of our guys haven't been on skates since last Monday."

Corby Adams, captain of Barrie Flyers, opened the scoring at the 36 - second mark of the first period.

The Soviets tied the game a 2:10 on Vladimir Popov's power-play goal while Al Osborne was off for charging.

Paul Regan put the All-Stars ahead again at 2:57, banging a loose puck into the Soviet net, but Boris Mikhailov evened the count at 2-2.

Kharlamov put the Soviet Union ahead for the first time at 8:26 while Osborne was serving a second penalty, but the All-Stars managed a 3-3 tie on Bob Baird's marker just before the period ended.

John MacMillan and Sergei Glazov traded second-period goals before Mikhail Kovalev netted the winner at 15:06 of the final period.

The All-Stars outshot the Soviets 44-40.

Lost Weekend For Raiders

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Giant-killing turned out to be a sport for someone else during the weekend as Nepean Raiders tried it twice in the Central Junior Hockey League and lost both times.

Saturday they took on second-placed Smiths Falls Bears and lost 4-2. Then Sunday they tried the leading Pembroke Lumber Kings and lost 6-2.

In the meantime, Gloucester Rangers levelled Brockville Warriors 7-3 Saturday before dropping a 4-3 decision to the third-place Rockland Nationals Sunday.

The results left Nepean in a shaky fourth place with Gloucester coming fast in fifth and Brockville dangling in last place in the standings.

Remparts Ruin Montreal's Bid

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Montreal Juniors blew a chance Sunday to move into a third-place tie with Hull Festivals in the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League's West Division.

The Festivals lost 7-5 to Cornwall Royals while the Juniors were defeated 5-4 by Quebec Remparts, leaders in the East Division.

In other games, Trois-Rivieres Draveurs edged Laval Nationals 4-3, Chicoutimi Sagueneens topped Shawinigan Dynamos 7-3, and Sherbrooke Beavers clipped Sorel Black Hawks 6-2.

SKIER DIES

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. (AP) — Jeff Wright, 2[illegible], a top prospect for the United States ski team in the 1976 Olympics, was fatally injured Sunday in the U.S. national ski jump meet. The Minneapolis, Minn., athlete was treated at hospital where he died of head injuries.

DON WILSON

Bucks Nip Bulls

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar collected 33 points and 15 rebounds to lead Milwaukee Bucks to a 96-95 victory Sunday over Chicago Bulls, their arch-rivals in the National Basketball Association Midwest Division.

Abdul-Jabbar scored 16 of his points in the final period as the Bucks, leading by 11 points with 3:17 to go, held off a Bulls' charge.

The Bucks are now 4-1 against Chicago, with an average winning margin of just two points, and are only 3½ games back of first-place Detroit.

Cleveland Cavaliers beat Phoenix Suns 97-86 Sunday, Houston Rockets defeated Kansas City-Omaha Kings 115-106, Portland Trail Blazers stopped New Orleans Jazz 111-102, and Los Angeles Lakers edged Washington Bullets 112-109.

In the American Basketball Association Sunday, New York stopped Virginia 100-995, St. Louis edged Kentucky 109-106, Indiana downed Memphis 108-99, Denver defeated Utah 110-93, and San Antonio beat San Diego 134-116.

Olympics Down Windsor

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The Czechoslovak Olympics completed their seven-game Canadian tour Sunday night by defeating Windsor Spitfires 7-4.

The Czechs came from behind against the Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League team which led for most of the game before the Czechs scored four consecutive goals.

Windsor led 4-3 late in the second period and the Czechs went ahead 5-4 before the period ended.

Marlies Stretch Streak to 13

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

League-leading Toronto Marlboros extended their unbeaten streak to 13 games Sunday, downing Ottawa '67s 7-5 in Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A play.

Mark Napier and John Tinelli paced Toronto with two goals each while John Anderson, Ed Saffrey and John Smrke added singles.

Ottawa goals went to Bruce Baker, Peter Lee, Dale Ross, Tim Young and Ken Campbell.

In other contests Sunday, Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds dumped Kitchener Rangers 6-1, Hamilton defeated St. Catharines Black Hawks 4-2, Oshawa Generals downed Kingston Canadians 5-2 and Sudbury Wolves beat London Knights 5-2.

On Saturday, Peterborough outscored Sault Ste. Marie 5-3 and Toronto and Sudbury played to a 2-2 tie.

Greyhounds 6 Rangers 1

Defenceman Mike Hordy's three third-period goals from the blueline cushioned the Sault win, its second in three nights.

The Greyhounds, who led 2-0 after the first period and 3-1 going into the final period, got single goals from Pete Lochead, Bruce O'Grady, and Doug Patey.

Marl Holbrook's goal spoiled Sault goaltender Dave Legree's bid for a shutout.

Fincups 4 Hawks 2

Rick Seiling scored twice, with Glenn Richardson and Joe Contini adding singles as Hamilton moved into a third-place tie with Ottawa.

Seiling scored on the first shot of the game and Greg Craig tied the score 1-1 with his 34th of the season, less than three minutes later. Captain Rick Adduono got the other Hawk goal in the last minute of the game.

Hamilton took period leads of 2-1 and 3-1 and collected 24 of the 40 penalty minutes. Playing at home before 1,349 spectators, St. Catharines outshot Hamilton 41-31.

Generals 5 Canadians 2

Oshawa led 4-1 after the first period and 5-2 going into a scoreless final 20 minutes before 1,748 home spectators.

Oshawa goals went to Paul Heaver, Glenn Kirkham, Ton Newton, Paul Gardner and Bill Leamen. Larry Murphy and Alec Forsyth replied for Kingston, which outshot the Generals 46-42.

Both teams have been riddled with injuries. Kingston played without seven regulars while Oshawa added a sixth name to their injury list when Mike Boyd hurt an elbow in the second period.

Wolves 5 Knights 2

Two-goal performances by Rod Schutt and Richie Hansen gave Sudbury a three-game unbeaten streak on the road.

Schutt's goals came 50 seconds apart in the second period and tied the game 2-2. Hansen's pair came within eight seconds and broke a 2-2 tie in the third period.

Bobby Russell got the other Sudbury goal before 1,467 spectators. Ron Zanussi and Jim Hamilton scored for the 10th-place Knights, who lost their fourth straight game and were outshot 41-31.

Marlboros 2 Wolves 2

A power-play goal by Craig Crawford in the second period lifted Toronto to the tie before 1,378 spectators in Brantford.

Napier also scored for Toronto while Hec Marini and Paul Crowley replied for Sudbury, outshot 35-30.

Petes 5 Greyhounds 3

Tony Cassolato and Red Laurence scored two goals each for the Petes with captain Doug Jarvis getting the other.

Romano Carlucci, Randy Borbely and Lochead replied for Sault Ste. Marie, outshot 38-27, before 1,378 spectators in Peterborough.

Mahon Puts Wimbledon Into 4th Round Play

LONDON (Reuter) — Non-league Wimbledon knocked Burnley out of the English Football Association Cup, only to be drawn into an even tougher battle in the fourth round.

A Mick Mahon goal gave Wimbledon a 1-0 third-round win over First Division Burnley Saturday. Then Wimbledon was drawn to meet Leeds United, the Cup favourite and league champion, in the next round.

The Southern League club visits Leeds Jan. 25, and the home team has plenty to worry about. Four years ago Leeds lost 3-2 in the fifth round against an unrated Colchester team which had Mahon in its line-up.

Leatherhead, the other non-league winner, eliminated Third Division Brighton 1-0 and earned a home game with First Division Leicester City.

Non-league Altrncham led for 32 minutes against First Division Everton before being tied 1-1. The teams clash again Tuesday for the right to meet Plymouth Argyle in the fourth round.

Altrincham went ahead in the 36th minute on a goal by John Hughes. Dave Clements got the tying goal on a penalty spot.

Wycombe Wanderers were held to a 0-0 draw on their home ground by Middlesbrough. The replay will be Tuesday with the winner meeting Sunderland.

The cup holder, Liverpool, defeated Stoke City 2-0 on goals by Steve Heighway and Kevin Keegan and advanced against current league-leader Ipswich in the fourth round.

Ipswich won 2-1 at Wolverhampton. Colin Viljoen and David Johnson scored after John Richards put Wolves ahead in the 15th minute.

In the Scottish League First Division, Rangers regained a share of the lead with Celtic by beating that team 3-0.

Rangers, on home ground, took the lead on a goal by Derek Johnstone after six minutes and followed up with scores from Tommy McLean in the 48th minute and Derek Parlane in the 74th minute.

CYLDE GRAY

No. 1 Means Little

TORONTO (CP) — What's the virtue of being No. 1 in the boxing game when everyone in your division—including the champion—treats you like a plague.

That's the dilemma Clyde Gray finds himself in as he works at his nearby Clairmont farm, considering his future and the improbables he faces in making a success of his career.

Clyde is 27 and has nowhere to go but down, and the Nova Scotia-born boxer figures even this might help his career since others boxers might then be willing to fight him.

Te Canadian and Commonwealth welterweight champion already has tested champion Jose Napoles, here last year when the champ had to draw on all his resources to nail down a decision victory.

Now all those aspiring to the welterweight crown are steering clear ofthe hard-punching Canadian, either by choice or by circumstance.

Gray's manager Irv Ungerman, has wasted a small fortune in phone calls trying to line up fights for his protege, going so far as to fly to Mexico City with a $150,000 contract to have Napoles defend against Gray.

But the champ and his advisers want nothing to do with Gray. Apparently they've had enough dealings with him and opted for another $150,000 offer to fight lower-ranked Angel Espada in Puerto Rico.

"It makes you wonder what No. 1 means," said Ungerman. "They just don't want to fight Clyde.

"We've been told we have to defend the Canadian title by Feb. 28. What a laugh. I've made offers to all the logical contenders in this country. Nobody wants him."

Clyde's last fight was headlining a minor card at the CNE Coliseum here last August, which he easily won. A September match was washed out when the Ali-Foreman heavyweight battle in Zaire absorbed promoters' interests.

Kawartha Cup

Minnesota's Rugland Tops

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Larry Rugland, 28, of Roseau, Minn., raced to victory Sunday in the men's modified unlimited class to win the over-all championship in the Kawartha Cup international snowmobile races.

Rugland, driving for the Polaris team, trailed in the modified class standings by almost 90 points going into the second day of the two-day competition. However, he raced a strong second in the open modified 340-cc class and was fifth in the open modified 440-cc race.

Altogether, his two-day performance earned him 452.38 points.

Rugland's Polaris team-mate, Don Omdahl, also of Roseau, moved up from fifth place to the runner-up position over-all with 358.80 points. He won the open modified 340-cc class Sunday and finished fourth in two other races.

First-day leader Wayne Thomas, 23, of Cardiff, Ont., dropped to third over-all with a total of 357.68 points. His Polaris failed to start in the modified stock 340-cc race and he finished a disappointing sixth in the open modified 250-cc class.

Susan Hanna, 16, of Woodbridge, Ont., drove her Mercury machine to the women's championship with a total of 328.67 points.

Debbie Selig of Toronto, also on a Mercury, was a close second at 303.81 points. They were separated by only 2½ points at the end of the first day Saturday.

The men's stock division was won by Craig Hofland of Lefroy, Ont., who trailed by 100 points going into the second day of competition but finished with 283.14 points on a Mercury. First-day leader Cliff Harrison of Kingston finished at 195.77 points on a Mercury.

Hornets Slip Past Napanee Comets 7-6

NAPANEE, Ont. (CP) — Cambridge Hornets scored four goals in the third period Sunday to edge Napanee Comets 7-6 in Ontario Hockey Association Senior A play before 418 spectators.

It was the only game scheduled this weekend.

Bob Channell, Steve Ringler, Steve Robson and John Rutherford scored in the final 20 minutes to overcome a 5-3 Napanee second-period lead.

Cliff Stewart, Gary Brewer and Billy Hway scored the other goals for Cambridge, outshot 49-41.

Napanee goals went to Lorne O'Donnell, Dick Cherry, Charlie Convery, Jim Sunstrum, Wayne McConnell and Les Colligan.

Cambridge's Bob Dupuis made 43 saves while Darcy Walters of the Comets stopped 34 shots.

Napanee was assessed two of the game's three minor penalties.

Badger Sets Record Pace

MONTREAL (CP) — Steven Badger of Winnipeg, who set a Canadian record Saturday, won the men's 1,500-metre freestyle Sunday night, the final race of the fourth annual Pointe Claire International Invitational swimming meet.

Badger covered the distance in 16 minutes, 30.37 seconds.

On Saturday, he stroked the 400-metre freestyle in 4:04.28 to smash the 1968 men's record of 4:06.05, held by Ralph Hutton of Vancouver.

In the women's 800-metre freestyle, Leslie Cliff of Vancouver Sunday took the event in nine minutes and 10 seconds.

Greg Jagenburg of Philadelphia won the men's 200-metre butterfly and the 100-metre freestyle. His time in the butterfly was 2:08.34 while his mark in the freestyle was 54.69 seconds.

Kathy Heddy of New Jersey won the ladies 100-metre freestyle in 59.33 while Wendy Quirk of Montreal captured the ladies 200-metre butterfly in 2:22.52.

Sylvie Deschamps of Quebec City captured the women's 200-metre breaststroke with a time of 2:47.20 while Francois Morneau of Quebec took the men's event in 2:35.81.

Robin Corsiglia of Pointe Claire set a Canadian record Saturday in the 100-metre breaststroke for 11-to-12-year-old girls with a time of 1:21.21.

Hunter Welcomed

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim (Catfish) Hunter has been welcomed with open arms by his new New York Yankee teammates, many of whom believe the North Carolina country boy could be the key to a championship flag. Hunter signed a reported $3.75-million contract for five years. "Any time you get the No. 1 pitcher in baseball on your team, it's got to help your pennant chances," said catcher Thurman Munson. Manager Bill Virdon said he thinks the players accept the fact that Hunter gives them a better chance to win the division.

IN MEMORIAM

COWEY — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather George Cowey who passed away two years ago Jan. 6th, 1973.
Two sad and lonely years have passed,
Since our great sorrow fell,
The grief that we received that night,
No one will ever know,
You hadn't time to bid farewell,
Or even say goodbye,
You were gone before we knew it,
And only God knows why.
—Always remembered and sadly missed by wife Freda, children Glenda and George, son-in-law Ron and grandchild David.

GREENFIELD — In memory of a dear father and grandfather James Clayton Greenfield who passed away Jan. 6, 1974 at Bancroft.
One year has passed since that sad day,
When one we loved was called away,
God took him home — it was His will,
Within our hearts he liveth still.
—Ever remembered by son Lloyd, daughter-in-law Ruby and family, Sharon and Debbie and Robert of Belleville, son Lee, and daughter-in-law Dorthy of Bancroft and son Ronald and daughter-in-law Glenys and family, Terry, Christie and Vicky of Oshawa.

HOW TO KILL TIME

Before it kills you! Relax on 100 investment acres of pasture and recreational property. Year round pond, well fenced, excellent site for a home and skidooing haven. Some bush. Just twenty minutes from Belleville.

REDNERSVILLE ROAD

Older brick 1½ storey home on orchard lot, 100 x 300 ft. Ten rooms including old fashioned parlour and country kitchen. Dining room is approximately 20 x 15. Renovations required to convert to contemporary day living, a chore a handyman will enjoy. Make an appointment to inspect — NOW!

TAKE A FRESH LOOK

At the map of your ambitions, then we'll drive over to view this 40 acre lot. In Prince Edward County with a year round pond, 5 acres of bush and over a half mile of road frontage. Many possibilities.

BRANCH OUT BEFORE SPRING!

And establish your "family tree" on a bus route 3 miles from Belleville. Three lots to choose from, good water supply and priced right. Start building now before inflated prices rise higher. Call today.

Here is how YOU Can ADVERTISE FOR A PROFIT...

1 Check off the items you no longer need and would like to sell and add others not listed.

2 Fill in price you expect to receive for each item — total these amounts at the bottom of the column.

3 Write up advertisement describing these items and their selling features, include phone number or address. Count the number of words used (phone number counts one word).

4 To reach most number of prospects 6 or more insertions are recommended when selecting the amount you wish to spend from the chart below.

5 Deduct the price of your advertising from the expected return of selling your don't needs.

Down and Out

As 1974 became history, indexes on the Toronto Stock Exchange all close down from the start of the year. The big loser was western oils, which started the year at 248.01 and closed at 112.44, a drop of 135.57. Golds hit a peak of 617.61 in April, but the closing mark of 351.84 was down 59.40 from the year's starting point of 411.24. Industrials dropped 57.03 to end the year at 156.75, and base metals closed at 57.55, a decline of 36.25.

Brando's Land Gift Has Lien Against It

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 40-acre parcel of land donated to American Indians by actor Marlon Brando has a $318,000 lien against it, Brando's lawyer said Friday.

The lawyer, awrence Kartigainer, confirmed a report by KABC-TV that the $318,000 will have to be paid by Dec. 30, 1975. The land is in Agoura, about 40 miles north of Los Angeles.

"It's certainly anticipated and was anticipated at the time of the gift that arrangements would be made for the payment of the trust deed," Kartigainer said. "It's safe to assume that the Indians will not be called upon to make the payment."

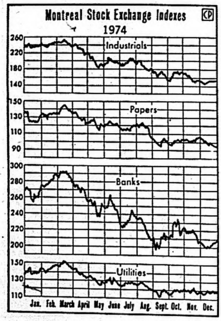
Brando bought the land 10 years ago as a tax shelter, the television station said. He paid $191,184 in prepaid interest on the loan, the report said, but nothing on the $318,000 loan principal. The interest was tax deductible.

Brando turned over a quit claim deed and a letter permanently renouncing all rights to the property to Indian representatives last Monday.

The deed was registered Friday with the Los Angeles County recorder's office, which means the Indians own the land and the $318,000 mortgage

The note on the land is owned jointly by John Hamilton, a Los Angeles builder, his sister, Janet Hamilton, and brother, James Hamilton. In an interview, John Hamilton said the principal must be paid in full by Dec. 30, 1975, or the land will be repossessed.

A spokesman for the Survival of American Indians Association, reached in Tacoma, Wash., said the Indians were aware of the mortgage note when the gift was made and they believed the money would be donated, although they did not know by whom, KABC said.



Al indexes on the Montreal Stock Exchange were down for the year as 1974 came to a close. The industrial index lost the most ground during the year, closing at 156.46, down 81.51 from the start of the year. Papers dropped 37.03 to close at 95.88, banks declined 58.88 to end the year at 211.62, and utilities closed at 119.40, a drop of 17.95. (CP Newsmap)

Little to Inspire Oscar Nominators

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If the current Oscar race seems duller than usual, perhaps that is because 1974 was the Year of the Copycat.

The studios aimed their big guns at repeating previous successes, thereby depriving the screen of real innovation. Big budgets were expended in an effort to match disaster epics such as Airport and The Poiseidon Adventure.

Although they are succeeding at the box office, Airport 1971, Earthquake and The Towering Inferno are attracting no serious attention for the Academy Awards, except in special effects.

Likewise the impact on the awards by Godfather Part II is blunted because it is a sequel. Some critics have proclaimed it better than the original, but it lacks the startling newness and the performance of Marlon Brando.

Other Oscar hopefuls seem to have a derivative nature. Lenny borrows heavily from Orson Wells' classic Citizen Kane. The Front Page, The Three Musketeers and The Great Gatsby all are based on previous movies.

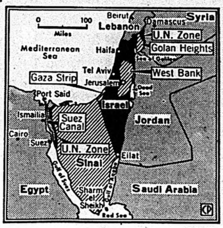
This doesn't mean the Oscar race is any less spirited. The studios now are trying to win favor in the nominations, due Feb. 24. The 3,000 Academy voters are invited to screenings everywhere, trade papers bulge with ads and usually reclusive stars are appearing on television talk shows.

The awards season produces heartaches for studios like MGM and Columbia with no Oscar hopefuls, and headaches for those studios with too many.

For instance, Paramount must give equal treatment to Chinatown, Godfather II, The Little Prince, The Great Gatsby, The Longest Yard, The Conversation, The Gambler and Murder on the Orient Epress.

Not all are Oscar calibre, of course, but the makers and stars of the films need to be placated. Hence, Paramount publicists show no favoritism.

Eligibility for the 1974 awards now is closed, since potential nominees had to appear in a Los Angeles theatre before Dec. 31.



Palestinian State

The Palestine Liberation Organization's dream of a Palestinian State would provide an independent home for a people who have been without homes since the British mandate in Palestine ended and Israel was born in 1948. Three million Palestinians are involved in the scheme which is still just a dream. About 300,000 who remained in the area that became Israel feel that because they are not Jewish, they are looked upon as second class citizens. Another 300,000 in the Gaza Strip were ruled by Egypt until the territory fell into Israeli hands after the 1967 war. There are 700,000 in the Israeli-held West Bank and another million living on the East Bank. An estimated 700,000 Palestinians are living in Syria, Lebanon, Iraq and Kuwait: many in camps supported by the United Nations. These people refuse to integrate with the local Arab population and insist on repatriation to the homes they originally had in Palestine.

Showbiz Shorts

NEW YOK (AP) — Milton Cross, 77, the silver-tongued announcer of the Metropolitan opera for 43 years, died Friday of an apparent heart attack.

He broadcast the inauguration of President Herbert Hoover in 1929, the same year he was awarded the American Academy of Arts and Letters' gold medal for radio diction.

At various times, Cross also announced for Information Please, Radio City Music Hall and Town Hall. His first opera broadcasting job was with the old Chicago Civil Opera for NBC.

LIEGE, Belgium (AP) — Rene Thomas, the world's top jazz guitarist in a 1963 poll conducted by Down Beat magazine, has died of a heart attack in Santander, Spain, friends here said Sunday. He was 47.

Thomas, a Belgian, began his career at the end of the Second World War when he formed a trio called the Bob Shots with Bobby Jaspar and Jacques Pelzer.

He also performed with such musicians as Chet Baker, Sonny Rollins, Lou Bennet and Denny Clarke before joining the Stan Getz Quartet in 1169.

Thomas performed mostly in Canada and the United States.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Tuesday, January 7

Aries (March 21-April 19) Intuitive feelings will serve as reliable guidelines in dealings today, especially if something to be shared is involved.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) There's an opportunity to acquire what you want through a source you seldom use, but is always available if needed.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Your tact and diplomacy will be put to good use when you're called on to mediate a situation involving two pals.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You have a special knack today for transforming something outmoded into something more functional and appealing.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll feel quite flattered when you learn that several of your friends are following an example you set for them.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Spt. 22) It looks like you'll be getting something you've been wanting for the home. It won't come exactly as you planned.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You wield the type of influence necessary for success of your ideas now if, you'll just talk to the right people.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're very adept in working things out so that the ultimate results will prove profitable to you.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) There's some good news coming that you'll be eager to share with some friends. Be selective who you tell.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Someone will be willing to go out of their way to do something for you. It will be very helpful. Don't resist her aid.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Mixing with others is good for you today. Try to participate in some group involvement to take your mind off yourself.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Put out extra effort the next few days. You'll find you're capable of attaining that which is important to you.

MOROCCANS TO STUDY

MONTREAL (CP) — The University of Quebec at Montreal has signed a $1.7 million contract with the federal Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) to train Moroccan engineers economists and statisticians. Under the five-year agreement, Moroccans will study at the university and eventually replace Canadian experts now working in the North African country for CIDA.

Ketostix Tests Prove Annoying

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Of all the new pastimes, my mother-in-law and her elderly friends have started to check everyone they can with Ketostix. I patiently gave in to quiet her down. Now she thinks I'm ill.

I stand 5 feet, 1 inch, weigh 110 pounds and am small-boned. I feel perfectly well, full of energy. I eat a well-balanced diet, except I don't care for sweets and eat very little bread, potatoes or starchy foods.

On the Ketostix, I show purple. She is sure I have something wrong because with everyone else the Keostix has stayed buff-colored.

I don't think they know any more about reading the Keostix than I do (absolutely nothing).

I just had a good checkup three months ago.—Mrs. D. J. F.

If your checkup included a urine sugar test and your doctor was satisfied, then you have little to worry about.

Ketostix are strips of paper, chemically treated to show the presence of ketones in the urine, which could be an indicator of the presence of sugar. Although I'm not big on home laboratory analysis, the Ketostix, sold in drugstores, are quite useful to diabetics who must keep a close check on their body metabolism. High ketone readings are a sign of faulty metabolism.

The combination of your mother-in-law's "findings" and your admission that you don't eat carbohydrate foods is interesting, however. A little more carbohydrate in your diet could change the test.

Ketones can appear in urine of persons on low-carbohydrate diets, a fact that those advocating such diets usually neglect to mention. The ketones, in fact, are organic acids left behind by inadequate "burning" (utilization) of carbohydrates.

They are stored in the body fluids and excreted in the urine. It's a sign the body has fallen back on protein and fats for energy.

This resultant excess acidity may be what your mother-in-law turned up.

It might be wise to take another look at your "balanced" diet.

You certainly should have a professional urine test—good advice, incidentally for anyone going in for a general health checkup. Since you are not a diabetic, your doctor might want to see you getting a bit more of these starchy foods you ignore.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Four years ago my ankles got swollen and arthritis pains hit me, and I got congestive heart failure.
cine for this condition. I immecine for ithcsondition. I immediately lost 22 pounds and my three troubles went away four years ago.

Why doesn't my doctor want to try out to see what would happen if I stopped taking the medicine for a few days?—M.M.

Well, I don't know about any medicine that will take care of arthritis, congestive heart failure and obesity, and you don't make it clear which medicine you are speaking of.

Anyway, don't you think your doctor could answer this better than I? He knows your condition.

Since you seem to be doing well, why change horses in midstream?

Oswald: "One thing a really great player needs is the so-called 'feel' of the table. He will even go far and away against normal percentages because he suspects something abnormal."

Jim: "Here is a hand that you should recall. You were captain of the North American team that won the world's championship in 1970 and 1971. I was a member of the team and this little gem was played by my partner Bobby Wolff."

Oswald: "East won the first trick with the ace of clubs and led back the deuce of spades. West rose with the ace; cashed the king of clubs and then led back a spade. Right?"

Jim: "Yes! Then Bobby put on his thinking cap and decided that West was acting like a man who expected a trump trick. So Bobby won the space with the queen and led the jack of hearts. West covered."

Oswald: "Then Bobby thought some more and decided that West also held the nine. So he came back to his hand with the ace of diamonds, led the eight of trumps, let it ride, cashed dummy's ten, ruffed a good diamond to get back to his hand, cashed his ace of trumps to pick up the nine and claimed his contract."

CP News Roundup

Mosport Garage Is Burned

MOSPORT, Ont. (CP) — Fire destroyed six Formula Ford racing cars and about half of an 800-foot garage Saturday at Mosport Raceway.

Jim Hyman, area fire chief, estimated damage in excess of $100,000. He said the fire may have been caused by a faulty space heater.

Snowmobiles, tools and driving school curriculum papers were also lost in the blaze.

The track's facilities were being used for winter sports.

Mosport is about 30 miles northeast of Toronto.

Hospitals Plan Staff Layoffs

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto General Hospital's executive director says most Metropolitan Toronto hospitals probably will lay off staff this year to stay within provincial budget restrictions.

James McNab said many hospitals hope to reduce staff by attrition, but may have to lay off employees in the second half of the year if attrition does not solve the problem during the first six months.

Toronto General plans to lay off 33 employees and reduce some services to decrease its 1975 budget by two per cent from 1974.

Mr. McNab said the province imposed the restrictions to control "a terrible cost spiral in the health field."

He said that without the move, "the system could die of its own weight."

Ambulance Is Stolen

TORONTO (CP) — A man was arrested after a stolen ambulance with lights flashing led police on a 70-m.p.h. chase through city streets Saturday. Stephen Andrew Dalziel, 22, of no fixed address was charged with theft and with possession over $200.

Talks Possible

ADDIS ABABA (AP) — Ethiopia's military government issued a conciliatory communique Sunday in an apparent first step toward opening negotiations with secessionist guerrillas in the troubled northern province of Eritrea.

The government issued a communique saying it has authorized civilian and church leaders to make direct contact with the Eritrean Liberation Front (ELF) on its behalf.

The communique follows weeks of guerrilla activity in the area.

Vote to Strike

OTTAWA (CP) — More than 550 federal employees working at the Royal Canadian Mint in Ottawa and Winnipeg voted overwhelmingly Sunday in favor of strike action, clearing the way for a walkout today.

However, a negotiator for the workers said Sunday that strike action is unlikely before later this week.

Reds Held

CAIRO (AP) — Authorities announced Sunday that 120 persons have been arrested for instigating anti-government disturbances in Cairo during the last week.

Police sources said those jailed include 30 members of the outlawed Communist party. Pamphlets calling for riots against the government of President Anwar Sadat were found on the detained Communists, the sources said.

Bus in Store

OTTAWA (CP) — An Ottawa Transport Commission bus was lodged four feet inside a paint store Saturday night following a collision with a car at a downtown intersection.

Police said Sunday that the driver of the car suffered minor injuries in the accident. There were no other injuries.

Ship Manure

DES MOINES, Iowa (Reuter) — A plan to ship thousands of tons of liquefied cattle manure from United States farms to the Persian gulf states of Dubai and Bahrain was announced Sunday.

R. J. B. Sales Export Inc. of Sequim, Wash., said the manure would be used to convert desert land to farmland.

Stelco Seeks Leave To Charge Strikers

HAMILTON (CP) — The Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. (Stelco) has applied to the Ontario labor ministry for permission to charge workers with taking part in an illegal strike Friday when nearly half of the 2,000-man night shift refused to work, a union official said.

James Lennie, a member of the executive committee of Local 1005, United Steelworkers of America, said Saturday the union has received a telegram from the company stating its intention.

"The telegram pointed out that under the Labor Relations Act, it is a breach of the basic agreement for workers to take part in a wildcat," Mr. Lennie said.

"Individual workers could be fined up to $1,000 a day and under the act the company can also sue the union for loss of production. That's the law."

The company says it suffered "substantial losses" in production due to a wildcat strike Friday night.

The union says a picket line at plant gates Friday night was set up by outside agitators. Two cars were damaged when attempts were made to cross the picket line.

On Friday morning, 50 workers walked out to protest the firing of three men accused of drinking on the job.

A company spokesman said it would be some time before the company could put a dollar value on the losses.

"The normal shift is about 2,000 men," the spokesman said. "We estimate that at least 800 men were outside at the peak time during the wildcat, although we think that only about 50 of these were directly involved in the blockade."

The full day shift reported for work Saturday. A dozen pickets patrolled plant gates on Depew Street but there were no pickets on Wilcox Street where most of the shift entered plant grounds.

Mr. Lennie said the union would meet company representatives today to discuss the question of charging workers.

Bid Made To Extort Million

LaGRANGE, Ind. (AP) — An unemployed factory worker has been accused of trying to extort as much as $1 million from the Amish community in LaGrange.

Authorities said Arthur Hayner, 42, of LaGrange, was arrested here Saturday on a preliminary charge of "attempting to gain control of property through the use of threats." He is in LaGrange County Jail.

Sidney Fish, a state police detective, said six influential Amish leaders found hand delivered letters in their mail 10 days ago, demanding that they collect a substantial amount of cash from each family in the Amish community.

Fish said the letters threatened possible bodily injury or property damage if the instructions were not carried out.

He said the six were later directed by separate letters to take the money to a phone booth in LaGrange, where they would get further instructions.

About 30 state police, sheriff's deputies and city officers surrounded the area and traced the call which was made to the phone booth, Fish said.

Hayner was arrested minutes later at another telephone booth in LaGrange, about a mile from the drop-off point, officers said.

Robbed Man Grabs Gun, Helps Capture Bandits

MIAMI (AP) — A pair of bandits who robbed a dentist's office were apprehended when a patient in the office grabbed a gun and chased the men into the path of an off-duty policeman, authorities said.

The bandits, fleeing with $4,000 in cash and jewelry, got into a car but then collided with a parked vehicle Friday when they were caught in cross-fire between the policeman and patient, officials said.

Authorities said the bandits robbed Dr. C. C. Ray and patient Harry Clark and then forced the two men and Clark's wife and two children into a closet.

Clark said after the men left the office he ran to his car and got a .25-calibre revolver and ran after the bandits firing his pistol.

Off-duty policeman Vernon Hetherington heard the shots and pursued the robbers, also firing his pistol as they fled.

Arrested and charged with armed robbery and possession of a firearm were Larry Milton, 19, and Steve Johnson, 21, both of Miami.

Johnson, who was in stable condition in hospital Saturday, was also charged with assault to commit murder.

Archie's Creator Dies

MEREDITH, N.H. (AP) — Bob Montana, creator of the Archie comic strip, died Saturday while cross-country skiing near his home here.

A family spokesman said the 54-year-old cartoonist died after he apparently suffered a heart attack.

Montana, who began his cartooning career while in high school, created Archie comics in 1942, when a publisher commissioned him to draw a strip based on the Henry Aldrich radio show.

Montana later said the character Jughead was created "on the drawing board; I never knew him," although Archie's girl-friend Veronica was based on the film star Veronica Lake and Betty, Montana once remarked, "was an old girl-friend of mine."

Saturn Rocket Returning Home

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (Reuter) — They shot a Saturn in the air, and soon it falls, they know not where.

But at least they care—enough to have advised the United Nations Security Council that up to 50,000 pounds of space debris from the second stage of a United States Saturn 5 moon rocket will return to earth this Friday.

"We want to make sure they know it isn't some kind of a bomb," said James Clark, an official at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) centre here.

But Guy Jackson, another NASA official, said the possibility of the debris striking people or property is almost non-existent.

The centre is predicting that the second stage of the rocket—which placed the 100-ton Skylab space station in orbit in May, 1973—will re-enter the earth's atmosphere at about 2 p.m. EST Friday.

Clark said this remains subject to about 12 hours' change either way because the rocket is tumbling in orbit.

It is looping the earth at about 17,000 miles an hour—the speed at which it will strike the earth's dense atmosphere, causing parts to burn out and spew fire in the sky.

Clark said the stage, known as S-2, has fallen to an altitude of about 100 miles from its original 170 miles in the last two weeks.

The prediction now is that about half the rocket stage will remain intact on re-entering the atmosphere, officials said. As much as 50,000 pounds—including the empty liquid oxygen tanks, steel structures and struts inside the rocket, and five big engines—all could stand the terrific heat that will accompany the re-entry.

Given the proportion of water to land on earth, the odds are that the debris will fall into a sea or ocean. But one space centre official said the trajectory in its final orbit could place the S-2 in a line covering 70 per cent of the earth's land mass. One orbit takes about 90 minutes.

While some of the large structures of the S-2 are expected to keep their shape, the stage is expected to blow apart into possibly as many as 100 pieces and cover an area of anywhere from 1,000 to 2,000 square miles.

Officials at the space centre conceded that there is not much information they can use to accurately predict precisely what will happen.

Returning space debris from earlier U.S. Mercury, Gemeni and Apollo programs never caused any casualties or damaged property, the agency has said.

But it also noted that the Saturn remnants will be the largest man-made debris ever to re-enter from space.

SIU to Challenge Right Of Shulman to Privilege

TORONTO (CP) — A lawyer representing the Seafarers' International Union (SIU) said Sunday the union will challenge in court Morton Shulman's right to reveal, under protection of parliamentary privilege, the existence and content of a wiretap.

Dr. Shulman, New Democratic Party member of the Ontario legislature for High Park, read in the house last month excerpts of a wiretapped telephone conversation between federal Labor Minister John Munro and SIU president Roman Gralewicz.

The SIU asked Attorney-General Robert Welch to prosecute Dr. Shulman under the Protection of Privacy Act which makes it an offence to reveal the existence or contents of a wiretap.

Mr. Welch refused the request, saying in a letter to the SIU that he felt Dr. Shulman was protected by "absolute privilege" which "renders members (of the legislature, while speaking in the legislature) immune from criminal prosecution."

"We've decided the issue must be settled in court," said Aubrey Golden, the SIU lawyer. "The province cannot shield a person from the Criminal Code."

In an attempt to force the attorney-general to take action against Dr. Shulman, the SIU will seek a declaration in divisional court next Friday that privilege of the legislature does not extend to possible criminal conduct.

Mr. Golden said Mr. Welch was served with notice of motion last Friday and that Dr. Shulman was served on the weekend.

Neither could be reached for comment.

Although Mr. Welch was also served with notice, Mr. Golden conceded that for the SIU, "it's obvious this is directed at Dr. Shulman."

An SIU spokesman in Montreal said SIU president Roman Gralewicz has the mandate of the 7,000 SIU members in Canada to pursue action against Dr. Shulman, adding that the union will go to the Supreme Court of Canada if necessary.

Mayor Says Federal Aid Needed by Municipalities

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — Mayor Joe Fabbro says the federal government must transfer more funds to the municipal level.

In his annual statement before council gets down to business next week, the mayor said Ontario alone cannot carry the financial burden of municipalities.

He added that both provincial and federal governments have a flexible taxation base, while municipalities must rely on real property taxes.

Municipalities have traditionally pleaded for a greater share of senior government money, Mayor Fabbro said.

"The time has come for our colleagues in Queen's Park and Ottawa to realize that we are three levels of government rather than two and one subordinate."

He added that the province says it will increase transfer payments at the same rate as provincial revenues increase and will also transfer every unconditional dollar it receives from Ottawa to the municipalities.

Charlotte Whitton Has Heart Attack

OTTAWA (CP) — Charlotte Whitton, 78-year-old former mayor of Ottawa, was admitted to hospital Sunday night following a heart attack.

A hospital spokesman, unable to say when the attack occurred, said Miss Whitton was in intensive care and slightly improved from her original condition.

No other details were immediately available.

It is the second time in two years Miss Whitton, one of the outstanding women in Canadian history as well as one of the most notable mayors of Ottawa, has been in hospital.

A fall in her home in 1972 put Miss Whitton in hospital for several months with a broken hip and ended her political and public career.

Born in Renfrew, Ont. March 8, 1896, Miss Whitton first ran for office in 1950 and was elected a city controller by a landslide.

Having won with 7,000 votes more than the next best showing by a controller, Miss Whitton became deputy mayor and acceeded to the highest office when Mayor Grenville Goodwin died nine months later.

Like Ford

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — The first words many people say to Robert Smeding are: "President Ford?"

Smeding, 49, an interior decorator vacationing here from his home in British Columbia, bears a close resemblance to President Ford. He has drawn small crowds while visiting tourist attractions here, with many people snapping pictures of him.

Cabinet Shuffle Predicted

TORONTO (CP) — The Sun quotes a source close to the Ontario cabinet as saying Premier William Davis will announce a major cabinet shakeup within the next week or 10 days, with as many as 20 changes possible in the cabinet.

The morning newspaper says Energy Minister D'Arcy McKeough will become provincial treasurer, replacing John White who is retiring from politics at the end of the current legislative session, and that Attorney-General Robert Welch will take charge of the newly-created ministry of culture and recreation.

The Sun quotes the unnamed source as saying John Clement, minister of consumer and commercial relations, will become attorney-general.

Mr. McKeough, Mr. Welch and Mr. Clement were unavailable for comment.

Mr. Davis, vacationing in Florida, met with several ministers before his departure, the newspaper said.

Mr. Clement, 46, was taken to hospital for a brief period in mid-December suffering from near exhauston, eye trouble and flu.

With Mr. White's departure and creation of the new portfolio, the two new appointments will enlarge the cabinet to 27 members including the premier.

Wounded Falcon to Fly With Glued-on Feathers

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — A wounded falcon will soar to freedom along the Rio Grande River in Texas in a few weeks, after getting a dozen transplanted tail feathers and some flying training.

The Peregrine falcon received the new tail assembly in a 90-minute operation Friday at the University of Minnesota St. Paul campus.

The feathers were donated by the ornithology lab at Cornell University at Ithaca, N.Y., where molted feathers were recovered from other birds, said Dr. Patrick Redig, a veterinarian.

The female falcon, born last spring, was shot and suffered a broken wing near Hibbing, in northern Minnesota. She rubbed off tail feathers while recuperating in a veterinarian's cage in Hibbing.

The transplanting process is called "imping." Redig explained that pieces of bamboo are put inside the donated feathers and glued to feather stubs in the tail.

Eventually the falcon would have grown feathers to replace the lost ones. But it was feared the bird would be so used to captivity by the time they grew back she wouldn't be able to cope with life in the wild again.

"Now she has the equipment necessary to fly but doesn't remember how," said Dr. Keith Larson of the U.S. fish and wildlife service.

Redig said falcons spend summers in the Northwest Territories and winter in the Rio Grande area of Texas.

He will fly to Texas within a few days in a U.S. Air Force plane with the bird perched on his fist.

A falcon expert will give the bird about 30 days' training before it is released.

Saigon Mourns Loss of Province

From AP-Reuters

SAIGON (CP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu called on South Vietnam today to "acknowledge the noble sacrifice of our soldiers" with three days of mourning for the loss of the first provincial capital in nearly three years.

Powerful North Vietnamese forces overran Phuoc Binh city after a six-day siege, completing their conquest of Phuoc Long province. They left parts of the city in flames. In a separate drive, they also seized a base guarding Tay Ninh city, threatening that provincial capital 70 miles southwest of Phuoc Binh, the Saigon command said.

The U.S. defence department and the U.S. Embassy in Saigon denied reports that the aircraft carrier Enterprise and a group of escorting ships were sailing into South Vietnamese waters to back up the Saigon government.

Thieu, whose ouster is one of the objectives in the Communist offensive, urged the South Vietnamese to cease all entertainment because of the loss of Phuoc Binh. The Saigon mayor's office ordered all coffee houses and night clubs shuttered for the period.

"This morning, Jan. 7, our Phuoc Binh provincial capital has been overrun after 25 days of valiant fighting by our soldiers and people with difficult and harsh conditions to resist against the North Vietnamese 7th division, supported by artillery, anti-aircraft, rockets, tanks and sappers that outnumbered our force," Thieu said in a statement read by announcers over the government radio and television network.

"But the North Vietnamese have paid a costly price . . . In order to acknowledge the noble sacrifice of our soldiers, cadres and people who have died for the nation . . . I appeal to the entire population to reserve three days from Jan. 8 to pray and hold memorial services for them and avoid all luxury distractions and to stop all entertainment. Those three days will reveal our wholehearted unanimity for the determination of the entire South Vietnamese people against the Communist aggressors."

Phuoc Binh is the first provincial capital to fall since the Vietnam peace accords were signed in Paris two years ago.

Insurgents first penetrated Phuoc Binh on Saturday and fierce fighting around the city has continued ever since.

The Saigon military command said government forces in Phuoc Bknh were outnumbered four to one, and poor flying weather had hampered air support for the government defenders who had only armored cars against the insurgents' tanks and heavy artillery.

The command also reported the loss of another strategic position, on Ba Den mountain, 60 miles northwest of here. The mountain camp overlooks the city of Tay Ninh.

Fighting also continued around the district town of Hoai Duc, 75 miles northeast of Saigon.

In Washington, U.S. officials were considering what steps could be taken to bolster support for South Vietnam in the face of the Communist offensive which the officials expect will intensify.

Intelligence sources here say the North Vietnamese-Viet Cong strategy is to force a coalition government in Saigon that the Communist forces could dominate.

Millhaven Man Dies Of Beating

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A Millhaven institution prisoner died Monday night of head injuries after being beaten in the exercise yard of the maximum security prison just west of here, a prison official said.

H. J. Andrews, a United States citizen, died of head injuries about 9:30 p.m. in Kingston General Hospital. He was found by prison staff about two hours earlier in the yard after prisoners had returned to the prison block.

Andrews was beaten with an exercise bar, said John Bennett, deputy regional director of penitentiaries for Ontario region.

Andrews was sentenced in October, 1973, to seven years for attempted rape.

Mr. Bennett said both an internal prison inquiry and a provincial police investigation are underway into the death, the second at Millhaven since it opened in 1971.

Ceasefire Extended

LONDON (AP) — The Irish Republican Army (IRA) plans to extend its ceasefire until Feb. 2 while it holds secret negotiations with the British government, London newspapers report.

The reports, quoting IRA sources in Dublin, say the guerrillas also want to give the government time to publish a report on anti-terrorist legislation, particularly internment of suspected terrorists

Gold Auction Flop Shows Common Sense

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government's great gold auction was a flop, but it proved that people have kept their common sense, officials say.

Although the government was auctioning two million ounces of gold, it received bids on only 954,800 ounces and accepted bids for just 750,000 ounces.

In addition, it appeared that most of the gold was bought by complete list of successful bidwas for about 400,000 ounces from the Dresdner Bank of New York, a subsidiary of a major West German bank.

Two Swiss banks also were among the major bidders. The complete list of sucnessful bidders was to be made public later today.

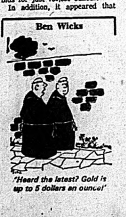
Except for a few industries and banks, most U.S. bids were for a single 400-ounce bar of gold, the minimum amount being auctioned.

The minimum bid price accepted by the government was $153 an ounce, considerably below world market gold prices, although a few bids ranged as high as $185 an ounce.

The gold sold Monday will bring the government more than $100 million in revenue.

Treasury Secretary William Simon expressed delight that U.S. citizens did not buy up all the gold at sharply higher prices.

"It once again proves that the American people are a good deal smarter than many people give them credit for," Simon said at a news conference.



'Heard the latest? Gold is up to 5 dollars an ounce!'

No Air Canada Passes Given MPs' Wives

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian transport commission has abruptly grounded a plan to give the wives of federal cabinet ministers unlimited, free first-class travel on Air Canada.

In an unpublicized decision dated Dec. 30, the commission rejected an Air Canada request to grant spouses the same free-ride privileges enjoyed by cabinet members and a small number of other senior political figures.

The publicly-owned airline was apparently responding to pressure from some cabinet ministers who were being nagged by their wives to go along on trips, the official said.

But officials in the offices of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and Transport Minister Jean Marchand said they were unaware of any request to Air Canada for extension of the special travel privileges.

Durham Teachers Return

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Separate school classes in the Oshawa-centred Durham region returned to normal today following acceptance Monday of a negotiated agreement that gives teachers an average pay increase of 20.6 per cent in a one-year contract.

Meanwhile, more than 80,000 students in six other separate school districts in Ontario were without teachers, despite attempts by some school boards to recruit pupils' parents to provide classroom supervision.

A teachers' spokesman described those attempts as "desperate."

Contract disputes between teachers, members of the Ontario English Catholic Teachers Association (OECTA), and their boards reached crucial stages last Wednesday when resignations of 85 per cent of 4,168 teachers took effect.

Students had been scheduled to return to classes Monday following a Christmas break, but unfinished bargaining in Durham, Sudbury, Wellington, Carleton, Ottawa, Elgin and London-Middlesex resulted in teachers staying home.

Schools remained open in some districts and at least one school board - Wellington - paid housewives and other volunteers $25 each to supervise classrooms Monday.

The London-Middlesex board decided Monday night to pay volunteers $3 an hour and was planning to have some schools open and staffed by volunteers by Wednesday.

A spokesman for the OECTA in London said the board agreed to mediation and talks will begin in Toronto today.

Lebanon Is Visited By Syrian

From AP-REUTERS

Syrian President Hafez Assad arrived in Lebanon today on a six-hour visit to discuss military co-operation against Israel.

Assad was met at the border by Lebanese President Suleiman Fanjieh, who was seeking Syrian arms and other equipment to help his army repel Israeli attacks on Lebanese territory, official sources said.

The leaders also were to discuss joint strategy in case of an Israeli attack on Syria through southeast Lebanon.

Lebanon's premier denied an Israeli charge that Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon are armed with late-model missiles obtained from Syria.

Simon Says Ford Plans Energy-saving Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Treasury Secretary William Simon says President Ford plans a new energy conservation program that "will necessarily mean a degree of personal sacrifice."

The administration energy-economic strategy will be "tough, comprehensive and effective," Simon said Monday.

He also hinted at tax cuts and additional help for the unemployed in a program to be formally announced Jan. 20.

Meanwhile, Alan Greenspan, Ford's chief economist, told a congressional committee that recovery from the current recession will take many months and is unlikely to reduce spiraling unemployment this year.

Greenspan said the United States jobless rate, now 7.1 per cent, probably will climb even higher this year, and that it is logical to assume that unemployment will not be reduced much below 6.5 per cent during 1976.

He said an anticipated turnaround in the depressed automobile and housing industries, along with depletion of industrial inventories, "should begin to lift total production during the second half of the year." But "the recovery is unlikely to provide much of a reduction in unemployment this year."

Simon said Ford's new economic program will put equal stress on anti-inflation measures and efforts to fight the recession.

"We cannot afford the luxury of concentrating upon one at the expense of the other, for both are social dynamite," the treasury secretary said.

The administration is reported to be considering a plan to discourage fuel consumption by raising the price of both domestic and imported oil by $3 a barrel, which might lead to a gasoline price hike of about 7.5 cents per gallon at the pump.

Canadian Economy May Show Growth

MONTREAL (CP) — Despite some problems, the Canadian economy may experience some growth in 1975, says E. R. Olson, president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

"The Canadian economy today suffers from four major downturns—the decline in housing starts, the adverse balance of trade position, comparatively tight money conditions and escalating inflation," Mr. Olson said Monday in a statement.

However, Canada's ailing balance of trade position "could show signs of recovery during mid-1975 if the economic outlook in the United States, Japan and Europe accelerates moderately."

He predicted for Canadians a rise in personal income and, as a result of recent federal income tax cuts, a rise in personal disposable income.

Oath of Office

Council Briefs

Bylaw Boosts Parking

City council Monday made two moves to facilitate construction of Belleville General Hospital's long-awaited new parking lot.

The hospital board last month approved construction of a lot on the BGH's eastern perimeter — bordering onto Bay Dr.

Council passed a bylaw approving closing and sale of two sections of road allowance. A needed rezoning application was referred to the Quinte Planning Board and the subordinate planning advisory committee

City Lot Sold

A city travel agency plans new premises on a mid-town site — the remainder of a lot put up for sale by city hall following a street-widening land acquisition.

City council Monday approved sale of the Pinnacle-East Dundas Streets site to Rawson Travel Service.

The city acquired the property—a service station— for $5,000 as part of its Dundas St. widening project.

After separating a strip for a traffic lane the rest of the property went on the market.

John F. Rawson, travel company president, said he hopes to have his firm's new location in operation by next May.

Sale price set in the bylaw was $32,000.

Medical Centre Approved

Site plan for a three-storey medical building on East Dundas St. was approved by city council Monday.

Work now will soon start on the project, a contractor's spokesman said later.

Council's approval — for 220 Dundas St. East Inc. — is contingent on the availability of 48 parking spaces.

Peter Sztuke, sales manager for contractor Cornerstone Builders Ltd., a Belleville-area firm said construction would start soon, depending on the weather.

Construction Costs Mount

City council moved Monday night to update an agreement with the provincial government on plans for widening East Dundas St. to Bleecker Ave.

The move was necessary because of delays caused by difficulties completing property acquisitions.

As a result, cost estimates have also required revision.

The increase probably will total about $200,000 on the total estimated cost of the project, city manager Wilbur Purcell said.

The city's share of the updated total will be about $50,000. But there also may be another $50,000 in various administrative costs.

Actual total cost of the reconstruction project will not be known until tenders are called this spring.

The increase also includes some new work items added to the original design.

Wire Bylaw Passed

Belleville now has a bylaw regulating use of barbed wire fences.

The measure was passed by city council Monday — after reports of indiscriminate barbed fencing was reported to city hall last month. A long-standing bylaw was not being observed by the public, or council, aldermen were told.

The new protective measure means barbs must be at least six feet above the ground level of any fence. It carries a penalty of up to $1,000.

Workload Divided

PICTON — Town council, at its inaugural session Monday night, appointed standing committees for the 1975-76 term.

Committees and committee members are as follows:

Finance and Administration: Bessie Ward, chairman, Russell Alexander, Harry Abram.

Public Works: Russell Alexander, chairman, Norman March, Ross Cronkwright.

Planning and Development: Richard Byers, chairman, Charles Hepburn, Russell Alexander.

Fire and Emergency: Ross Cronkwright, chairman, Richard Byers, Norman March.

Recreation, Parks and Community Centres Board: Larry Richardson, chairman, Bessie Ward, Harry Abram.

Mayor Donald King is an ex-officio member of all standing committees.

Patrick Takes Office

During Inauguration ceremonies in Trenton Monday, Mayor Robert Patrick accepted the chain of office from clerk-administrator Aubrey Sharp. In a short, 20-minute ceremony the mayor, six councillors and two Trenton public utilities commissioners took the oath of office. Mayor Patrick enters his first full,two-year term of office this year. Prior to his election victory Dec. 2, former councillor Patrick took over mayoralty duties Jan. 1, 1974 from previous mayor Duncan McDonald .

Drivers Escape Injury

CHERRY VALLEY — Two drivers escaped injury Monday night in a two-car collision that caused an estimated $2,500 damage on Cherry Valley Road

Police said the accident ocurred when a car driven by Chris Salt, 26, of RR 2 Milford, was in collision with a car driven by Loretto Johnson 19, of Belleville, who was backing her car onto the road. Both driver were unhurt. A passenger in the Johnson car, 19-year-old Robert McCourt of Picton, received bruises.

Fire Protection Discussed

BANCROFT — Council here Monday heard Bancroft Fire Chief Wayne Walker say that "North Hastings is the only area of Ontario that does not have fire agreements between the municipal centres and the surrounding townships."

Bancroft, which has a 17-man volunteer fire department as well as pumper trucks and other radio-equipped equipment, has offered fire protection to the areas of Herschel, Dundannon, and Faraday Townships, that abut the village. However in the past, the offer has been declined.

The Bancroft fire department is also a member of the Mutual Aid group that includes Haliburton, Cardiff and Wollerston Townships.

Fire Chief Walker said a fire protection agreement between Bancroft and the surrounding townships would substantially affect insurance premiums presently paid by residents of the townships.

King Outlines Picton's Priorities for New Year

PICTON — If desirable progress and development are to come to the Picton area the town must remain as part of Prince Edward County, rather than become a separated municipality, says Mayor Donald King.

In his inaugural address to council Monday, Mayor King observed the wisdom of past representatives in allowing the town to remain a part of the whole. He described this condition as "very essential" for progress.

The new mayor offered council a list of priorities for the town, including improvements to the sanitary sewerage plant, co-operation with the Public Utilities Commission for improvements to the water distribution centre, preparation of a secondary plan for the Picton-Hallowell urban area and a streets construction program.

Other priorities stressed were improvements to traffic and parking facilities, and community enrichment program suggested as council's term progresses.

"At this present time of inflationary tendencies it is perhaps more necessary than in any time in the past that we obtain estimated costs of the improvements we would like to make and endeavor to set priorities for those things most necessary," he remarked.

He emphasized municipal government as a continuing process and said inadequate consideration could "result in the imposition of "an unbearable tax load on our citizens".

At the close of Monday's council session Mayor King appointed a three-member traffic and parking committee to investigate Picton's parking facilities. The action was in keeping with his suggestion that the town's parking situation is a priority this term.

Salary Boost Approved For Bancroft Workers

BANCROFT — The re-elected and new members of Bancroft council met Monday to take the oath of office and begin the business of the next two years.

Reeve Russell Hawley, deputy-reeve Audrey Donnelly and councillors Ray Carswell, Bob Blatherwick and Franklin Walker repeated the oath in the presence of the village clerk and signed the declaration.

In one of the first moves of the new year, council proposed raising the wages of all municipal employees.

The pay raise ranges from 12 to 20 per cent.

"These men need a good raise just in order to keep up with the cost of living," said Reeve Hawley as he endorsed the larger pay package for the employees.

If the wage offer is accepted by the village employees, the office staff will find themselves with a salary raise of 12 per cent.

Street and park employees will receive increases of up to 20 per cent.

The supervisory staff and grader operators will make $4.50 and $4.30 hourly and laborers $3 and $3.60 hourly under the new agreement.

The streets employees had requested a 75-cent-an-hour increase before Christmas.

The last increase for municipal salaries was in March, 1974.

Lawn Ornaments Booming Trade

TRENTON — When it comes to rating lawn ornament manufacturers a middle-aged couple originally from Denmark stands at the top of the list in Ontario.

Karl and Inge Lund Pedersen of RR2, Brighton climbed the ladder of success in just five years with a policy to supply lawn ornaments at "prices within reason."

A bird bath they purchased in the USA for $6. and found a dealer in Canada was asking double the amount for the same article convinced them they could still make a good living with hard work and less extravagant merchandising ideas.

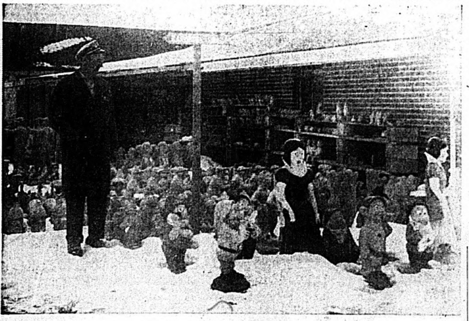
In the spring of 1969 they started business from their home on Highway 2 with the lawn ornaments from 20 different molds. The first year their sold approximately 6,000 seperate items and were encouraged by the results.

The next year they had to increase their output as old customers returned and many new ones found what they were looking for in the couples growing assortment. And although sales improved they continued to charge within moderation for their products.

Including 1974, the Lund Pedersens have turned out and retailed more than 70,000 lawn ornaments ranging from 700 - pound square lawn tables to small half-pound birds for St. Francis of Assisi statues. Their list of selections, steadily on the increase, are produced from 150 molds — some of them Lund Pedersen originals.

A composition of sand and cement is used exclusively in the processing. Winter which is really an off season is almost as busy for the Lund Pedersens as the rest of the year. They work every day trying to replenish depleted inventories. Their aim is to have at least $10,000 in new stock available by the time spring comes and home owners start thinking about improving the appearances of lawns and gardens.

Previous to moving to the Quinte region Mr. and Mrs. Lund Pedersen lived in Lindsay for seven years.



Ornaments Pile Up

Karl Lund Pedersen of RR 2, Brighton inspects a portion of his lawn ornament stock which he has been forced to pile in his yard until consumer demand resumes in the spring. Mr. Pedersen and his wife, Inge, manufacture their own ornaments for commercial sales from their home on Highway 2, and have found business for this line of merchandise is booming.

Co-operation Stressed

New Trenton Officials Take Office

TRENTON — In his inaugural address here Monday, Mayor Robert Patrick asked for the "full co-operation" of the primarily re-elected council to ensure a "fruitful" two-year term of office.

In a short address following the wearing in of the new council and the two Trenton Public Utilities Commission members, the mayor asked for co-operation for programs carried over from the old council and for new projects, yet to be conceived.

"We have our work cut out for us," he said, in referring to the coming term.

Mayor Patrick said the continuation of the road improvement program remains the town's number one priority.

He pledged a change in council procedures at one of the earliest meetings of the new council.

The mayor, however, did not disclose the nature of any procedural changes.

Only two new faces took the oath of office here Monday.

Take 2

F. J. (Pete) Aziz was worn in as councillor, replacing John Bonn, who declined to run in the Dec. 2 municipal election.

Barry Box joins the PUC as commissioner after winning a tight electoral battle with long-time PUC member Charles Hilton.

Of the remaining town councillors, all but Edward Todd took the oath of office. Mr. Todd was unable to attend due to illness.

Police Report Trent Still Unsafe for Public Skating

TRENTON — The absence of a lengthy cold stretch and strong currents in the Trent River have combined to keep ice surfaces treacherously unsafe, officials said here Monday.

Town police warn Trenton citizens, especially children, to stay off the river ice. Ice in the bay itself may be thicker, and thus safer, but it is recommended people stay on dry land till later in the new year, police said.

The Canadian Red Cross warns ice must be at least four inches thick to support skaters.

To support the weight of a snowmobile, ice must be at least eight inches in depth.

Police Sgt Russell King said Monday his officers continue to chase children from Trent River ice.

"There is no way it is safe," he said.

So far this winter, no one has fallen through the ice. During the last few years, mobiles also have fallen through thin ice, but none have drowned.

Sgt. King said snowmobiles also have fallen through and have been lost.

Police said children pick the area behind Trenton Community Gardens and the Canadian Tire Store on Dundas St. East, to venture onto ice.

The ice along the river banks is thin, and in places such as under the Dundas St. bridge, water can be seen.

At CFB Trenton, the duty forecaster said he foresees little change in the weather to allow ice to firmly form. This weekend, temperatures should dip, but there is no guarantee they will remain below freezing for any length of time, he said.

To make sure an ice surface is "reasonably safe", temperatures must dip to at least 10-degrees Fahrenheit at night and not rise above 25 during the day.

Board Billed For Land

BANCROFT — The newly-installed local council here has billed the Hastings County Board of Education for $1,500 to cover 60 per cent of the purchase price of property to be used in conjunction with the North Hastings Senior Elementary School.

The council and the board entered into the purchase agreement when the school was constructed in 1973.

The property on Faraday Heights will be used to provide a track and field area near the existing arena and baseball diamond.

King Receives Chain

Picton's new mayor Donald King received his chain of office during an inaugural meeting of council Monday night. It was presented by veteran member of council, Bessie Ward. A gavel of office was given to the mayor by town clerk Andrew Jarvis.

Chief's Pension Increased

PICTON — Town council has granted retiring Picton police chief George Pitt a monthly pension supplement of $100 for life

The veteran policeman, who has been a members of the force for 32 years petitioned the Picton police commission for a supplement to his pension of three-fifths of his average salary for the last three years.

In a letter to town council, chairman of the police commission Jesse Mason noted Chief Pitt's request for a pension supplement is permissible under the Municipal Act but action by the municipality is needed to implement it.

Chief Pitt had paid into a pension plan for only 10 years and from it will receive $2,477 annually in addition to Canada Pension and old age security pension.

Councillors Russell Alexander, Bessie Ward and Richard Byers opposed the $100 monthly grant supplement to the retired chief's pension.

The request was successfully supported by mayor Donald King, councillors Harry Abram, Charles Hepburn and Norman March and reeve Ross Cronkwright.

Concert Planned

TRENTON — Recording artists, The Envoys, will present a concert of gospel songs at the Christian Reformed Church, Saturday, Jan. 11. The gospel singers, who appeared in Trenton four years ago, are based in Rockaway, New Jersey. The concert begins at 8 p.m.

Auto Nostalgia

Car manufacturers, both domestic and foreign, are not letting the grass grow under their feet because of recession. Rather they are designing new models with a view to post-recessionary markets.

There is no doubt that in a car-oriented continent the new models will be awaited with interest, but meanwhile we can content ourselves with encounters with some of the old bombs as they are called in some car-buff circles.

A Bellevillian who once drove a Studebaker in Thunder Bay in the late fifties recalls its graceful lines — an artistic propensity which, unhappily, was not sufficient to offset the auto's thirsty oil consumption or its balky starts on chill Lakehead mornings or a heating system that was no match for the Northwestern Ontario and Minnesota winters.

It is long gone of course, and it is also a while since its owner saw a locally-owned and classic-looking Avanti from the same manufacturer that used to be seen around town. Still to be seen though are a few of the compacts which the now defunct Studebaker company pioneered but failed nevertheless to stay in production.

There have been some other gems in the Quinte area: an old Austin A 40 from Brittain, a Kaiser . . . and a deSoto model also comes to mind, but none of them seen lately. Perhaps they too have been consigned to the scrap heap.

Monday though brought a surprise on Pinnacle Street. There, just ahead, was . . . and Edsel! Battered but unbowed—and it is evidently still going strong.

Henry Ford would be pleased.

Reaching Out

The city of Sudbury in Northern Ontario is more than just a "blasted heath" Macbeth-style, a moon-landscaped environment which drew U.S. astronauts to its nickel-contoured landscape.

It is also a vigorous business community, a place too with a leaning toward the arts — it has a symphony orchestra — and it is a city with a heart, as witness its Christmas response to the plight of a dying girl in Belleville, Illinois.

It goes without saying our own city has links with the Illinois community. Its Mayor was here some years ago for Belleville Week celebrations.

And recently we mentioned Heidi Biggs, the 14-year-old who is dying of cancer. A picture of her reading the Bible to her small brother was published in newspapers in Canada. Russell Penny, a 40-year-old Sudbury sales representative saw the picture, and inserted an advertisement in the city's newspaper requesting readers to help make Heidi's Christmas a memorable one. Scores of cards from Sudbury were among 300 the youngster received from Ontario.

Mr. Penny also phoned Christmas greetings and subsequently travelled to the Illinois city to visit Heidi and her family and take her to church for New Year's services. According to Mr. Penny's supervisor, his action was very much in character.

We are certain that Heidi Biggs would welcome messages from Belleville, Ontario. Probably she has received some already. Our prayers too.

War's Legacy

The news from Southeast Asia is of stepped-up Communist pressure in Vietnam and Cambodia — and of a brutal massacre of about 50 civilians and children in the latter country.

There never was much hope that the truce negotiated prior to the American withdrawal would extend beyond that time to include the Asian combatants. And lately the fighting has intensified. That it also revives the spectre of savagery involving innocents is a further sad commentary on the state of affairs in that part of the world.

Some Timing

'Materialistic Disenchantment' Theme Of Article By P.M.

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — You really have to hand it to Prime Minister Trudeau.

The grand prize, the bright blue ribbon, and the Royal Canadian salute for exquisite timing, and for, well, you name it.

There he is, philosopher, author and prime minister, moralizing under his own name in a recent issue of the New York intellectual magazine Saturday Review World.

Theme of this special issue of the Review is "An Inventory of Hope".

And get this . . . under his own byline, the Prime Minister writes while peering into the deeping gloom of these foreboding economic times . . . that the one powerful reason persuading him there are solid grounds for optimism is the heart-warming evidence everywhere of "a search for a new consciousness, and the disenchantment with a purely materialistic acquisitive ethic".

Now how about that, coming from a national leader who rejoices in what he sees as a decline in materialism while gracefully accepting the proposition that his salary should be raised to $84,000.

But he goes on:

Grasping the torch of integrity, courage and compassion, he is able "to see beyond the shadows of the very real inequities and injustices that mar the world — to a more tolerant, more beautiful reality that it is granted us to create."

Then there was his New Year message with its theme of "sharing" and of the obligation "to share with each other".

It was the Christmas — New Year season, full of the spirit of sharing, when he wrote those words and spoke that message.

But it was still a difficult time for taxpayers to "search for that new consciousness" of which he spoke, and recognize the increasing "disenchantment," as he saw it, "with a purely materialistic acquisitive ethic".

The Prime Minister made it all the more difficult by devoting himself — in silent approval and acceptance — to the "beautiful reality" of that proposed salary increase of $84,000, while showing a considerable, if, as he said, outdated, attachment for the "materialistic acquisitive ethic".

The raise of $84,000 would work out to a mere 63 percent, and remained on that lofty plateau even after Government House Leader Mitchell Sharp lowered the altitude of other parliamentary pay increases.

The 63 percent was laid on the astonished taxpayers shortly after the second armoured Cadillac Fleetwood was added, at a matching $84,000 as a second car to the prime ministerial perks.

The first one cost $74,000 so the pair of "tanks" as the Prime Minister calls them, involve a total outlay from the public treasury of $158,000.

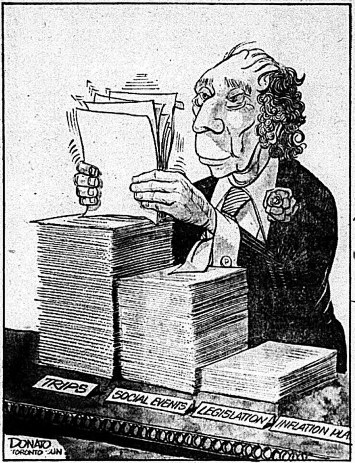
Then came the gift of the swimming pool.

Already there was the near $1-million cost of running the Prime Minister's office, the proliferation of highly-paid staff, known around Parliament Hill as the "Palace Guard", the refurnishing of the executive suites in a luxurious expensive style, the refurbishing of the official residence and the summer lodge running into six figures.

"My God," snorted former Conservative Prime Minister John Diefenbaker, contemplating the figures in horrified astonishment, "my wife Olive made the curtains for the lodge. We didn't think it was right to charge the taxpayers to decorate what essentially is a summer cottage if on a rather lavish scale, used for leisure and pleasure."

Dief occupied the residence and the lodge only two prime ministers ago, so can scarcely believe his eyes when he scans the figures.

But not to worry, for as Mr. Trudeau says, he is going to "listen to the Canadian people" . . . who may be trusted to peer through the "shadows of inequities and injustice" and observe how he is so roundly disavowing the "materialistic acquisitive ethic".



1975 AGENDA

Jack's Song Nails Inflation Bit

Tweed News

Any of our readers who saw Jack McCaughen of Stirling on the CBC Program, "Market Place," and heard his song, concerning the sad fact that there is too much month left after the money is gone, will recognize 1974, and its spiralling inflation-fed costs, an inflation that too many government leaders attempted to ignore, in the vain hope that it would go away. 1974 can best be remembered for the confusion and uncertainty that the inflation-fed recession caused politicians and economists alike.

Astute politicians decided to play down the inflation by saying that it was due to the state of the world economy, and as a result, was largely outside of domestic control.

Investment decisions made by business and management, in 1974, were made in the face of an unpredictable future. Labor and special interest groups are scrambling for protection and the devil take the hindmost. All in all, 1974 is going to go down in history as a rough year for collective bargaining in Canada, with settlements continuing to escalate costs, which in turn create inflationary pressures. Business in turn has attempted to protect its interests by pushing up prices in anticipation of some form of price control program. In spite of inflation and talk of recession, some corporation earnings are at a record high..

Small businessmen, on the other hand, have been hard hit by inflation, as have our older citizens and those living on fixed incomes. No longer can we think of the "poor" as persons on welfare, unemployment insurance, and those living on basic pensions on one kind and another.

In 1974, those working for future anti-poverty planning coined a new phrase "The Working Poor" and thereby recognized that there are as many working poor as there are welfare poor. Social planners have gone so far as to say that any Canadian family, with a total gross income earned by the husband, wife, and children living at home, of $10,000.00 or less, can be classed as working poor.

It may seem ridiculous to suggest that a family with united earnings of $10,000.00 have a poverty income. The Government of Ontario, however, has made its Ontario Home Renewal Program (OHRP) available to home owners whose adjusted annual family income is less than $12,500.

The Canadian Council on Social Development has suggested a poverty income as anything less than one-half of the average Canadian family income. In 1974 the average family income in Canada reached approximately $14,000 owing partly to working wives.

In view of these announced theories during 1974, it will become increasingly difficult to devise ways and means of guaranteeing the income of persons earning less than the minimum required to meet family needs. Clearly, small businessmen, who themselves have incomes of less than the absolute minimum necessary for a family's physical survival, cannot be expected to carry the burden of some form of redistribution of income.

UK Seeks a Synthetic Tobacco

BBC London Letter

Britain's Imperial Tobacco Company - one of the world's leading cigarette and tobacco firms - has received British Government approval to embark on public trials of a new synthetic tobacco, aimed at reducing the risk of cancer from smoking, it was reported on BBC World Service.

Five or six thousand people are trying out the new cigarettes which contain a proportion of synthetic material, perhaps up to half..

The new material has taken seven years to develop, and is called simply New Smoking Material or NSM for short. In tests on mice, tar from smoking NSM gives a risk of skin cancer only one twentieth, five per cent of the risk from tar from the same weight of tobacco.

But as Imperial say themselves, this may not convert directly to cancer-producing ability in human lungs.

Britain's Imperial C[illegible] Industries and Imperial Tobacco are partners in this v[illegible]. They are so sure of success for NSM that they are already building a 13 million [illegible] factory in Britain to produce the material. It is expected to [illegible] in full production in a couple of years.

They expect, if the tests go well, to have cigarettes containing NSM on general sale well within that time. They will also sell NSM to any other cigarette firm that wants to use it.

Is NSM really likely to succeed in reducing health danger due to tobacco smoke derivatives? Imperial is cautious, but hopes so. In answer to the point that nicotine gives satisfaction to smokers and people smoke to get their personal dose of nicotine, Imperial replies that satisfaction is not always directly tied to nicotine content, nor to strength of tobacco, or tar production.

What NSM will do, they say, is produce a cigarette containing between 10 and 50 per cent of material that is tasteless, and so won't affect the cigarette, and is vastly less likely to cause skin cancer in mice..

We shall only know what reduction in the risk of lung cancer in humans this mixture of tobacco and NSM may provide after up to forty year's smoking.

NSM is made from cellulose, extracted from wood pulp from Finland. The cellulose is processed to form a sheet material which looks like, cuts up like, and handles like tobacco and costs about the same. Whether cigarettes containing NSM will cost less than all-tobacco cigarettes will depend on tax arrangements in individual countries.

The trials starting now will first determine whether the public is likely to buy cigarettes containing a proportion of NSM at the same prices as all-tobacco cigarettes, and also how much NSM content is likely to be acceptable to smokers.

At this stage, the Government's Hunter Committee on Smoking and Health has given the go-ahead for the public trials, making the NSM the first substitute tobacco in the world to hove such approval.

Provincial Government Slow With Legislation On Sunday Opening

By DON O'HEARN

Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — Currently there is a good example of what has probably been the main weakness of government in Ontario for the past two decades.

Procrastination is perhaps not the precise word for it, but it is close.

Anyway, in the action, or lack of it, of the government on the Lord's Day Act the weakness is front and centre.

PUT OFF

For the past couple of years there has been a lot of controversy over the Lord's Day Act.

More and more stores began opening on Sunday and contravening the law.

Some people liked this. Others didn't. But in any event the opposition began pressing the government for not enforcing the law.

It eventually promised to do something, and a year ago it brought out a green paper outlining alternatives that might be taken.

Subsequently Solicitor-General George Kerr, the minister responsible, held public meetings throughout the province to sound out public feeling and reported he would have a government position ready by the fall.

But he didn't. Instead, he said the position would be put off until the resumed session in the winter.

This has been the story of PC government pretty well since 1948.

George Drew was a man of quick decision and quick action.

But since him our leaders have been slow and cautious. And this has been costly.

While Mr. Kerr and his colleagues are making up their minds still more stores are opening on Sundays.

Not corner stores, but big chain operations.

The public is getting used to them and the government may be in a position where even if it wants to close them down in the future it won't be able to because the public wouldn't stand for it.

And if they are allowed to open, then why not all business (furniture stores were open in Toronto on New Year's Day).

The delay has cost control.

As it did when Leslie Frost returned from the Coronation 20 years ago and said he was going to initiate a massive planning scheme and didn't. Which means that today we have regional governments, which practically nobody likes and which probably would not have been necessary if he had acted.

And as it did when it promised action on land from the 1950s on and really only acted last year after speculation had got completely out of bounds.

A cynic could say we have had 25 years of "put off" government.

Nova Scotia Acts On Vacationland

Peterborough Examiner

Nova Scotia has been getting a bad press in the United States in recent months because it dared to do something for it's own people which was frowned on by some Americans..

The Atlantic province has the same kind of problem facing Ontario - large slices of its best recreation lands are owned by U.S. citizens, who sometimes regard Canada as their own vacation preserve and the devil take the natives..

The Nova Scotian government has decided to expropriate 6,000 acres fronting on 11 miles of beach owned by Dorothy Kosling of Milan, Ohio, to ensure they will be available for public use forever.

When the Kosling family heard about it, they set up the loudest clamor ever heard in the U.S. about any action by the Nova Scotian government..

They managed to get space in several major U.S. newspapers and time on the television networks to lambast Nova Scotia as a banana republic seizing what rightfully belongs to Americans.

So far, it has done Nova Scotia no good at all to point out the Kosling expropriation is merely the latest in a series designed to expand facilities - and has nothing to do with nationalism or anti-Americanism. It is a battle between public ownership and private ownership, whatever the the nationality of the property owners..

Of the 5,392 miles of Nova Scotian shoreline privately-owned, only 480 miles are owned by non-residents. The province owns 600 miles..

Not all shoreline is equally good for recreation and it is likely that the quality of the Kosling property has a great deal to do with the degree of anguish expressed by the family.

"They are the most beautiful beaches in the world, and there's no place I haven't been," said Mrs. Kosling of her 11 miles of shimmering beaches and rugged woodland..

If they are that beautiful, the government is doing its people - and local and foreign vacationers - a large favor in making sure the property will be accessible to all, rather than the private preserve of one family or an investment to be developed privately.

The P.M. Speculates On His Future

Ottawa Journal

Prime Minister Trudeau will take intellectual stock of himself, he has told a television interviewer, and decide some four years hence whether to seek office once more. "If I find that I'm wasted and empty," he said, "I won't try again."

The following may seem churlish particularly at the beginning of a new year and with Mr. Trudeau on holiday. But the time for intellectual stock-taking is now. Since he won re-election last summer he has shown himself singularly bereft of new ideas, exciting or otherwise. There is no sign of any dynamism. He has set no discernible direction for the country or for his term. He has seemed curiously distracted, and purposeless beyond holding down his office.

A four-year drift until Mr. Trudeau decides whether he's "got it" any more would be disastrous. Mr. Trudeau should do his thinking down there on the beach in Jamaica - now.

Focus On Rental Accommodation

Editor
The Intelligencer:

The Citizens Bureau is having to deal with an increasing number of complaints from people living in rental accomodation. Usually the complaint is either the fact that the rent has been jacked up to an impossible level, or that the premises are in a state of disrepair which the landlord refuses to correct.

Many people do not seem to understand that there are no rent controls in the province of Ontario and therefore a landlord can raise the rent as often and by as much as he wishes unless a lease is in effect wherein the rent is clearly stipulated.

In the case of a landlord who refuses to repair the property after a reasonable lapse of time, a tenant may file for a court order enforcing him to do so. The court may or may not grant such an order but where the disrepair is such that health is affected, i.e. leaking roofs, broken floors, bare electrical wiring etc., there is usually no problem.

The Landlord Tenant act makes provision for the protection of the tenant should he avail himself of its articles in securing such things as needed repairs and he cannot suffer eviction because he did so.

No tenant can be evicted unless a court order is secured by the landlord. Lawyers letters advising tenants that they will be evicted are meaningless — only the courts have such authority.

Tenants who are served with eviction notices should be aware of the fact that they can file a dispute. In the Small Claims Court this has to be done within 10 days.

Our experience has been that many tenants are afraid of lawyers, courts and the legal process. Don't be. It is there for your protection and you should avail yourself of it. Do not lie down to bullying. Be fair, be patient, be understanding but be determined.

Allende's Sister May Be Freed

SANTIAGO (AP) — A sister of the late president Salvador Allende and other top-level political prisoners may be among the 200 leftists Chile's military government has offered to free, well-informed sources said Monday.

Diplomatic sources said the 200 prisoners, whom President Augusto Pinochet offered to fly to Mexico in a New Year's Day message, may be released this month.

Mexico severed diplomatic relations with Chile in November and the proposal was officially made Friday through the Venezuelan embassy.

Laws Tighter

EDMONTON (CP) — An external affairs department official said Monday that Canadian youths should be aware that Latin American countries, particularly Mexico, have tightened their drug laws.

"People go down there to obtain drugs because they think it is going to be easy, but it isn't," he said.

Bail Sought

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Supreme Court reserved judgment Monday on the application to release convicted murderer Peter Demeter on bail, pending his appeal.

Demeter's lawyer, Edward Greenspan, said Demeter is prepared to post $150,000 toward his own bail. Demeter's cousin, Steven, has agreed to post $50,000 and two friends have each offered $50,000.

Demeter will remain in a London, Ont., jail, pending the decision by Mr. Justice Arthur Jessup.

Opens School

HAMILTON, Ont. (CP) — Blair Lancaster, Miss Canada for 1974 has turned down a dozen job offers to return home to nearby Burlington and has gone into business for herself.

She has opened a finishing school and already has more than 30 persons interested in the course she is offering. She says the school is intended to help women of all ages improve their self-images.

Forget Regrets Publicity

MONTREAL (CP) — Claude Forget, Quebec social affairs minister, said in a radio interview Monday he regrets published reports accorded so much importance to methods used at the Notre Dame De Laval detention centre.

After studying a report prepared by a provincial committee, Mr. Forget said the practice of strapping young girls to their beds in solitary confinement had been used fewer than five times in the last year.

A five-member committee, appointed by the government, conducted a tour of the centre during the weekend following newspaper reports which said young girls in protective custody were handcuffed and kept in isolation for disobeying rules.

The minister said such practices were used only in extreme cases to prevent the girls from harming themselves or others.

No Free Paper

OTTAWA (CP) — The traditional free newspaper for economy passengers has been chopped by Air Canada in a cost-cutting drive.

An Air Canada spokesman said the airline expects to save about $500,000 a year by limiting free newspapers to first-class passengers.

The move took effect last Wednesday. The spokesman said it is intended as a temporary measure.

CP Appeals

OTTAWA (CP) — CP Rail has informed the Canadian transport commission that it is appealing a commission ruling granting only part of a rail freight rate increase sought by the major railways.

A commission spokesman said Monday the railway has asked for a Federal Court of Appeal hearing Friday on an application for permission to appeal the commission decision.

1,100 Cypriots Coming Here

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada could accept as many as 1,100 Cypriot immigrants in the aftermath of fighting on Cyprus last fall between Greek and Turkish forces, an immigration department official said Monday.

The federal government responded to appeals for help by sending a special immigration team to the Mediterranean island from Tel Aviv to speed up processing of applications from Cypriots fleeing the conflict.

The official said authorities have already granted 600 visas and are considering another 500. Most are from persons who have been nominated or sponsored by friends and relatives already living in Canada.

Earlier Pensions Sought by CLC

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Labor Congress will attempt to put pressure on the federal and provincial governments for changes to the Canada and Quebec pension plans to eventually provide a benefit of 75 per cent of wages at age 60.

The campaign is the second part of a drive by the 1.9-million-member congress for a revamping of the plan. It will begin in February.

In 1974, union locals were urged to study existing pension protection, propose improvements and rally public support for change.

In a letter sent Monday to local unions, labor councils and provincial labor federations, George Home, political education director, urges union members to endorse a resolution and send it to Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde.

The resolution calls for a continuation of increases to the Canada Pension Plan (CPP) and its Quebec equivalent beyond January, 1976, when the pension is to reach 25 per cent of maximum pensionable earnings.

The increases should continue at a rate of 2.5 per cent a year until it reaches a maximum of 75 per cent of earnings in 1996, the resolution says. The eligible age should also be reduced by one year beginning in 1977 until it reaches 60 in 1981.

The congress also wants one-third of the total contribution into the plan made from the government and the funds administered by a pension council which includes government, business, labor and farmer representatives.

Joe Morris, congress president, said in a news release Monday that many retired persons are living at a bare subsistence level.

The combined CPP retirement benefit and old-age security now is $242.56 a month.

King: Big Ego But Not Cracked

OTTAWA (CP) — The man who served as Mackenzie King's personal secretary during the Second World War says the former Liberal prime minister was hard-headed and snobbish at times "but he wasn't a crackpot."

"He had this idea, as all leaders do, that he was the smartest man around," Walter Turnbull said in an interview Monday.

"His ego was very big . . . but he was one of the sanest people I ever knew in my life."

Mr. Turnbull, who worked for William Lyon Mackenzie King from 1936 to 1945, said he disagreed with the decision to make public the former prime minister's personal diaries spanning the 13-year period up to 1944.

"I don't think it was very ethical," he said.

Immediate Pension May Not Be Best

OTTAWA (CP) — Eligible pensioners now can take Canada Pension Plan (CPP) retirement benefits before 70 without an earnings test but government officials are advising potential recipients to take a careful look before filing applications.

The elimination of the earnings test for pensioners 65 to 69 was effective Jan. 1 when amendments to the CPP came into effect.

Previously, if beneficiaries continued working, he tpensios were reduced if earnings were above a limit which varied from year to year.

But now the retirement pension will be paid to all eligible pensioners who apply whether or not they are working.

The option offered under the plan would allow potential applicants to defer the retirement pension. It also would allow continuation of contributions into the plan and the building up of larger benefits that would be paid later.

A spokesman for the welfare department said that in January the maximum retirement pension will be $122.50 a month; the maximum benefit next December will be $134.97 for persons who apply then.

The basic pension is rising every year and the benefits also are being increased by percentages equal to the consumer price index.

The reason for the increased basic pension lies in the formula for calculating annual employee - employer contributions into the plan and payments out.

The yearly maximum pensionable earnings will be $7,400 in 1975 and rise to $8,300 in 1976. In 1974, the maximum was $6,600.

With the increase in the pensionable earnings, the base upon which pensions are calculated is rising.

"That means persons making the maximum pensionable earnings will generate larger pensions," the spokesman said

But he added that applicants must make the choice of whether it is better to receive the pension now or hold off and increase the amount they will receive in future.

Beating Inmate Guard's Exercise

TORONTO (CP) — William Garfield Wallace, 26, a prisoner at Toronto jail, testified Monday he heard a guard who had just participated in the beating of prisoner James Frost tell witnesses to the incident, "that's my exercise for the week."

Wallace told the royal commission into allegations of guard brutality under Peel County Judge Barry Shapiro that he witnessed the beating by five or six guards from a hospital dormitory, alleged to have ocurred last May 25.

Wallace said he recalled the guard's number, but was unable to identify him positively by name.

Wallace said Frost, who was kicked in the face at least three times while lying on the ground, eventually dragged himself to his feet. Wallace said one of the guards walked across to the hospital dormitory door and rested his boot on the bottom bars.

"There were drops of blood on his toe caps," he said.

Wallace, who is in the jail awaiting trial next month, was the fourth witness to give testimony about the alleged beating of Frost.

Wallace first appeared Dec. 21, the day the commission adjourned its hearings for a holiday recess. Hearings resumed Monday

The royal commission was set up by the province following allegations in The Star by former guard Gary Dassy of a goon squad that he said terrorized prisoners at the jail.

Christopher Marshall, a prisoner at Kingston penitentiary from which he was brought to testify, said he saw 14 guards punch Frost as one guard held the prisoner by the hair.

"As each officer arrived he hit Frost," Marshall said.

Another guard, who arrived on the run, "didn't break his run at all," he added.

"He took a flying kick. It hit Frost in the face. His (Frost's) shouting stopped. He went limp . . . it was at this time he was carried away."

Marshall testified that the guard, Nello Welsh, said after kicking Frost in the face: "That was a good show. I really got him good."

CHRIS McCRUM WITH METRE STICK

Going Metric The Easy Way

Chris McCrum thinks people are making a lot of confusion for themselves over the coming metric system..

Mrs. McCrum, of the Singer Sewing Centre, has used both the metric and English systems and says that worry and anxiety over the country's switch by the 1980s is silly.

"People are afraid they can't convert," Mrs. McCrum says. "They're worried they'll buy the wrong amount of fabric. But all they need to know is that they need four meters or whatever. Just follow the pattern."

Sewing patterns have been one of the first places the average person cam into contact with the metric system of measuring.

Always printed in several languages, the tissue patterns carried measurements in centimeters as well as inches. These days however, it's the centimeters that are in big bold type with the English measurements taking second place.

The Singer store already sells measuring sticks with yards on one side and meters on the other.

Use whichever side you will, but forget about the comparison, Mrs. McCrum advises.

"What you have to overcome is thinking in terms of this many centimeters is this many inches. Just accept centimetres."

Tape measures sold in many places are also marked in centimetres.

With cooking as well as sewing, the best bet will be to forget the old system and use the new. In fact, there's no need to worry about converting recipes — just use your old measuring utensils and buy a new set for new recipes.

It will be of absolutely no use to you to know that a teaspoon of salt weighs six grams or that a tablespoon of baking soda weighs 12.2 grams compared with baking powder that weighs 12.7 grams.

What you'll be asked to use in a recipe will likely be a volume measurement just as teaspoons and cups are volume measurements. It's expected that small volumes of foods like salt, baking soda and baking powder will be measured in units of five millilitres.

Typical imported Swedish measuring spoons hold one millilitre, five millilitres, 15 millilitres and 50 and 100 millilitres. Larger measurements will be made in multipies of 250 millilitres with that measurement corresponding approximately to a cup measure.

Those kind of measuring utensils - one in fact shows both cups and millilitres - are already available at stores like Walker's Hardware. Isa Smith says the cups and gram scales are popular and people are beginning to enquire about thermometers with Celsius markings. Smith's Hardware sold out of thermometers with Celsius and Farenheit markings before Christmas.

Doug Rowe of Smith's says that while a few people are beginning to ask for metric utensils, the whole change will probably come slowly if only because metric measuring tools are not yet widely available.

The manufacturers have stocks of English unit products to sell before they'll start offering the other, he says.

Ann Landers

Catholics Still Debate Contraceptive Question

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell "Very Anonymous" that she is "Very Mistaken," along with other Catholics who believe it is a sin to use contraceptives.

I am a Catholic and several years ago, after having five children, my husband and I visited a cousin who had just gotten his master's degree from Boston College. He told us that using artificial birth control was not considered a sin—that non-use was a "suggestion," and not given by the Pope from the seat of infallibility. I was shocked to hear this and was sure he was wrong.

I then wrote to a priest who answered questions in a Catholic magazine. His reply came (along with a letter) saying "it is NOT a sin." He said the Church preferred that Catholics not interfere with birth, but that it was "a personal decision."

I've had doctors tell me that the rhythm system fails about 15 per cent of the time. For couples who feel their families are large enough, this system is not very safe. The woman has no peace of mind from one month to the next. It's a nerve-wracking way to live.

So please, Ann, print this letter and liberate a large number of women who don't know the facts. It could be a great service.—From Massachusetts

Dear Mass.: I consulted one of the most knowledgeable Jesuits in the country to get my answer. Rev. Richard McCormick, professor at the Kennedy Institute of Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., and former president of the Catholic Theological Society of America said: Your Boston cousin's statement is incorrect. Pope Paul's Encyclical on Humane Vitae, issued on July 29, 1968, authoritatively reasserted the traditional Catholic position on birth control, the basic concept being that the use of contraceptives is inherently evil and should be shunned.

"The reaction to the encyclical among Catholic theologians created a great deal of dissension. Many theologians and some bishops felt that Pope Paul had not faced up to the conflictive character of the values of married life, and that birth-control techniques should be left to the individual couples."

Father McCormick made it clear that abortions are not included among the "techniques."

In answer to your question, "Is it a sin?"—some priests and even some bishops who did not agree with Pope Paul's encyclical have given the green light to Catholic couples who ask that question. Many others take the traditional view. According to two recent studies, almost as many Catholics use contraceptives as those of other faiths.

Dear Ann Landers: I am kicking myself because I think I've been outfoxed. A woman I used to be friendly with telephoned last night to say she and her husband heard we are giving a party and their invitation must have been lost in the mail because so many of our mutual friends have received theirs. She added, "I know you wouldn't leave us out!"

I was so stunned, I replied, "Of course we sent you an invitation. I'm glad you called."

They were NOT on our list and now I'm annoyed with myself. On the other hand, Ann, what could I have said to her?—Two Too Many.

Dear T.: You could have said, "No, we didn't send you an invitation, but we hope to invite you another time."

The best way to protect yourself against people with chutzpah is to combat it with some of your own.

'Mock Wedding' Fun

Dear Doris: I must tell you that my daughter wrote to you for help in putting on The Mock Wedding for our 25th anniversary, 12 years ago. The people that were present said it was the best one they had ever seen put on.

We still have the toilet paper with the ceremony on it; it sure made for a lot of laughs..

Bye Now.

Dear Bye Now: The Mock Wedding is fun, isn't it? And you must have given your best imagination to it. What other unseemly props did you use?

Dear Doris: This message is for "Sensitive", whose children keep rubbing it in that she is not long for this world:

Don't feel too badly about your younger relatives. I think that we too were perhaps selfish and thoughtless when we had mothers. I know that I regret many of my thoughtless acts, when I could have been kinder.

You are not old! My father was 20 years older than you and died one day just after a cup of coffee. Go and buy a new dress, a new hat, a new coat, get your hair done, never mind the house, have some fun with any money that you have to spare.

It will give the thoughtless relatives a jolt Their remarks are greedy; just ignore them.

Another Older and Wiser One.

Dear Another: Couldn't agree more! It's dollars to doughnuts many another reader will rise in indignation and pen a few lines to me expressing themselves about this thoughtless family.

Just be watching for them - and thanks for writing in yourself..

Dear Doris: Thanks for the pamphlet, but it still does not seem to help. I only gained a pound. I still am concerned with taking "weight-on" pills; they are supposed to be guaranteed to work. But I can't get them in this little town.

I do not want to go to a doctor, as I get embarrassed quick. I feel so out of place with girls built bigger than me, and also with boys my age. How could I solve this problem and gain weight, not look like a scrawny board?

What would you consider my proper weight and measurements? I am 16, weigh 100 pounds, height five-foot-three.

Scrawny Board.

Dear Scrawny: Another 15 pounds would certainly help with the curves. But I don't recommend so-called guaranteed weight-on tablets. They might just have side effects; and this is no way to build up the right kind of eating habits.

Today's Child

By Helen Allen

JIMMY

Those curls are gold. His big eyes are blue and he has fair skin with rosy cheeks.

It's obvious that Jimmy, two-and-a-half, is handsome. It's also obvious that he has a handicap. You see his hearing aid and a little harness holding a compact package on his chest that contains batteries, amplifier and on-off switch. (an older person can have this attachment concealed under clothing).

Jimmy's hearing loss, caused by an injury at five months is described as moderate to severe. Otherwise his health is good.

He is learning to talk with the help of a weekly home visitor from the School for the Deaf. Even without words he uses his voice a good deal — squealing and laughing. He is responsive to smiles and picks up vibrations when some one bags or stamps on the floor.

Jimmy is cheerful, contented, active and adaptable. He likes company but can entertain himself. He is a good eater and he sleeps well.

It is thought the injury that caused his deafness also affected his learning ability. Jimmy is a slow learner and will need special education. It is hoped he will be adopted within reasonable distance of a school for deaf children.

Jimmy is a lovable, appealing child whose need for adoption is great. He needs special parents who will find joy in his winning personality and added joy in helping him surmount his handicap.

To inquire about adopting Jimmy please write to Today's Child, Ministry of Community and Social Services, Bo 888, Station K, Toronto M4P 2H2.

Ferguson — Phillips

Donna Marie, daughter of Dr. and Mrs Robert H Empson, Belleville and Garry Ronald, son of Mrs. Lucille Ferguson, Picton, exchanged wedding vows in a double ring ceremony in Bridge Street United Church Chapel, recently.

Reverand Ward officiated at the candle light ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father and mother, the bride wore a gown of organza in soft mint, with wedding band collar, empire waist and long full sleeves all accented with swiss lace. Her headpiece was a cascade of flowers and bows. She carried a bouquet of white shasta daisies.

Maid of honor was Lynda Wright, Picton, wearing a floor-length gown of Hunter's green velvet, featuring empire waist, a wedding band collar and short puff sleeves. She carried a cascade bouquet of baby yellow mums and white shasta daisies.

The bridegroom was attended by Doug Short, Picton, George Empson, Belleville, brother of the bride and Robert Ferguson, Toronto, brother of the grooom ushered the guests.

A reception was held following the wedding at the home of the brides' parents in Belleville.

Fur Jackets Back in Style

TORONTO (CP) - Now is the time to spend that Christmas gift money on a fur jacket during the January sales. With two months of cold weather ahead, a fur jacket is ideal for country weekend, ski holidays and everyday wear on city streets.

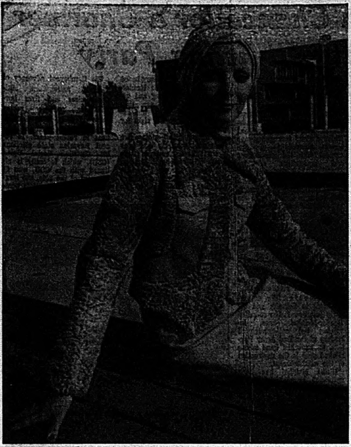
Fur jackets were out of style for a short time but are now back in fashion. The current focus on skirts and pants have sparked the latest craze.

There's lots of variety without using the fur of endangered species. Ranch mink, oppossum, badger and skunk are some of the more popular furs.

Badger is a long haired and bulky fur but modern techniques can feather it for a much lighter look by working the skins in strips.

Many casual fur jackets are trimmed with suede and some have leather side inserts. There's also interest in knit sleeves or waistband for a more sportive look.

Canadian furriers have a variety of styles from loose, multi-purpose jackets for gala evenings to neat cropped styles that fit snugly at the waist for walking or wearing at ski resorts.



Persian Lamb

Fur jackets were out of style for a short time but with the fashion focus on skirts and pants, the jacket has staged a comeback. A popular fur is the champagne Persian lamb jacket by Gilles Allard of Montreal.

Sporty Look

Canadian furriers are offering a variety of styles for men and women this year. A bleached raccoon coat, left, and a natural beaver coat are two examples. (CP Photo)

'Facts of Life' Study Proposed for Swedish Kids

STOCKHOLM (Reuter) — Conservative circles in Sweden have reacted with concern over proposals to start teaching Swedish children about sexual intercourse and other facts of life at age seven.

Under the new program, drawn up after a 10-year study by a special coomittee, boys and girls aged seven to 10 will also be taught basic facts about conception, birth control techniques and masturbation.

Successive courses up to the age of 19—possibly using films of actual intercourse in the later stages—would result in Swedish teen-agers becoming the worlds best-informed about sex.

The committee said boys and girls in Sweden are maturing increasingly early. Menstruation begins on average at 13 years, nine months, compared with 16 years, nine months, a century ago. Half of Swedish youngsters have their first sexual partners before 18.

Effective sex instruction must therefore begin sooner, the committee said. But its proposals are considered too radical by some sectors of the Swedish community.

Sex teachers, it is proposed, should not make ethical or moral judgments on subjects like premarital intercourse. One Christian critic said this would have a "catastrophic" effect.

Another major objection to the new proposals, said conservatives, is that they ride roughshod over the traditional susceptibilities of Roman Catholic and Moslem immigrant families from southern Europe and the Mediterranean.

The proposed new program is contained in an 800-page report from the committee, a non-parliamentary body set up by the ministry of education.

The proposed school schedule contains sections for children aged seven to 10, 10 to 13, 13-16 and 16-19.

After starting school at seven, the youngest children would begin learning about sex differences, birth control and the processes leading to conception and birth.

After 10, the children would learn more about venereal diseases. They would be taught what are called "elementary sexual ethics" followed in the 13-16 age group with a presentation of Christian viewpoints on marriage and the family.

This age group would also learn about "petting," prostitution and pornography.

The committee stressed that sex instruction should systematically counter the image of male-female relations portrayed in pornographic films and publications, while stressing the degradation of woman which pornography involves.

In the highest age group, from 16 to 19, the committee said: "Psychologically and artistically outstanding films containing scenes of sexual intercourse can be useful." The report has been praised by some writers as emphasizing that sex must be taught as "tenderness, love and understanding."

Church circles have entered reservations.

Bartil Hansson, chairman of the Combined Christian School Board, said he could not possibly approve of the proposal to show scenes of intercourse without knowing exactly what the commission had in mind.

A conservative newspaper, Svenska Dagbladet, questioned whether children from southern European Catholic and Islamic homes should be obliged to receive Swedish school sex education.

The committee argued it is better for immigrant children to have the same sex education as Swedes because the "culture collision" is already a fact which the schools cannot alter.

Svenska Dagbladet said the official body is taking the matter too lightly.

"It is hard enough for many immigrants to accept Swedish sexual attitudes without the schools putting the stamp of official approval on a lifestyle which they find deeply disturbing."

Moslem Miracle Doctors Promise Indian Women 'Painless Childbirth'

BOMBAY (CP) — Housewives, newly-wed women and even grandmothers in the south Indian state of Kerala are vigorously participating in a controversy over what newspapers describe as "painless childbirth."

Several women have said that Moslem doctors on the island of Lakshadeep off the Kerala coast have helped them to deliver their babies without labor pains.

"It took only 15 minutes," 26-year-old Vasuki Menon is quoted as saying. "Far from eperiencing any labor pain, I brought our third child into the world without being even aware of it."

Mrs. Menon said the doctor who handled her case was popularly known as Baba Sheikh which means a kind of doctor, holy man and teacher rolled into one.

Press reports in Kerala say that "at least 200" cases of painless childbirth have been recorded on the island. The doctors are escribed as experts in ancient Islamic medicine.

Every week dozens of pregnant women travel to the island to have their babies delivered with the help of the Moslem "miracle doctors."

Dr. Sankara Menon, a qualified gynecologist of Trivandrum, the Kerala capital, has warned expectant women to "beware of the propaganda about painless childbirth." He said cases of women experiencing few labor pains are not uncommon but that such cases occur among peasants accustomed to constant physical work.

Meanwhile, the influential Times of India has editorially supported the claim of painless childbirth.

The English-language paper said that "medical authorities have confirmed what they have suspected all along: That labor pains are a myth. . . . The pain link has been propagated as one of the human race's ancient myths, a universal malady based upon what is no less than a colossal mass hypnosis."

The Times said that the Lakshadeep doctors were only "dehypnotizing" pregnant women of their fear of labor pains.

Family planning officials of the Indian government expressed fear that if painless childbirth gets popular acceptance among women the result may be a baby boom.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch
Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Navy Base Will Soon Be Vacant

LONDON (AP) — Anyone want a naval base on Africa's southernmost tip where the Atlantic and Indian oceans meet?

It will be available soon, complete with the biggest drydock between Europe and Singapore and a fine communications system.

And cheap too, for Simonstown is a good, going concern.

Politically, though, the cost to a new tenant would be high because South Africa, which owns the place, is in bad repute with much of the rest of the world because of its strict race policies.

Britain's Labor government is phasing out its lease, which began in 1795.

In today's race-conscious world, with Britain trying to live down its imperial past, military co-operaion with the South Africans has become a headache. Each time British and South African warships exercise together a political storm breaks at home and protests pour in from abroad.

The British have made their intentions plain even though Prime Minister Harold Wilson's move to disengage has been hotly assailed by political foes. South Africans have suggested that both the United States and France would be ready to move into Simonstown.

But authorized American officials have spread word that President Ford's administration is not interested in taking over. So, too, has France, and no other allied power seems qualified to take on the commitment even if it wanted to.

Britain's readiness to let its 20-year defence pact with South Africa "wither on the vine," as Foreign Secretary James Callaghan put it recently, does not mean Simonstown's facilities are not valued by allied strategists.

Military planners within the North Atlantic Alliance (NATO) have recognized the importance of keeping the sea lanes around the Cape of Good Hope safe. Tens of thousands of merchantmen, allied warships and tankers carrying Persian Gulf oil to Europe pass around the cape.

NATO men have prepared emergency arrangements to keep open the sea lanes during crises even though cape waters lie well south of NATO's limits.

The reason for allied—and South African—concern is the ever-swelling Soviet naval presence in the Indian Ocean. Latest U.S. intelligence shows the Russians with 12 combat and 18 auxiliary vessels in the region. They are deployed mainly near the Persian Gulf.

With the reopening of the Suez Canal expected next spring, even more Soviet warships are likely to show up.

The Americans, in contrast, have one flagship and two destroyers in the area. From time to time task forces sail west from the Pacific and other groups probably will do so from the Mediterranean.

NATO powers have concluded it is simply not good politics to associate with South Africa, whose apartheid policies are assailed throughout the non-white world. Indeed only an American-British-French veto in the United Nations Security Council last fall saved South Africa from explulsion.

Callaghan recalled recently that when Britain and South Africa signed their naval defence pact in 1955 there were only five independent African states. Today there are 42. This, then, has transformed things.

American officials have insisted they neither encouraged nor discouraged the British to continue naval cooperation with South Africa. The Americans themselves stopped all that a decade ago. Like the British they observe a UN embargo on the sale of arms to South Africa.

The American officials said they are not worried about "losing" Simonstown.

In a big war the base and indeed all South African ports, would hardly be denied to South Africa's friends. In a big war, too, the action likely would be elsewhere.

U.S. authorities can count on other facilities in the Indian Ocean. Their warships can, for instance, resupply in Mombasa, Kenya. They hope to do so too in Lourenco Marques and Beira after Mozambique becomes independent sometime next year.

And finally they anticipate starting early 1975 with Britain in developing anchorage, storage, air staging and other facilities on the coral isle of Diego Garcia, part of the Chagos Peninsula.

Fur Trade Fort

Fort St. James, once the headquarters of a fur-trading empire in northern British Columbia, is being restored as part of a national historic park. Some of the original buildings will have to be rebuilt, others only partially and some will need a mere face-lift. The old fur warehouse (top photo) was built without nails and restoration crews studied the structure for three months before finding a way to lift it without collapsing the frame like a deck of cards. Lower photo shows the clerk's house which later became the first school in Fort St. James. (CP Photo)

Old Fur-trading Fort To Become Park Centre

FORT ST. JAMES, B.C (CP) — Once the headquarters of a fur-trading empire in northern British Columbia, the original structures of Fort St. James are being restored as part of a national historic park to be ready for visitors in about five years.

Some of the original buildings will have to be rebuilt, others only partially, and some will need a mere face-lift.

The largest and most impressive of the existing original buildings is the 1,800-square-foot fur warehouse standing at the head of what was once a tramway from the lakeshore.

It was built in 1888 and is one of the best examples of the traditional Hudson Bay Co. construction style called Red River Frame.

The task facing a 10-man restoration crew was to raise the huge log warehouse and replace rotting timbers with a cement footing to guarantee the building's continued existence.

It took three months and three days to prepare the warehouse for its new foundation—three months to study the best way of moving the structure, and three days to move it.

The warehouse was constructed without nails and was held together by a framework of vertical timbers which hold horizontal filler logs in place.

"We were afraid the whole thing would fall apart of it were raised in a traditional way," said crew foreman Steve Kueller.

Eventually it was raised last May by attaching steel brackets to the building and lifting it in a way which kept pressure on the entire structure and prevented it from falling apart like a card house.

The fort, founded in 1806 by trader and explorer Simon Fraser, was at its peak in the late 19th century as the centre of a fur-trading empire stretching from Bear Lake in the north to Fort George (now Prince George)

Ernie Robin, project manager of the restoration, said that when completed the reconstructed fort will be "as close as humanly possible to the appearance of this place in the 1890s."

The warehouse is one of the more interesting of the buildings being restored. Upstairs, its walls are covered with totals and notations left by fur traders from an era when paper was scarce.

The factor's house has been purchased for the restoration but until 1976 will remain occupied by a private party.

Copies will be made of other principal buildings which have disappeared, such as the old company store. Less important buildings, including an interpreter's house, forge workshop, stable and saloon must await government approval for reconstruction. The wooden compound which once surrounded the fort will also be reconstructed.

Work on the fort is being carried out with attention to historical detail and authenticity. "Cut nails" are being imported from a dealer in the United States who prepares them at great expense especially for such restoration projects.

"We would like to get the local Necoslie band Indians into the act too, manufacturing dugout canoes and smoking fish," says Mr. Robin. "After all, the Indians were the reason for Fort St. James existence. Without them to bring in the furs the Hudson Bay Co. would not be here."

When complete, the buildings will be furnished, and furs, blankets, dried fish and fur trade apparatus will be displayed to visitors conducted through the buildings by a guide.

Both the federal and provincial governments are joining in support of the project, although it will be known as a national historic site.

Mr. Robin's wife Orrice got the idea of restoring the site in 1961 and it gained provincial support in 1968.

The first visitors were conducted through the site by guides last summer More guides will be hired next year and a year-round historical exhibit has been opened by the national parks branch on the site.

As a tourist attraction and historical site, Fort St. James may be resurrected to the prominence it once held 90 years ago when furs were the chief business of the north and the town was capital of the fur trade.

German Chancellor a Charmer Born into Ill-fitting Party

BONN (CP) — "The trouble with poor Helmut," mused a bearded economics student, "is that really he should have been born a Christian Democrat."

Given the recent gradual swing to the right of West German politics, his assessment is one with which many Germans agree. For while Chancellor Helmut Schmidt is handsome, dynamic and personally popular, he has so far been unable to transfer his popularity to his troubled Social Democratic Party (SDP).

Some German commentators even suggest that because of what they consider his somewhat moderate views on social legislation and economic policy Schmidt might feel more at home in the left wing of the more conservative Christian Democratic Union (CDU).

Ironically, the CDU now is shopping around for just such a leader in the Schmidt mould for the next general election in which they confidently predict they will recapture the chancellorship.

But Schmidt is a Social Democrat and, as with voters everywhere, Germans tend to blame the government of the day for inflation and rising unemployment.

Then there is the recent tinge of political scandal and the spate of street demonstrations, rising crime statistics and even terrorist activity—a new feature of post-war German life.

Best Germans generally delight in Schmidt's performance on the international stage, flitting as he did recently to Washington, London, Paris and Brussels, displaying his blend of North German straight-talk and easy charm, when the situation demanded.

Still, the fact remains that he heads a coalition with a hair's-breadth majority in the Bundestag.

Although the general election isn't until 1976—a long time in politics—it is argued that there is no new economic miracle in Schmidt's future to bring inflation under rein and thus brighten his political chances.

Of immediate concern are the approaching elections in the important state of North Rhine-Westphalia where a widely predicted CDU gain would whittle Schmidt's slim power base. Life with his coalition partner, the small, liberal Free Democratic Party (FDP), already difficult, would become near intolerable, since the liberals are thorny on such issues as Schmidt's strong pro-Common Market stance.

Among supporters he has earned the nickname "Charles de Schmidt" for the manner in which he is increasingly dominating the community, although never to the extent of the late French president de Gaulle.

But despite his personal status, built since his predecessor Willy Brandt resigned under a cloud last spring, one hears mumblings of discontent with the government and accusations of "indiscipline, bickering and permissiveness.

The CDU, after five frustrating years in opposition to the left-of-centre Socialists, are finding their fortunes on the upswing. The German electorate, disenchanted over the economic situation and somewhat uncomfortable with the government's policy of accommodation with the Soviet Union, has been giving heavy support to the CDU in state and municipal elections.

Of particular embarrassment to Schmidt and his party just now is the so-called Baader-Meinhof case, involving the self-proclaimed leaders of the Red Army Faction, an anarchist band whose alleged goal is the destruction of the establishment.

Ulrike Meinhof has been sentenced to eight years in jail for conspiracy to murder and she and Andreas Baader and their followers are accused by police of murder, bank robberies and bombings. The day after one of the group, on a hunger strike, died in his cell, West Berlin's chief justice was murdered in what police call retaliation.

To outraged German public opinion, the government has waffled and mismanaged the whole affair in, for instance, permitting French philosopher Jean-Paul Sartre, amid great publicity, to visit Baader in prison.

As with the case of the relatively mild economic upheaval, it seems to some outsiders that the Germans are over-reacting to the Baader episode.

"But what you don't understand is that for 30 years the right has been telling the German people that the anarchist or the terrorist is just around the corner," said a widely-travelled, Hamburg-based journalist. "And then Baader-Meinhof comes along and everyone says, 'Ah, see, they were right all along,' and everyone moves to the right for protection."

In this political atmosphere it is not surprising that once again there emerges the name of Franz-Josef Strauss, 59, one of the most durable figures in German politics and long ambitious to be chancellor.

His flamboyant advocacy of German nationalism, anti-Communism and firm law-and-order suddenly seems more in tune with German public opinion than at any time in recent years. In recent Bavarian state elections his Christian Social Union (CSU), which federally is aligned with the CDU, won 62 per cent of the vote, the largest margin in Bavaria's post-war history.

Heads Coalition

Helmut Schmidt, chancellor of the Federal Republic of Germany, heads a coalition with a hair's breadth majority in the Bundestag. Although the general election isn't until 1976, it is argued that there is no new economic miracle in Schmidt's future to bring inflation under rein and brighten his political chances. (CP Photo)

Council Approves Minor Revisions in City's Official Plan

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

City council has approved Belleville's new official plan — again.

The move was the final sequel to a reaction last month in council against leaving a small residential sector of Hillcrest under a zoning freeze.

Ald. Joe Cox charged it was unfair to householders involved — at the north end of University Ave. — when council lifted a lengthy property development freeze on much of the rest of the neighborhood.

Council's move conformed to designations in the new official plan approved by bylaw in November.

Councillors worried that subsequent amendments could make provincial government authorities pause and delay official approval for the plan.

City manager Wilbur Purcell produced a solution: The plan and approving bylaw had not yet been forwarded the province. Council could repeal the original approval and pass a new ordinance, incorporating the Hillcrest amendment.

Council agreed. Monday night Mr. Purcell produced the painstakingly-prepared paperwork necessary to solve the Hillcrest situation — and more besides.

For good measure, he took the opportunity to include two other needed amendments: (1) Removal of an industrial zone designation on a jog of land required by the north-end Quinte Mall operation for part of its big commercial development plans — including a proposed hotel; (2) Rectifying a similar zoning restriction on the Wallbridge Cres. public works yards.

The result was an intricate interweaving of rescinding, amending and approving bylaws to produce the required results. All were quickly sanctioned by council.

Ministers To Discuss Quinte Priorities

Quinte-area and eastern Ontario residents and municipal officials will have an opportunity to meet and quiz nine Ontario cabinet ministers in mid-February, it was announced Wednesday.

The ministers will be available for two days of public meetings in the Park Room of the Four Seasons Hotel, Feb. 17 and 18.

Allan Grossman, provincial secretary for resources development, chairman of the policy field group, said the meetings will enable the people of the region "to bring us up to date on what they see as the priorities for the development of eastern Ontario's physical and natural resources".

"We are particularly interested in hearing from those who have something to tell us about such matters as transportation, labor, agriculture, energy, mining, conservation and the environment, tourism and industrial development," Mr. Grossman said.

Individuals, groups and organizations are requested to write to Hon. Allan Grossman, provincial secretary for Parliament Buildings, Queen's Park, Toronto, by Jan. 24 so that presentations can be scheduled and ministers can study briefs in advance.

With Mr. Grossman at the meeting will be William Stewart, minister of agriculture and food; Leo Bernier, natural resources Jack McNie, chairman of the Ontario manpower co-ordinating committee; Claude Bennett, industry and tourism; Darcy McKeough, energy; William Newman, environment; John Rhodes, transportation and communications; John MacBeth, labor.

Waste Study Criticized

Thurlow Township council Monday criticized Hastings County's waste management study claiming the report offered no new light on area waste disposal problems.

A year ago, Hasting County undertook the $20,000-study to the affected municipalities. Cost of the study was borne by Belleville, Trenton and Hasting County.

Reeve Horace Casey said during council session, "the report offers no alternatives in waste disposal from current procedures.

Council discussed the study in response to a letter sent by county clerk-treasurer Carl Bateman, calling for local comment.

Familiar Faces

Sidney Township Councillors Reg McCurdy, Ernie Kells and Hadley Richardson took their oaths of office Monday, officially beginning their two-year term. The entire township council and reeve were acclaimed in the Dec. 2 municipal election.

Former City Councillors Honored for Civic Service

Metal-on-wood plaques will remind two Bellevillians of the time they gave to civic service.

They are Dr. John Stock and Roger Porter, who did not seek re-election to city council.

The vacancies they left made room for the only newcomers elected to the 1975-76 city hall government — Wallace Dever and Brian Knudsen.

The plaques are a tradition of city hall inaugural and are presented to outgoing councillors in token of their service.

Dr. Stock, first elected in 1956 and who has served a total four years, won specific praise from Mayor Robin Jeffrey for his handling of planning issues. He was chairman of the city's subordinate advisory planning committee during the critical period which saw the city's first official plan drafted, argued and adopted.

Dr. Stock had guided "often difficult" issues in a "calm, decisive way," said the mayor.

Mr. Porter, a young businessman, had given "enthusiasm and youth" to council and encouraged a "constant effort," for downtown redevelopment said the mayor.

Mayor Jeffrey herself came in for praise from a veteran predecessor.

Frank Follwell, mayor 30 years ago, before becoming an MP for the old South Hastings riding, formally represented the former city hall government chiefs at the inaugural.

In times that now seem "a little bit distressing" the mayor is "prepared to remain calm, self-assured and provide the leadership that's necessary," said Mr. Follwell, first elected to three terms in 1945.

Escapes Injury

A Toronto truck dirver escaped injury early today when the tractor-trailer he was driving left Highway 401 and landed on its side on the shoulder of the road.

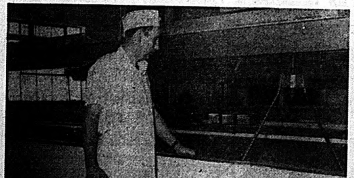
An Ontario Provincial Police spokesman said James Meatcaiic, was driving the tractor-trailer on Highway 401 near the Shannonville Gravel Rd. about 1:30 a.m. today when the mishap occurred.

Police said damage totalled $700.

Snowmobile Catches Fire

HALLOWELL — A Bloomfield area man escaped injury Monday night whtn the 1975 snowmobile he was riding burst into flames and burned.

David Leavitt, 30, of RR1, Bloomfield, was snowmobiling in a pasture in Hallowell Township when he smelled smoke and jumped from his machine. The vehicle burned, causing damage estimated at $1,500. Cause of the fire is undetermined.



More Cheese

Ted Foley, cheesemaker at the Foxboro Cheese Factory is now general manager of the operation under new owners, Cow and Gate (Canada) Ltd. Plans call for expansion of the plant's output from 1.25 million pounds of cheddar a year to nearly four million pounds by mid-1975. Two shifts will handle the increased load, increasing the staff from the present 15 to at least 35, said Mr. Foley.

Land-for-water Swap Approaches Final Stage

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Final negotiations in the water-for-land swap between Belleville and Thurlow Township are expected to take place this month it was learned Monday.

Since the summer both municipalities have been writing back and forth to arrange the terms of the deal which will solve major problems for both councils.

Thurlow Township has a concentrated population in the Cannifton Rd. area with more new subdivisions on the way but has no water or sewage system.

Belleville on the other hand has been faced with a rapidly diminishing supply of land as record municipal development strains at the city's boundaries.

In return for water and sewers that must cross Highway 401 and reach marginally into the township, Belleville will receive 800 acres of land bounding on the city's north east limits. This land according to Mayor Robin Jeffrey is earmarked for both industrial and residential use in equal portions.

Mayor Jeffrey said Monday she had seen Thurlow's response to the draft agreement for the swap and that before a joint meeting of councils is called, the township's comments would be discussed with Belleville's utilities commission.

While most of the agreement seemed to be satisfactory to the township, based on written comments, the township still wants to negotiate the consumer cost of water.

Mayor Jeffrey said township residents would end up paying 50 percent more than city residents for water, adding the commission has statistical justification for this difference.

Mayor Jeffrey said she considers the deal "a fair exchange," and that if it meets with approval, it will mark a major hurdle in the city's quest for growing room.

The mayor said the project will not affect Belleville consumers and that the cost of the program will be assumed by the provincial government and Thurlow Township.

From these discussions, the mayor said it is "a reasonable conclusion" to say that the city will commence similar talks with Sidney Township.

This type of co-operation was discussed by all three chief executives Monday as the three councils of Belleville, Sidney and Thurlow Townships were sworn in.

Reeves Horace Casey of Thurlow and Gord Wilman of Sidney each stressed the need for expanded co-operation with neighbors to gain services for township lands.

Windows Smashed

City police are investigating a break-in and an act of vandalism in the last two days.

Shortly after noon Monday, it was found the Oddfellows' Hall on Bay Dr. had been broken into. Police said entry was gained through removing a piece of plywood covering a window on the roof of the building.

Taken from the games room was a total of $17 in cash.

On Sunday morning, police investigated two windows broken at Tabernacle United Church on Church St. Police said the two second-floor windows were broken. Total value of the windows, which were not stained glass, was about $45, police said.

Contract Talks Begin

City hall is in the midst of its first labor contract bargaining of the year.

Negotiations involve Local 140 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees representing 42 clerical and technical workers inside city hall.

Its contract expired Dec. 31 To date, there have been three meeting between union and administration representatives, Peter Ouderkirk, Local 140 president said Monday.

The situation to date also was discussed in caucus by city council Monday.

But no details as yet have been released on the terms involved in the bargaining.

Mr. Ouderkirk, a public works department draftsman, said there is a mutual agreement between both sides to keep details confidential for the present.

The local has been bargaining agent for the inside workers since 1961.

Planning Top Priority Of Thurlow Councillors

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Planning is the first priority for Thurlow Township but considerable care will be required, said Reeve Horace Casey at council's inaugural meeting Monday.

In his opening comments to council, the reeve said "planning is not the easiest thing to accomplish and is sometimes difficult for residents to accept."

Reeve Casey has been an active member of the Quinte Planning Board for several years and has kept in close touch with area planning problems.

He told council work is proceeding on an official plan for the township and that he expects council and Thurlow residents will be meeting with consultants by the end of the year to discuss preliminary proposals.

"We want acceptance (in these meetings)" said the reeve. "We don't want a rebellion."

Anticipating the coming year, Reeve Casey said recreation will emerge as a major consideration. "There will be a lot of pressure for the council to provide recreational facilities," he said "If not on our own, we will be asked to work in conjunction with neighboring municipalities to provides playing fields and arena facilities."

Councillor George Beer suggested council sell some municipally-owned riverfront lots be said to raise funds for construction of a "universal facility" that would serve several needs. He made this comment briefly during his opening remarks.

Reeve Casey said the roads program is in "excellent shape and that the program has been very successful."

He urged council to consider holding one meeting a month in the evening to give township residents the opportunity of appearing in delegations. The reeve said some residents are having difficulty appearing during regular meeting which are held in the afternoons.

In the coming year, Reeve Casey suggested a local planning committee — similar to Belleville subordinate planning advisory committee — be established to work on the township's official plan. This committee would be composed of an equal number of councillors and residents.

Serving on council this term are Reeve Horace Casey, Deputy reeve Garnet Denyes and Councillors George Beer, Don McKown and new councillor Ken Yorke.

Pay Boost Sought

Sidney Township roads department workers asked council for a 25 percent, across-the-board pay increase Monday.

Average pay for the eight workers is $3.35 an hour and the increase would mean approximately 83 cents an hour.

In addition, workers asked for 100-percent township subsidy of hospital benefits and cost of living compensation paid in a bonus quarterly.

The matter was referred to a special meeting of council's wage committee.

Thurlow Considers Mobile Home Park

Thurlow Township Council will meet Jan. 14 to discuss a proposal for a mobile home park in the municipality.

Details of the proposed development were sketchy at council's regular meeting Monday.

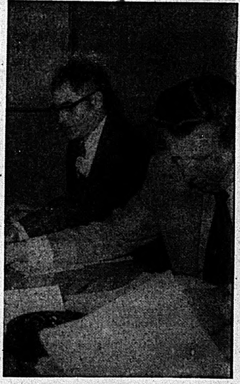
The development—if given council's approval — will locate on the township's fourth concession on the west side of the Moira River.

Township Reeve Horace Casey preferred not to commit himself on the topic of a mobile home park and said the Jan. 14 meeting is to hear the entire proposal.

Reeve Casey said council will be placing restrictions on the development if it goes ahead. "We'll tie everything right down," he said.

Councillor George Beer said, the mobile homes would be of a semi-permanent nature and that owners would lease the lots on a yearly basis.

The meeting will take place in the township offices beginning at 7:30 p.m.



It's Official

Ken Yorke and George Beer, along with the rest of Thurlow Township council, took the oath of office Monday making their election victories official as they took their council seats. Mr. Yorke (left) is the only new member on council.

Foxboro Cheese Factory Sold

New Owners Plan To Triple Production

By CASH MAHAFFY
Staff Reporter

Sale of the Foxboro Cheese Factory Ltd. to British-owned Cow and Gate (Canada) Ltd. that became final December 31, will mean an increase in production to 3½ times present output and at least 20 more jobs by mid-year, the new owners say.

Agreement to buy the Foxboro operation was first signed last June, said Cow and Gate's Canadian general manager, Richard Tudor Price, from his Brockville office. It became final with federal approval of sale of the cheese company to a foreign-owned firm.

Production expansion is dependent on anticipated approval of a federal-provincial agricultural assistance loan, Mr. Tudor Price said.

Cow and Gate (Canada) Ltd. is the Canadian arm of a world-wide company, Unigate Ltd., London, England, that specializes in milk and milk products. Although it is the largest cheese producer in the U.K., the Foxboro factory is it first Canadian cheese-producing operation.

The Canadian operation currently has processing plants in Brockville, Gananoque, Napanee and, now, Foxboro.

If all goes according to plan, the Foxboro plant will shut down for the month of April for the installation of seven 40,000-lb. vats to replace the present six 16,000-lb vats. Two shifts will be required to handle the increased milk load, meaning an increase in the workforce from the current 15 to at least 35, according to general manager Ted Foley. Production will rise from 1.25 million pounds of cheese a year to almost four million.

With the sale of the factory, founder Harold Elliott becomes a consultant on the operation and cheesemaker Ted Foley becomes general manager and retains a shareholding interest in the business.

Apart from expansion of capacity, no other major changes are planned for the Foxboro operation. Retail sales at the factory will continue.

Cow and Gate, with its large holding of milk quotas, can assure the factory an ample supply of milk to meet its expanded requirements. Whey disposal, often a crippling headache for cheese producers, will be no problem. Cow and Gate's Napanee whey processing plant will handle it all.

As before, the factory's only product will be Canadian cheddar cheese and the name will remain the Foxboro Cheese Factory.

Harold Elliott, who has been in the cheese business for 34 years, established the Foxboro factory in 1961. His cheesemaker, Ted Foley, has been in the business for 21 years.

Scouts Add to Stars' Woes

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A hard-fought National Hockey League game between two struggling teams was enlivened by a third-period scrap Monday night.

Kansas City Scouts, roused midway through the second period by Ed Gilbert's short-handed goal, defeated Minnesota North Stars 5-2 before a crowd of 9,047.

After the game, Charley Burns said he will continue as Minnesota' acting coach while Gordon scouts.

Burns' title remains assistant general manager.

The North Stars have not won a road game in their last 20 outings. The Scouts, who won five in their first 36 games, are enjoying a two-game winning streak.

Gilbert's second-period shot gave the Scouts a 2-0 lead and started a salvo of three goals in three minutes and 17 seconds. One of those was Robin Burns' second goal of the night and eighth of the season.

CHARLEY BURNS

Dennis O'Brien of the North Stars was ejected from the game in the third period after tangling with the Scouts' Norm Dube.

Dube had drawn a major penalty for fighting after O'Brien attempted to clear him from in front of the goal with 6:55 left. O'Brien, given a major penalty, drew a misconduct infraction when he was reluctant to let the matter drop.

With the two in their penalty boxes, referee Bruce Hood told O'Brien to move to the dressing room. Instead, O'Brien headed for Dube, which qualified him for a game misconduct.

Dube also drew a misconduct penalty.

Tonight Toronto Maple Leafs visit New York Islanders, Boston Bruins take on the Capitals in Washington, and St. Louis Blues are home to California Seals.

Three California Rookies Coming into Their Own

MONTREAL (CP) — Dave Hrechkosy, Larry Patey and Ron Huston still have not become household names in National Hockey League circles.

But the three rookies with California Seals are doing their best to change that situation as they have combined for exactly one-third of the club's goal output this season.

So far this season, the lowly Seals have scored 111 goals, with 37 of those coming from the three rookies. In addition, the trio's output has helped California overcome its deficit of other seasons on the road.

The Seals, in their 23 road games, have almost doubled their entire 1973-74 road point output. More precisely, the club in its last four road games equalled last season's total of four points garnered away from home.

While California's record still leaves much to be desired, when they pick up points they get most of them against the stronger clubs.

Their 10 victories—three short of their 1973-74 total—have been gained as follows: Philadelphia Flyers (2), Atlanta Flames (2), Washington Capitals (2), and Los Angeles Kings, Boston Bruins, Chicago Black Hawks and Minnesota North Stars.

Hrechkosy, who joined the Seals in their sixth game this season, has scored 13 goals and added eight assists in the club's last 18 games. His season goal total of 16 ties him with Rick Middleton of New York Rangers for the best goal output for a rookie, while Hrechkosy's 24 points put him in a tie with Eric Vail of Atlanta Flames and Bob Bourne of New York Islanders for fourth place among all rookies.

Dan Gare of Buffalo Sabres leads all rookies with 31 points, followed by Middleton and Pierre Larouche of Pittsburgh Penguins, each with 28.

Patey, who has 12 goals and 21 points, scored seven goals and added three assists in his last eight games. Before suffering a chest injury, Huston had nine goals and 14 assists for 23 points in 35 games.

Meanwhile, centre Phil Esposito of Boston continues to lead the scoring race with 77 points, including 38 goals in 38 games. Team-mate Bobby Orr is second with 74 points, including a league-leading 51 assists.

Right winger Guy Lafleur of Montreal Canadiens has moved into third place with 62 points, including 29 goals, the second-highest goal total in the NHL.

The Seals helped Los Angeles Kings maintain their lead in the Vezina Trophy race by beating Philadelphia 5-1 Sunday. That enabled Rogatien Vachon and Gary Edwards of the Kings to stay atop the goalie race with a combined goals-against total of 73, eight goals fewer than the runner-up flyers.

How's Your Hearing?

Montreal — A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest Beltone aid ever made will be given absolutely free to anyone requesting it.

This is not a real hearing aid, but it will show you how tiny hearing help can be. It's yours to keep, free. The actual aid weighs less than a third of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit. No wires lead from body to head.

These models are free, so write for yours now. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Dept. 9406, Beltone Electronics of Canada Ltd., 3637 Metropolitan Blvd., E., Montreal H12 2K2, P.Q.

Few New Twists Expected in CFL

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canadian football fans should learn today whether they're going to recognize the old game next season, and chances are, they will.

But if the Canadian Football League coaches and managers, meeting here, were to go for all the proposed rule changes, you'd find yourself howling "no metres", instead of "no yards"—unless the kick-return man had signalled for a fair catch.

But that shouldn't happen often, what with four downs instead of three in which to make 10 yards "or metres."

You would be seeing 11 men instead of 12 on the field—the best of a 33-man roster, increased from 32 by one Canadian.

And you would either be cheering wildly or groaning inwardly—or both—as a defensive player wiped out the three points by running back a successful field goal from the end zone.

These are only a few of 36 wide-ranging proposals for rule changes that were under study by the coaches Monday and to be taken up today by the CFL rules committee. Most of the proposed changes are not so drastic, however, dealing mostly with clarifiction of language already in the rule book.

Whatever the rules committee — under commissioner Jake Gaudaur—decides, will be set before the annual meeting in Toronto on Feb. 20 for ratification.

The CFL holds its coaches-managers meeting each year in conjunction with the American Football Coaches Association annual gathering.

WILL STAY FARM TEAM

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Springfield Kings will remain a farm team of the National Hockey League's Los Angeles Kings for the rest of the American Hockey League season, says the Springfield Daily News. The newspaper said owners of both teams will sign a pact to continue Los Angeles' financial support of Springfield until the fall. Last week, Jack Kent Cooke, owner of the Los Angeles club, threatened to withdraw his 15 players from Springfield because of its poor financial showing.

Eddie Shack

Stint in Minors

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (CP) — General manager Jim Gregory disclosed Monday night that veteran Eddie Shack of Toronto Maple Leafs is going to the minors for a few weeks of work.

Gregory said that Shack will report Friday to Oklahoma City of the Central Hockey League and will play with the team for a minimum of two weeks.

"Shack will get lots of playing time there," Gregory said.

The Leafs and team officials arrived here by plane from Toronto Monday night for tonight's game against New York Islanders.

Shack, 37, has been warming the bench most of the season, being used by coach Red Kelly for spot duty and on the ice more than two or three shifts a game.

Under National Hockey League rules, the veteran winger must return to the Leafs within two weeks. If he stays with the CHL club, he would have to be offered on waivers to other NHL teams.

Shack didn't dress for Saturday's 6-3 win over Chicago Black Hawks in Toronto and played only one shift against Detroit Red Wings in Sunday's 1-0 victory for Toronto.

Cincinnati's Relief Ace Goes Shopping for Raise

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds relief ace, Clay Carroll, has issued a warning to his boss, general manager Bob Howsam.

"I did some checking around with some other relief pitchers and found out I'm not getting paid what I should be," said Carroll in a telephone interview from his winter home in Bradenton, Fla.

Carroll is reported to be the highest-paid pitcher in Reds history with a $65,000 salary. Yet, his 12-5 record last season and an earned-run average of 2.14 have spurred his financial aspirations.

"You're darn right I'm going to ask for a raise," said the 33-year-old Alabaman, the oldest member of the Reds pitching staff. "I'm a good pitcher, and I think I should be paid for it."

CLAY CARROLL

Carroll's performance last season saved him from the trading block. He had gone into the season with an 8-8 record and an ERA of 3.68 after a three-year stretch of ERAs of 2.00, 2.49 and 2.25.

He has averaged 63 outings a year and appeared in 440 games in the last seven seasons.

Heading into his eighth season, he is hopeful the lucrative five-year package Jim (Catfish) Hunter signed with New York Yankees might open the door for more multi-year contracts in baseball.

"I think a guy who stays with a team and produces for them should be rewarded with more than a one-year contract. That's not very much security," he said.

Cunningham Sinks Buffalo Squad

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Buffalo Braves have another problem they don't need—a rejuvenated Billy Cunningham.

Cunningham scored 24 points Monday night to lead Philadelphia '76ers to a 101-95 triumph over the Braves.

The loss, Buffalo's fourth in six games, dropped the Braves one game behind first-place Boston in the Atlantic Division of the National Basketball Association.

"Cunningham has been playing exceptional basketball," said '76ers coach Gene Shue. "Lately he's been much stronger and has been rebounding very well and playing harder."

The Braves, meanwhile, still are without injured playmaker Ernie DiGregorio, and Gar Heard, their solid forward.

Out for Season

BERN (Reuter) — Roland Collombin, Switzerland's downhill ski star who broke a bone in his back in the first race of the season at Val d'Isere, France, will be unable to race again competitively this season, the Swiss Skiing Association said Monday. Collombin, 23, won last season's World Cup downhill series and was runner-up in the same discipline in the 1972 Olympic.

Bernier Two Off Pace

Quebec Ace Crowding Hull

LOS ANGELES (CP) — Winnipeg Jets' Bobby Hull continues to head the World Hockey Association scoring race, but he's getting some pressure from Quebec's Serge Bernier.

The Nordiques forward has been steadily making his way up the scoring ladder and his 58 points, 27 of them goals, leaves him just two back of the Golden Jet.

Hull, with 34 goals in 32 games, has played two fewer games than Bernier and five fewer than third place Larry Lund of Houston Aeros who has 23 goals and 55 points.

Bolstered Red Army Team Gets by Ottawa Club 7-5

OTTAWA (CP) — The Soviet Central Red Army, bolstered by 10 members of the Soviet national team which played Team Canada '72 and '74, edged Ottawa 67s of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A League 7-5 Monday before 9,500 fans.

Boris Mikhailov and Aleksandr Volchkov led the Soviet team to its sixth straight win with two goals each. Winger Valery Kharlamov, Sergei Glazov and Gennadi Tsygankov scored the other Soviet goals.

Scoring for Ottawa were Jim Roberts, with two, Dan Blair, Tom McDonell and Dale Ross.

The Soviets play their final game of the seven-game exhibition series tonight in Kitchener, Ont., against the Rangers of the junior OHA.

Ottawa opened scoring at 3:58 of the first period when Blair blasted a low blue-line slap shot into the left-hand corner, cleanly beating Soviet goalie Valdislav Tretiak. It was the first shot of the game for the 67s.

Thirty-one seconds later, Roberts scored his first goal when he rapped a rebound by team-mate Tim Young past Tretiak.

The 67s dominated play early in the opening period before the devastating pair of Mikhailov and Kharlamov—key players for the Soviets in both Team Canada series—set up picture play passing series' to beat Ottawa goalie Bob Daly.

Volchkov scored his first goal of the game late in the period to even the score 2-2, then scored a second goal in a short-handed effort early in the second period before McDonell and Ross scored for Ottawa

The Russians outshot Ottawa 13-12 in the first period before both teams changed goalies, with Nikolai Adonin relieving Tretiak and Jim Fraser taking over for Ottawa.

Late in the second period, Kharlamov scored his only goal of the game on a power-play to tie the game 4-4, but Ottawa battled back to take a 5-4 lead on a late goal by Roberts—his second of the night.

Ottawa outshot the Soviets 13-10 in the period.

The Soviets scored three unanswered goals in the second half of the third period as their superior conditioning took its toll on the young Ottawa club.

THE RAPCO FOAM
Home Insulation System
IT PAYS FOR ITSELF!

Rapco-Foam easily applied in the outside walls and roof of both new and old homes, literally wraps your house in a cocoon of warmth, and it cuts the amount of heating fuel required from 30 to 50%. (Without personal discomfort).

Rapco-Foam is a unique insulating foam developed in Germany. Skilled applicators inject it into the walls of your home where it flows into every nook and cranny — cracks never reached by ordinary insulation. Then it firms into a permanent barrier against cold, drafts, noise and vermin.

Once installed, Rapco-Foam pays for itself in four or five years and goes on paying fuel saving dividends of more than 30% of the original investment year after year.

No other home insulation offers all these advantages:

- Maximum fuel economy. Rapco-Foam's insulating value (K factor) is 8.2 at 70 degree F, the morst efficient available.
- Completely draft free. Spaces around doors, windows and pipes, seldom reached by ordinary insulation, are completely filled by Rapco-Foam.
- Easily installed. Skilled applicators inject Rapco-Foam into the walls of your home like shaving cream. It's usually done in a day from the outside. No fuss, no muss.
- Discourages vermin. Rapco-Foam's patented urea-formaldehyde formula destroys rodents and most insects.
- Reduces noise. Installed in your outside walls and roof, Rapco-Foam reduces street noise levels by more than 30%.
- Fire resistant. Rapco-Foam meets the strict New York City building code for non-combustibility.
- Non-Toxic. Rapco-Foam is non-toxic per the Federal Hazards Substance Act.
- Low cost. Compare the cost of Rapco-Foam with any other insulation.

A Link with the Past

The Bay of Quinte area had a three-way connection with the Western Canada All-stars in their quest for the championship in the International Junior Tournament which wound up Sunday in Winnipeg.

Two of the links are readily identified.

There was Jack Devine, CJBQ Radio sports director, taking his place in pre-game ceremonies. being interviewed between periods, and lending a hand in the presentation proceedings following the Soviet Union's 4-3 win. Along with a host of other activities, Jack is president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and it was in this capacity that he acted in Winnipeg.

And of course, there was the Golden Jet, Bobby Hull, supplying color commentary (as well as an excellent ad lib plug for Philco-Ford TV) during the play by play and in spaces between the hectic on-ice action.

But this district wasn't finished yet.

Some of us will be pardoned I'm sure if, at least for just this once, we rate the third some on a level with the other two illustrious members of the sporting fraternity.

The name Bridgman will be familiar to many readers of these pages.

Mel Bridgman, enjoying an excellent season with Victoria Cougars, was a member of the Canadian team in that entertaining International Junior Tournament.

But it's Dick Bridgman we're concerned about here.

It wasn't hard to become convinced that Mel must be Dick's son.

And just [illegible] picion, a check with Bob Sager of Trenton [illegible] doubt.

As a matter of fact, Sager is part of the story unfolding here.

He and Dick Bridgman were (and probably still are) great friends.

And the two had a lot in common.

When he wasn't making MacDonald's [illegible] Trenton the place to go when one was in the market for sports equipment, Bob Sager spent a lot of time with the youth of the town.

A familiar figure in the uniform of Trenton teams in softball and hockey leagues, Sager was also an accomplished tennis player. And it was his knowledge of tennis which he passed on to some of the youth of the town.

Bob Johnson, Cablevue Quinte Limited's man in Trenton, is another excellent hockey, softball and football player who starred with service teams and clubs in Trenton and Wellington, and became associated with Dick Bridgman in the process.

Dick was a member of the meteorology department at the then RCAF Station, Trenton in the 1950s.

He played some great goal for service and Trenton town teams in the old Trent Valley League when communities represented included Wellington, Brighton, Belleville (the Glen Royz), Marmora, Frankford, Point Anne, Trenton and the RCAF Flyers.

When he played goal, Dick wore a mask to protect an oft-flattened nose as I remember.

In that respect, Dick was ahead of his time. In those days, no goalie wore a mask. And today .....?

If he was an adept goalie, and he was, then he was even more at home on the baseball diamond.

A shortstop with Bata Shoemen of the Central Ontario Baseball League (COBL), Dick always fielded well and hit for a better than .300 average.

Those were the days when people like Mac Watson were tearing the cover off the baseball. Mac Carson was flirting with a .400-plus batting average. Ken Peacock was giving the batters the impression he could reach out and touch them from his firing position on the mound.

Kingston, Napanee, Brockville, Picton and Smiths Falls had COBL teams then. It was good baseball.

But I think it's fair to say Dick Bridgman is remembered in Trenton more for his contribution to minor baseball and hockey. Baseball in particular stands out in my mind because I was one of the beneficiaries.

And the guy did it on his own.

Some of the players who blossomed under Bridgman's tutelage went on to become stars in the Belleville and District Softball league (BDSL).

Bill Mitts (thanks to Bridgman he became a regular in the COBL at the age of 15), LeRoy Wannamaker, Doug Armstrong, Mel Kennedy, Roger Drake he's still playing), Jim Whyte (getting results as a minor league coach), Doug Alexander and others became competent performers in the BDSL.

In the days when Bridgman was a one-man minor baseball organization in Trenton, some familiar names were cavorting on the ball diamonds in Belleville.

Gerry Goyer, John Batchelor, Claude Carr, Wayne Bovay, Bert Faulkner, Don Lockyer, Ron Belnap, John Houston, Bill Dell, Bob Wallbridge, Bruce Page, Jim Delaney, Len Rumleski, Blake Moynes and others performed for Belleville teams sponsored by Royal Canadian Legion Branch 99, Sidney Inn and Canadian Tire in the 1950s.

DICK BRIDGMAN

Dell, a strong-armed right-hander, had the misfortune to lose a no-hitter to Mitts and Bridgman's Trenton Midgets way back then. Bridgman's squad won 1-0 on four third-inning walks.

If there is something else you should know about Dick Bridgman, it is this.

When Bobby Hull was proving himself as a teenage sensation in the Trent Valley Hockey League in the 50s, Bridgman was writing a "Sports Panorama" column for the Trenton Courier-Advocate.

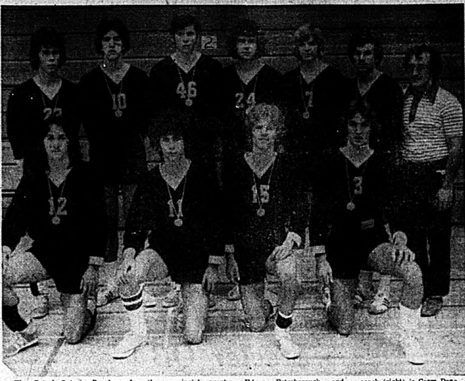
After watching Hull in action, Bridgeman reported in his column that the Point Anne product was destined for professional hockey.

When I last had a chance to chat with Dick in the spring of 1972 when he was down this way, he gave me the impression that some day in the not too distant future, a Bridgman may make it to the pro ranks.

If he was right about a fellow named Hull, let's hope he's as accurate in his modest assessment of his own son, Mel.

At any rate, it's been good to reminisce.

Thank you, Dick and Mel.



The Central Ontario Boys' Volleyball team took a silver medal at the Ontario Winter Games in Thunder Bay. Its members overcame geographic obstacles to be together weekends and practice for the provincial event. Members of the squad are: (left-to-right) back row — Russ Coens, from Madoc, Terry Kerstens, Pickering; Pat Fennell, Madoc; Russ Watson, Cloyne; Randy Edger, Peterborough, and Ed Vandegraft, Pickering; front row — Fred Stewart, Madoc; Matt Semel, Peterborough; Cory Kerstens, Pickering, and Jim Taylor, from Peterborough. The coach (right) is Carm Donato, head volleyball coach at Centre Hastings Secondary School, Madoc, and Ontario Volleyball Association representative for Region 4 (Central Ontario).

Locals Make Provincial Squads

Hayes, Fennell to Lethbridge

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

Most of the representatives from this area and the general region did well at the Winter Games in Thunder Bay.

The two most successful, from a local point of view, were the weightlifters and the Region 4 Boy's Volleyball team. The Central Ontario Badminton team also came through with a solid showing and the Girls' Volleyball team found its coach's predictions coming true.

The Boys' Volleyball squad, coached by Carm Donato of Madoc, placed second in the six team round-robin plyaoff. Not only did they take the silver medal, but there were three members of the team selected to the 10-man squad which will represent Ontario at the Canadian Winter Games in Lethbridge, Alberta, next month. Pat Fennell, of Madoc and Pickering's Terry and Cory Kersten (cousins) were the three selected to the all-Ontario team.

"I was proud of the way everyone played," said coach Donato. "But in the semi-final and final, it was Fennell who really came through. He destroyed the opposition."

The boys finished the opening round-robin with a 7-3 won-lost record. Remarkably enough, at the lunch break Friday morning, their record was 1-3. In the afternoon, they came back to win six consecutive contests. Scores were London-Guelph 9-15, 15-12; Toronto 10-15, 6-15; (afternoon) Ottawa Valley 15-8, 15-9; Thunder Bay 15-8, 15-7; Sudbury 15-7, 15-4 (Central Ontario scores first).

In the semi-finals, the Central Ontario squad came back against the London-Guelph region and knocked them out 13-15, 15-11, 15-7 in the best of three match.

In the final however, the Toronto region which finished with a 10-0 won-lost record in the round-robin, beat Central Ontario 10-15, 8-15 for the gold medal.

The boys from this region who made the Ontario squad will be practising each weekend for six consevutive weekends prior to the Winter Games.

Fennell, a 17-year-old, 6-foot-3 athlete, is expected to play a key part in the success of the provincial squad.

Ron Hayes, a 19-year-old member of the Apollo Weightlifting Club of Belleville was the only local lifter to be selected to the nine-man Ontario squad, heading for the Winter Games in Lethbridge.

RON HAYES

Hayes clean and jerked 290 pounds and snatched 209 for a silver medal in the 148-pound class.

Terry Murphy, also a local entrant, just missed a spot on the Ontario squad. He brought home a bronze medal for his showing in the 132 pound class.

Joel Carr-Braint, another Apollo lifter who qualified for the provincial games placed sixth in 165 pound class against 14 other competitors. Norm Walt, who was supposed to participate in the 148 pound class, hurt his back and was unable to compete.

The Central Ontario Badminton team, managed by Belleville's Richard Woodley, placed one player on the Ontario squad going to Lethbridge in February. Greg Hill, of Sydenham, took a silver in the men's singles and earned a spot on the provincial team.

Barb Carey, of Kingston, took a silver in the women's singles and she and Marita Gorney, also of Kingston, combined to earn a bronze in women's doubles.

Belleville Badminton Club players Judy Pultz and Judy Woodley and Trenton club member Barry Symons were unable to qualify for any of their respective finals.

"We got the rough end of the draw," said Woodley, "every match was a battle and local people had to face the toughest competition right off."

The Central Ontario girls' volleyball team finished sixth in the round-robin event at Thunder Bay. The team's coach, Barb Smith of Moira Secondary School, predicted that her squad's lack of practice time together would really hurt them. Unfortunately, the Belleville teacher was right.

Kinsmen Lose Three

In recent Ontario Minor Hockey Association Triple A action, Belleville Kinsmen Minor Bantams lost twice to Kingston and once to a Peterborough squad.

Peterborough topped the Kinsmen 13-3. Accounting for the Belleville team's goals were Gary Frederick, Danny Duffy and Gary McInroy.

In the home and home set with Kingston Kinsmen were turned back 5-1 and 7-2.

Jim Skinkle was the line Belleville marksman in the first match while Danny Vance and Pat Willman found the mark in the 7-2 setback.

ALI PLANS FIGHT

NEW YORK (AP) — Herbert Muhammad, manager of Muhammad Ali, said Monday the heavyweight champion would defend his title in late March against either Ron Lyle or Chuck Wepner.

Stanley Tops In Everything

Stanley Structures put a stranglehold on first place in the Gas House Hockey League Monday with an 11-5 shellacking of Belleville Generals. The win left both the Generals and Rollins Lumber seven points back of the high flying Structuremen. That is the widest gap Stanley's have been able to accumulate this season.

In other Gas House action Monday, Jim's Pizzeria climbed into fifth spot in the league standings after blanking Canadian Durabla 2-0 and Chuckwagon Foods defeated Belleville Yardmen 4-2.

Stanley's has not only compiled an incredible 14-1, won-lost record this season, but also has control of the league's leading scorers' statistics and has the number one netminder. Four of the top five scoring spots are held down by Stanley players and Vern Whalen is the stingiest in the goals against department, with a 1.07 average (excluding Monday's game).

Ray Summers, Stanley's speedy forward, is top pointgetter in the league with 37 points. His 21 goals is also the best in that category. Monday night he brought his points total to that level when he scored two and drew an assist. Team-mate Ron Fuller ranks third in the points race with 33. He is number one in assists with 21. In Monday's victory he had a goal and two helpers.

Other Stanley scorers in Monday's victory were Russ Harrington, Wayne Storms, Rob Harrington, Bob Mulvihill, Frank Wiles, Wayne Leveque, Mike Goegan and Wayne McGeachy

For the Generals, George Jacklin fired three goals and added an assist and Hyalie Bryant and Bill Minaker scored a goal each. Bryant also picked up an assist to bring his second place points total to 34.

Behind the shutout goaltending of Pete McQuaid, Jim's Pizzeria pulled into fifth place, one point ahead of idle Constellation Carpets and two up on Belleville Yardmen.

Fifth is as high as Jim's has gone in the standings this year. After getting off to a very slow start, losing six of their first seven games, the Pizzeria club is getting a few breaks and started winning some games.

Monday, Dan Brockhouse and Steve Lamorre each scored one to give Jim's the victory.

Belleville Yardmen missed their chance to move into a fifth place tie with Jim's when they dropped a tough 4-2 decision to Chuckwagon.

The win moved Chuckwagon to within two points of Rollins and the Generals, in second place.

Grant Sage was the winning margin as he potted a hat trick. Dave Middleton scored the fourth for Chuckwagon.

John Blair and Harold Inenburg replied for the Tardmen.

Gas House Hockey League action resumes Wednesday night when Rollins meets Constellation and Durabla plays the Yardmen.

Pittsburgh's Defence AFCs Best—Tarkenton

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Francis Asbury Tarkenton has the greatest respect for the Pittsburgh Steelers' defence, but that's not to say he's overawed by it.

When someone suggested Monday that the Steelers' defence is the toughest that he and the rest of the Minnesota Vikings have faced this season, Tarkenton brushed aside the idea.

"I have the greatest respect for the Los Angeles Rams' defence also," he said, referring to the team he beat in the National Football Conference playoffs, the game that put the Vikings in Sunday' National Football League Super Bowl championship.

"Pittsburgh has the best defence in the American Conference," the Vikings' quarterback continued, "and it's going to present its challenge for us, too.

"I don't think anybody's gonna run up and down the field at will on their defence or our defence. I think it's going to be a very disciplined game. I think it's the strongest defences we've ever had in a Super Bowl game."

The difference between the defence he will face Sunday and the one that helped Miami Dolphins beat the Vikings a year ago is that "Miami play that three-man line and they do it very effectively."

"Miami is not what you'd call a big, strong, physical defence. Our defence is a big, strong, physical defence and Pittsburgh's is very much like ours."

One thing seems certain. Both Tarkenton and Terry Bradshaw, his counterpart on the Steelers, will be doing some running up and down the field, but for different reasons.

"We don't have many designed play for me to run," Tarkenton said. "We may have one a game, but I don't call it every game."

"I might call five or six a whole season. But there are opportune times to do it and when we've done it, it's worked."

HAS SIZE

Clearly, the difference is that Bradshaw can be counted on to call his own number several times a game—and the reason for that, Tarkenton says, is obvious.

"Bradshaw's 220 pounds and he' 6-foot-3 and he runs a lot faster than me. That's the difference."

Another major difference between Tarkenton and Bradshaw is that Fran has been an unquestioned No. 1 quarterback throughout his 14-year career—two stints with Minnesota and one with New York Giants—while Terry has spent virtually all of his NFL seasons trying to gain that distinction.

He was relegated to the bench at the start of this season but regained his starting job half way through the season.

"I like playing football and I like being No. 1—and I can't stand staying on the bench," Bradshaw said. "Sitting on the bench is like driving a spike right down through me.

Wings Crush Reds

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — The Soviet Wings completed an eight-game tour of the United States on Monday with an 8-3 win over Providence Reds of the American Hockey League.

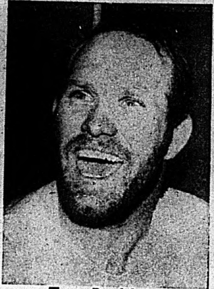
The Wings finished with a 5-3 record against AHL opposition, defeating Providence, Richmond, Syracuse, Baltimore and New Haven. The visitors lost to New Haven, Springfield and Hershey.

Pickens Dead at 60

MONTREAL (CP) — Funeral services will be held today for Hilles Pickens, a leading figure in Canadian amateur sport for more than 25 years.

Pickens died Saturday at the age of 60. Cause of his death was not disclosed.

He was president of the Canadian Badminton Association for seven years, honorary secretary of the Quebec Golf Association for 22 years and also an honorary director of the Canadian Professional Golfers Association.



Terry Bradshaw

It's Up to Me —Steeler QB

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Terry Bradshaw knows the success or failure of the Steelers will rest with him when he runs Pittsburgh's offence in Sunday's Super Bowl game against Minnesota Vikings.

It's a new feeling for him—one he enjoys Minnesota's Fran Tarkenton understands. He's been in that position for 14 years.

"Everything revolve around the quarterback," Bradshaw said Monday as both teams began preparing for the National Football League final. "If a quarterback has a good game, that can be the difference between winning and losing.

"Sure, the rest of the team is involved and they play a tremendous part. But it all comes down to the quarterback. I'm the leader. If I play good, we win. If I play bad, we lose."

For much of the season, Bradshaw wasn't playing at all. He was third string and on the bench for the first six games. That' a situation Tarkenton never has faced.

"I think the experience helps," said Tarkenton. "I think being able to call on 14 years of experience is an advantage for me in these types of games."

The turning point for Bradshaw came after the season's 12th game. He had sat out the first six while Joe Gilliam was at quarterback. Then after Bradshaw played three games, coach Chuck Noll switched to Terry Hanratty for one. Bradshaw played the next two but came up with a clinker, losing to Houston Oilers.

"It was after that game I felt terrible," Bradshaw said. "I figured I had blown the job again. But coach Noll called me into his office and said he was going to give me another shot."

That was four games ago, and the Steelers have had four straight victories. They won't get a fifth if Tarkenton has his way.

"We've worked hard to get here and we've played well," Tarkenton said. "We've done what we had to do to get here."

The Vikings, of course, have been to the Super Bowl before—with Tarkenton last year and with Joe Kapp in 1970. They lost both times.

McDOWELL RELEASED

NEW YORK (AP) — Sam McDowell, known as Sudden Sam because of his fastball during his peak years as a pitcher, was released Monday by New York Yankees. The 6-foot-5 left-hander joined the American League baseball team during the 1973 season. He was 5-8 with them that year and was 1-6 with a 4.69 earned-run average in 1974. He has led the American League in strikeouts five times and twice struck out more than 300 batter in a season.

Top Players in NFL

Writers Pick Stabler And Mean Joe Greene

NEW YORK (AP) — Oakland Raiders quarterback Ken Stabler and Mean Joe Greene, Pittsburgh Steelers defensive tackle, were named the National Football League's top players by The Associated Press today.

A nation-wide panel of sports writers and broadcasters chose Stabler the offensive player of the year, and gave defensive honors to Greene based on their performances during the 1974 NFL regular season.

Stabler, a left-hander, led the Raiders to the American Conference West Division championship. He passed for 2,469 yards and a league-leading 26 touchdowns, comple ting 57.4 per cent of his attempts.

It was Stabler's last-minute scoring pass that gave Oakland its first-round playoff victory and eliminated defending champion Miami Dolphins. A week later, the Raiders were knocked off by Greene and the Steelers in the American Conference championship game.

Greene, long the menace of opposing quarterbacks, threw passers for losses eight times during the regular season, leading the Steelers to a league high 52 sacks. He helped Pittsburgh compile the best defensive statistics in the AFC—a yield of only 219 yards a game.

His selection marked the second time Greene has been named the top defensive performer. He also was chosen by the AP panel in 1972.

Stabler was a heavy pick in the voting with 29 votes, easily beating Denver's Otis Armstrong, the NFL rushing champion, who had 14 votes, and running back Terry Metcalf of St. Louis Cardinals, who had 12. Last year's offensive player of the year was Buffalo's O. J. Simpson, who received just one vote this year.

Voting for defensive honors was much closer. Greene won it with 13 votes, barely topping Philadelphia linebacker Bill Bergy who had 11. Also making strong showings were linebacker Ted Hendricks of Green Bay with seven votes, tackle Alan Page of Minnesota and cornerback Emmitt Thomas of Kansas City with six each, and Greene's team-mate, L.C. Greenwood, with five. Miami safety Dick Anderson, last year's winner, had just one vote this season.

Judge on Side Of Oakland Star

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A judge has released National Football League quarterback Ken Stabler from his contract with Birmingham Americans of the World Football League.

Judge William C. Barber ruled Monday the Americans breached their contract with Stabler, starting quarterback for Oakland Raiders.

"So far as the force and effect of the subject contract is concerned, the plaintiff, Ken M. Stabler, is free from any obligation under any of the terms of this contract," Barber ruled.

Stabler was to receive $30,000 from the Americans in 1974. He and his lawyer argued that the team was in arrears in payment of the installment and thus had breached the contract.

Barber said he would not require that the $30,000 be paid by the World Football League champions.

Barber said Stabler's acceptance of a $30,000 note in lieu of actual cash payment did not constitute payment under the contract.

Stabler was to have joined the Americans in the 1976 season after playing out the option year of his contract with the Raiders.

NAMED MANAGER

NOTTINGHAM (Reuter) — Brian Clough, a controversial figure in British soccer, was appointed manager of second-division club Nottingham Forest Monday. The outspoken and abrasive Clough was dismissed by Leeds United in September after six stormy weeks with the league champions.

BIRTHS

MACKINNON — Mr. and Mrs. Michael Mackinnon (nee Sharlene Hughes) are happy to announce the birth of their daughter Shannon Elizabeth, December 24, 1974, at Riverside Hospital, Ottawa. Weight 8 lbs., 12 ozs.

SMITH: Barry and Linda (nee Scholte), are proud to announce the birth of their son Jason Andrew, on Saturday, January 4, 1973 at the Belleville General Hospital. Weighing 8 lbs., 13 ozs. A brother for Shannon. Many thanks to Dr. Allore and nurses of the fifth floor.

THORNE — Peter and Maureen thank God for the safe arrival of their daughter Michelle Paulin, 6 lbs., 6¼ ozs. on Saturday, January 4, 1975. A first granddaughter for Mr. and Mrs. Jack Thorne, Belleville and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Richardson, Scarborough.

IN MEMORIAM

KELLEHER — In loving memory of a dear daughter Theresa who passed away Jan. 7, 1969.

No stain was on her little heart,
Sin had not entered there,
And innocence slept sweetly on,
That pale white brow so fair.
She was too pure for this cold earth,
Too beautiful to stay,
And so God's holy angel bore,
Our darling one away.

—Always remembered by Mommy and Daddy and Cathy, Linda, Joey, Mike, Lyle and Frank.

FULFORD — In loving memory of a dear husband Norman who passed away January 5th, 1972.

Since you've gone first and I remain,
One thing I'd have you do,
Walk slowly down the path of death,
For soon I'll follow you.
I want to know each step you take,
That I may walk the same.
For some day down that lonely road,
You'll here me call your name.

—Lovingly remembered by wife Loretta.

HARNDEN — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Kenneth L., who passed away January 7, 1972.

—Dearly loved and sadly missed by wife Joanna and family, Ken Jr., Francis and April.

FULFORD — In loving memory of a dear father Norman who passed away January 5th, 1972.

Remembrance is a golden chain,
Death tries to break but all in vain,
To have, to love, and then to part,
Is the greatest sorrow of one's heart,
The years may wipe out many things,
But this they wipe out never,
The memory of those happy days,
When we were all together.

—Sadly missed by son Mel, Shirley and family.

SHATRAW — In loving memory of a dear husband and father who passed away January 7, 1967.

The blow was great, the shock severe,
We little thought his death so near,
Only those who have lost can tell,
The sorrow of parting without farewell.

—Ever remembered, sadly missed by wife Leila, daughter Sharon and son-in-law Bill.

SINE — In loving memory of a dear mother, grandmother and great grandmother, Jennie May Sine, who passed away Jan. 7, 1973.

You were so patient, made no fuss,
You tried so hard to stay with us,
Without no word or warning came the call,
Without goodbye, you left us all.

—Lovingly remembered by daughter Mildred, son-in-law Tom, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

AN AWARD WINNER SUBURBAN SETTING

If one feature stands out above all the others in this house, it is the unusually large dining room. It will accommodate the larger family quite nicely. The kitchen is designed to make work enjoyable. The master bedroom is of a size to handle the larger mediterranean suites. A fireplace is already finished in the basement so when you finish your rec room you will have indeed a warm and welcoming informal area in which to entertain. There is a single garage attached. This house only five minutes from town.

EAST END READY TO GO

We have two homes ready for possession in Stanley Park. One of the most attractive things about each of these is the 10% mortgage. One house is a large high ranch bungalow with built-in garage. You can't find a better plan if you want a future rec room. Kitchen is above average in size. Large L shape living dining room. Faces south. The other house is a long low split ETAOIN SHR SH SR HSH has three bedrooms and attractive kitchen and L shape living dining room. Faces north.

Gascon Brings Stratford Flair To National Arts Centre Job

OTTAWA (CP) — After six years as artistic director of the Stratford Shakespearean Festival, Jean Gascon is bringing a bit of the Stratford flair to his first directing assignment at the National Arts Centre.

With a cast of 45, the largest ever used in the centre's theatre for one of its own productions, Gascon is working on a stage thrusting into the audience, and has hired English-and French-speaking actors for John Coulter's 1950 play, Riel. It opens Jan. 13.

Albert Millaire, one of Montreal's best-known actors in both English and French theatre, plays the Metis leader, and Edward Atienza, who last summer had the title role in Stratford's King John, is Col. Garnet Wolseley, leader of the expedition sent west in 1869 to put down the Red River rebellion.

Sandy Webster, a performer for 25 years in radio, television and on stage, plays Sir John A. Macdonald and Marcel Girard plays J. A. Chapleau, Macdonald's cabinet minister who agrees with him that Riel should be hanged.

"Throughout the play, we have cast all the Metis and the English parts with English-Canadians," Gascon said during a rehearsal break.

"It brings a flavor and sense of reality to the play. In moments where there are no English characters on stage—in intimate little scenes with Riel and his Metis friends—we go to French. There are some private moments with only Riel, saying his prayers in French.

"But when the English, Scots or Irish settlers come on, or when English officials are present, we switch to English. In the trial scene, one witness can hardly speak English at all, so we bring on an interpreter.

"That's the way it was in the west at that time. There is not much French, because most of the time there are English - speaking people around."

Gascon believes it is the first time the two languages are used freely on stage, and said such a bilingual production could only be done in a city as bilingual as Ottawa.

But the idea is not entirely new. The Welsh National Theatre has played bilingually in Welsh and English for years.

When he left Stratford after directing the operetta, Life in Paris, at Avon Theatre last summer, Gascon was planning a year off. He had just won $50,000 award from the Royal Bank of Canada.

But he was ill for six weeks with phlebitis and after this production he will direct and play the lead in a French version of Eugene O'Neill's A Long Day's Journey Into Night at the Theatre du Nouveau Monde in Montreal.

"I'm dying to go back to acting, because I haven't acted for several years."

After that, he said, he hopes to go to Europe for a few months "to recycle myself, as they say"—seeing the latest theatre developments in Czechoslovakia, Romania and Poland, as well as in England and France.

"I need to do that, and I hardly had the time when I was at Stratford because the operation there kept getting bigger and bigger".

Gascon created a stir at Stratford years ago when he first hired Quebec actors to play, in English, the parts of French nobility in Shakespeare's plays. He said this fully-integrated production of Riel is exciting, with good collaboration among the actors.

"It could only be done in a city like Ottawa. The play is so relevant to the problems of Ottawa and of our times."

Riel was first produced almost 25 years ago by New Play Society in Toronto, directed by Dora Mavor Moore. While it is well known in drama literature this is to be its first fully professional production.

Some revisions have been made in the original script by Jeremy Gibson, in collaboration with Coulter, who now is 86.

Robert Prevost designed the sets and lighting, and Francois Barbeau the costumes. Composer Gabriel Charpentier wrote special mood music.

This brought together a historic team in Quebec theatre for the arts centre's English theatre department. Gascon has worked with Prevost for more than 20 years and almost as long with Charpentier.

Showbiz Briefs

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Former Beatle John Lennon on Friday won the right to cross examine government witnesses, possibly including two former attorneys-general, as he continues his fight to remain in the United States.

Federal Judge Richard Owen granted Lennon the right to ask questions of government witnesses in his effort to prove that the decision to deport him was pre-judged by immigration officials.

He claims that a conspiracy was entered into to pre-judge his case and deny him rights guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution.

The entertainer's list of prospective witnesses includes former attorneys-general John Mitchell and Richard Kleindienst, both of whom have been convicted of Watergate-related crimes.

Judge Owen scheduled a hearing Jan. 17 for a discussion on how witnesses will be dealt with.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A Roman Catholic priest said sadly Friday that onetime movie star Betty Hutton won't be going back to work as cook-housekeeper at St. Anthony's Rectory in Portsmouth, R.I.

"She's not coming back to the rectory. It didn't work out," Rev. Father Peter Maguire said in a telephone interview.

"She's only 53. She's still young. She's not ready to retire. She'd like to get back into show business and get started again.' "

Miss Hutton's whereabouts were not known Friday. Father Maguire said he promised not to say where she is.

Betty, often called the Blonde Bombshell in her days of glory during the 40s and 50s, took the rectory job when she was down on her luck and then converted to Catholicism last February.

Last June 24, friends and admirers here tossed a big "love-in" for her at the Riverboat Restaurant in the Empire State Building in New York City.

Friends agreed that this rekindled the old theatrical flame and said Betty never again had been the same.

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Australian singer Lana Cantrell, who in her performances tells women to get out of the kitchen and into the streets, was given a feminist award here Friday.

The Feminist party, a small women's liberational group in New York, honored the singer at the Australian consulate fo giving "women of four continents a superb role model for woman as winner."

Ms. Cantrell said in an interview after the ceremony that she had kept her feminism quiet for a long time because she was not sure what it would do to her career.

But in her act, she now tells women to go into the streets "where you belong, to protest and march and organize."

She also said she asks the audiences whether they believe in equal pay and men usually boo. She then points to her conductor and agrees that he should not be paid as much as she is.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Elvis Presley will be 40 years old Wednesday and his home town will help him celebrate.

Tina Marsh, a songwriter who organized a birthday parade for Presley last year, is asking Memphis residents to shower the entertainer with birthday cards.

"I got permission to put a big box on the gates at Graceland (Presley's Memphis mansion) to hold the cards and I just hope people will stop by Elvis's house and put a birthday card in the box sometime Wednesday to let him know we're thinking about him and wishing him a happy birthday," she said.

Mrs. Marsh said Memphis International Airport will put a 'Happy Birthday, Elvis' greeting on its marquee and will announce over the loudspeaker every hour that Wednesday is Presley's birthday.

One local radio station is giving away one birthday cake every hour Wednesday, and several department stores have indicated they will put Presley's picture in a window display as they did last year.

HOLLYWOOD (Reuter) — Comedian Bob Hope will return as master of ceremonies at the Academy Award presentations next April, it was announced Monday.

Hope had been the Academy's main commentator for 14 years until it was decided in 1971 to break the award ceremony up into sections and use a number of masters of ceremonies.

This year he will be appearing with three other MCs whose names have not yet been announced by the motion picture academy.

LONDON (Reuter) — The Royal Shakespeare Theatre inaugurated its centenary year Monday by launching a worldwide appeal for $2.3 million to ensure the future of its home at Stratford-Upon-Avon.

Sir George Farmer, chairman of the executive of the governors, told a news conference reserves for the upkeep of the Stratford playhouse were exhausted.

BOSTON (AP) — A televised "drama for public education," recreating the recently completed Watergate cover-up trial, is planned by a co-producer of the TV special The White House Transcripts.

Thomas McCann, head of a public relations and documentary film company in Boston, said the two-hour show will be entitled The Watergate Cover-Up Trial. It will use actors and official court stenographers' transcripts and McCann hopes to have it ready soon after the court releases tape recordings made by former president Nixon.

The White House Transcripts, a 90-minute show which was sold to the CBC, has been shown in Canada, Boston, New York and Denver.

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — Two comedian friends of Jack Benny announced on Friday plans to found a Jack Benny Memorial Forest in Israel on the outskirts of Jerusalem.

The two entertainers, George Burns and George Jessel, said friends of Benny's from all walks of life will donate trees "so that the name of one of America's greatest sons—Jack Benny—will live forever in Israel."

Benny died here last week of stomach cancer at 80. He was buried in a Jewish cemetery in western Los Angeles.

Farm Show A Classic In 2 Years

OTTAWA (CP) — The Farm Show, by Theatre Passe Muraille of Toronto—only 2½ years old but already a classic in Canadian theatre—is the next entry in the CBC-TV Sunday night drama series, Performance.

It's a show to bring chuckles and a tinge of sadness to those who knew the southwestern Ontario farming communities of a generation ago, where the Loyal Orange Lodge made sure God was a Protestant and life was earnest if not comfortable.

Artistic director Paul Thompson produced The Farm Show in 1972 after he and his company moved to Clinton, Ont., 45 miles north of London, to live among farm folk and learn their ways and problems at first hand.

First produced in a barn, the show drew such farm audience plaudits that it was set for a long-run tour and acceptance in Toronto's "Off-Yonge" theatre.

Taped a a live performance, an hour-long selection of the skits making up the show will be broadcast on the English network Sunday, Jan. 12.

tThe best vignettes show David Fox as an articulate and crusty farmer fighting low prices, high costs and government incursions into agriculture.

"Crop insurance? Why that would take all the challenge out of farming. The farmer lives poor and dies rich."

The Farm Show

First staged in a barn in Western Ontario by Toronto's Theatre Passe Muraille, The Farm Show comes to CBC-TV in the Performance series, Sunday, Jan. 12, at 9 p.m. Created out of the theatre company's own experience, living and working on farms in the Clinton area two summers ago, The Farm Show reflects life in an Ontario farming community today, and the actors portray real people, as well as farm machinery and livestock. Group at left: David Fox and Anne Anglin (standing) Carol Galloway and Janet Amos (front), Miles Potter right).

London Has Lost Money Magic

LONDON (CP) — The bouncy young man in his trendy velvet jacket, platform shoes and tinted glasses was clearly out of place among the line of commuters standing patiently in cavernous Waterloo Station.

He whispered to another obvious misfit in the crowd: "Hey, are these guys for real? I mean, really?"

Those guys, nearly identical in dark pinstripe suits or morning coats, many carrying carefully-rolled umbrellas and wearing bowler hats, with The Daily Telegraph or The Financial Times tucked primly under their arms, were indeed for real.

They represented a solid cross-section of the people who hold Britain's purse strings and as they waited for the subway that whisks them under the Thames and up to their offices in London's financial centre, they looked anything but cheery. All of them belonged to a major stock broking and banking firm and that day were on their way to a meeting at the Bank of England to review the dismal economic outlook for the next year.

Most of them live in the well-to-do commuter belts around London.

But their lines are thinner now than they used to be. Times are bad for everyone they tell you—worse than most can remember—and traditional brokerage houses and finance companies are falling like flies.

The banks, too, are facing a growing threat that Arab oil money, the basis of most of their loans, may suddenly be withdrawn and switched to other countries.

Somehow, the famed streets and alleys of the City, as the financial heart of London is known, have lost some of their magic. Names like Threadneedle Street, Cornhill, Russia Street and Milk Street, which once evoked visions of financial genius don't seem as formidable anymore.

Says John Boulding, a senior partner in one of the country's oldest brokerage offices: "In the past we could always say there'll be a brighter day tomorrow. Now we see nothing but darkness."

His immediate concern is the breathtaking plunge of the stock market during the last year and a glance at the relevant statistics gives full support to his dismal sentiment.

Near the end of 1974, for example, the Financial Times index of leading industrial shares, based on a figure of 100 for 1935, was hovering around 150.

In numerical years, that was the lowest since 1954 and dramatically below the levels of roughly 550 reached in the early 1970s. But if you consider the five-fold increase in the over-all price level since 1935, then current share prices indicate people believe British industry now to be worth far less than it was 39 years ago.

Falling share prices have been a common phenomenon in most Western markets during the last couple of years but Britain holds the dubious distinction of having the fastest and most severe drop of all.

What has gone wrong?

Part of the explanation lies in the general lack of confidence among investors because so many firms whose stocks are traded are threatened by the recession gripping the industrial world. A mind-twisting balance-of-payments deficit of $10 billion a year and the threat of a sudden withdrawal of Arab oil money from London banks have also played a part.

Whether a doomsday drama is played out in full remains in question, although it still seems doubtful since modern states just don't go bankrupt.

But more and more economists and research bodies are finally beginning to look beyond the immediate statistics for the deeper, ingrained causes of this and innumerable other British economic crises.

Three Shutouts In Novice Play

Three shutouts were recorded in Belleville Minor Hockey Association Novice House League action, Saturday.

Doug Bunnett closed the door on Uniroyal in Whitley Rentals' 3-0 win Gordie Cooke blanked Credit Union as Beaver Lumber skated to a 4-0 victory and Terry Miller kept Police Association shooters at bay while Signs Unlimited got three goals from Steve Taylor in a 3-0 win.

In other league play, Dixie Lee topped Stephen Licence 7-5. Brian Clarey notched three goals and helped himself to a pair of assists for the winfor the losers.

Tim Murphy and Todd Woodward each collected a brace of goals in Local 1000's 6-2 defeat of Manpower and Duby Brothers played to a 5-5 draw with Kings on a pair of goals by Jeff Birch and singles from Brian Lasher and Bobby Brand.

Ajustment Difficult After Years in Jungle

TOKYO (AP) — A former intelligence officer in the Japanese army who hid out in a Philippine jungle for 30 years is having difficulty adjusting to a new life after a gap of three decades.

In the half-year since he came back to Japan, former Lieut. Hiroo Onoda has written a best-seller on his experiences, brushed up on his tango steps, gone in for Japanese fencing, started driving lessons and travelled up and down the Japanese islands.

He has also moved frequently to escape the news media and the curious public. Onoda, 52, now declines interviews and refuses to answer questions, but on a recent visit to Sao Paulo he told reporters that he plans to move to Brazil, because he is disappointed in his homeland.

Information from persons who have been in contact with him and from published reports in two Japanese weekly news magazines show he is disillusioned. This came despite the hero's welcome he was accorded when he returned home after his surrender on Lubang Island, 75 miles southwest of Manila. March 10, 1974. He gave himself up only on orders from his onetime superior officer.

Since he emerged from the jungle and returned home, Onoda has been sought after to tell about his experiences at public gatherings.

The two news magazines, Shukan Asahi and Shukan Shincho, reported that one of Onoda's problems is that he doesn't like being tied to his mother's apron strings.

His mother, Tamae Onoda, 88, a former women's college teacher, is said to be proud of the Spartan-like education she and her husband Tanejiro, 88, gave their five sons and two daughters. Now that he is home, she expects Hiroo to show devotion.

"I did my duty and didn't bring shame on the family," he said. "Now I'd like to lead an ordinary life."

Tendonitis Is Not Form of Arthritis

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: There are several questions that puzzle me.

Is tendonitis a direct off-shoot of arthritis? Does it always travel from one arm to the other by way of the collar bone or bones across the back of the neck?

I had it first in the right arm, then in the back of my neck and now the left arm became sore as the pain subsided in the right.—Mrs. N.R.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you please tell me what causes so much calcium in my body. First I had to get cortisone shots in my one shoulder. Now it's in the other. Do I have too much calcium in my body?—J.K.

First of all, tendonitis has no direct relationship to arthritis.

Tendonitis is a fairly common occurrence, especially in the shoulder or elbow or heel. In tendonitis (tennis elbow is an example of it); the joint has been injured or irritated in some way, and body calcium is called up, so to speak, to the area where it is deposited as part of the healing process.

But the deposit causes no painful symptoms unless it gets too large and begins interfering with the bursa, the tiny fluid-filled sacs which lie at joints to take the friction out of their movement.

Granted, the pain can resemble that of arthritis and, in fact, can be confused with it, but x-rays will reveal these calcium deposits, if they are there, whether there is pain or not. In fact, from Mrs. N.R.'s description, it is entirely possible that it is arthritis she's dealing with, and not tendonitis. At any rate, there is no "travelling" involved in tendonitis. Although the pain tends to subside in time, sometimes it is necessary to flush the calcium deposits out.

As to J.K.'s question, which might already be answered:

Calcium deposits in a tendon or bursa is not a matter of excess levels of body calcium generally, but part of the healing process.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Will you please discuss "jock itch" in your column? What causes it? What does it look like?—R.B.

If you want the fancy name for it, it's "tinea cruris," although "jock itch" is more descriptive because of the location where it occurs, in the groin.

It's brought on by a fungus type of germ which causes red, scaly skin and, in more serious cases, tiny blisters.

A similar skin rash can also be caused by irritation from some of the synthetic materials used in the athletic supporter itself. Here, the material can set up an allergic type of reaction and develop much the same symptoms as tinea cruris.

In true tinea cruris, the best preventive is to make the skin environment unfriendly to the germ through frequent bathing and complete drying of the area. After drying, an antifungal medication should be applied.

Jock itch is more prevalent among obese people, especially in hot months among those engaged in strenuous activity.

The only way to tell for sure that the problem is tinea cruris is by a sample scraping of the fungus and examination in a laboratory.

When bathing, it is important to rinse away all soap before drying the area.

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Remember the misspelled slogan, "THIMK"?

South played dummy's jack of spades at trick one. East rose with the ace; paused a while to do some "thimking". Then he led back the six of spades. After that friendly return South had no trouble collecting two spades, four clubs and three diamonds. He even got in a heart track at the finish, but he didn't need it.

If East had done some constructive thinking instead of his garbled version he would have said to himself, "South has opened a no-trump without the ace-king-queen or jack of hearts. Would he make that bid without one of the four top spades also? Probably not!"

That would have marked South with the king of spades and made a spade return most unattractive.

Then East would shift to the deuce of hearts. West's 10 would force the king or queen from dummy. Later on West would get in with the king of diamonds and lead a heart to his partner. East would cash three heart tricks and South's three no-trump contract would have gone to never-never land.

U.S. Opposes Export Curbs

WASHINGTON (CP) — A call for Canada and other major trading partners to "balance its self-interest with the common interest" is made in a top-level survey of the importation into the United States of critical raw material.

"Although we cannot expect any country to tie its hands in matters vital to its national interest, we consider arbitrary use of export controls basically inconsistent with the goal of an open world economy in which market factors play an effective role," the report states.

"We cannot continue to remain an open economy if other countries are to control their exports without adequate recognition of the interests and needs of their trading partners."

The report suggests it is desirable to seek "improved international rules and procedures to ensure adequate access to foreign supplies and to minimize frictions among nations over export-control actions."

The special report on critical imported materials was produced by the Council on International Economic Policy.

It was prepared under the state department and included representation from the office of management and budget, the domestic council, Central Intelligence Agency, general services administration and departments of treasury, defence, interior, commerce and agriculture.

Its recommendations go to President Ford.

The study concludes that the U.S. will have a sufficient supply of imported industrial raw meterials to last through this century and that the U.S. will not face a crisis in other resources similar to that which occurred in oil.

However, it states that "today's unsettling conditions are creating a potential for mistrust and conflict among nations" as each country recognizes that "other nations' actions can have an adverse impact on them."

"Canada, Australia, South Africa and other developed nations" supply more than two-thirds of the industrial raw material the U.S. imports; "Canada alone supplies half," the report states.

These countries "would be unlikely to participate in any embargo of exports to the U.S., Western Europe or Japan," it says.

"Since these three countries are the most important sources of raw materials for the U.S. . . . any embargo threat for commodities they produce is greatly diminished."

The report, however, says there is "growing government regulation or actual control of production facilities in exporting countries."

"The ownership of mines and production facilities in developing countries has shifted to the host countries to such an extent that foreign majority ownership is an exception rather than the rule.

U.S. Firms' Outlook Dim for Most of Year

DETROIT (AP) — With sales down 23 per cent in 1974 from 1973, its second-worst performance in 11 years, the United States auto industry's slump will continue into 1975 with hopes dim for recovery at least until late in the year.

December sales reported Monday fell 25 per cent from the same month a year before, more bad news for companies already in the longest slump since the Second World War.

It was disheartening word for thousands of auto workers who face continued and perhaps more-sweeping layoffs if sales continue to decline.

Canada's Auto Firms Report Record Year

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canada's automobile industry has reported a record year for car and truck sales during 1974, but the year-end sales figures, released Monday, were marred by a drop in December totals for three of the four major automobile manufacturers.

For the second month in a row, only Ford of Canada Ltd. had higher over-all sales.

William L. Hawkins, Ford of Canada vice-president and general manager, said in a prepared statement that "the Canadian automobile industry moves into 1975 with an outstanding four-year sales record.

"Industry sales of cars and trucks in 1974 are estimated to be 1,245,000 units, 61 per cent higher than in 1970."

However, sales figures for the past two months indicate that after nearly four years of unprecedented growth, Canada's auto industry has moved into a moderate recession.

During November, sales declined 19 per cent. For December, General Motors of Canada Ltd. reports an 18.3-per-cent drop in car sales from 1973 and a 10.7-per-cent drop in truck sales and Chrysler Canada Ltd. reports a 16.7-per-cent drop in car sales but a 1.9-per-cent increase in truck sales from a record level in December, 1973.

American Motors car sales were down 47.6 per cent compared with the same month last year but Jeep sales increased 22 per cent, and Ford of Canada car sales increased 4.4 per cent and truck sales were up 38.1 per cent compared to a year ago.

About 300,000 U.S. auto workers will be on indefinite layoff by the end of January as sales have dropped 30 to 40 per cent during the past year.

Under the U.S.-Canada auto pact, Canada ships a substantial number of automobiles and parts south of the border. The U.S. recession has caused production cuts and layoffs for hundreds of Canadian auto workers during the past few months.

Inquiry Waste of Money

Beef Industry Probe Opposed

SASKATOON (CP) — Any move by the federal government to set up a special inquiry into the beef industry will be a waste of taxpayers' money, Beryl Plumptre, chairman of the food prices review board, said Monday.

Mrs. Plumptre, speaking during the University of Saskatchewan's annual Farm and Home Week, said Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan has not given any explicit reason for setting up the proposed inquiry and its purpose is "certainly not clear to the board."

"We believe that in the light of our extensive work in this area and our proven expertise, the only justification is of a purely political nature."

She made the comment after the board released its seventh report on Canada's beef industry. It dealt with the market for lightweight heifer beef.

The report said consumers, particularly those in Eastern Canada could save money if retailers used more heifer carcasses instead of steers.

The board also was critical of the low price cattlemen receive for heifers compared with steers. The price difference has been as high as $10 a hundred pounds. The board said a spread of $4.60 would be justified.

Mrs. Plumptre said there is about two per cent less saleable cuts on heifer carcasses, but retailers should provide a proper mix of both types of meat to reduce the price to their customers.

She said beef producers get about 75 per cent of the consumer's beef dollar and the board found no excess profits at either the wholesale or retail levels of the beef distribution chain.

Charles Gracey of Toronto, manager of the Canadian Cattlemen's Association, said he was encouraged by board reports which have shown no systematic rip-offs in the industry, although there may be occasional abuses.

He said the industry's marketing system has withstood the scrutiny of the board and the special Commons committee on trends in food prices

"The industry has not been awarded the mantle of sainthood, but it has escaped any suggestion of improper conduct," he said.

Mr. Gracey said many consumers can't understand why steak in a supermarket costs $2 a pound while live cattle sells for 50 cents a pound. "Indeed some farm leaders don't understand it."

A simple explanation is that it takes 2½ pounds of live animal to produce one pound of saleable beef so that the cost to the retailer before he even butchers the carcass is exactly 2½ times the live price.

Indians Need No Licence To Drive on Reserves

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP) — Judge Robin Bonnycastle has ruled that all treaty Indians have the right to drive on reserves in Canada without an operator's licence.

Judge Bonnycastle dismissed in magistrate's court Monday a charge of driving on a reserve without a current operator's licence against Stanley James Daniels of the Sturgeon Lake reserve.

Judge Bonnycastle said the reserve is an Indian's private property

Rink Plans' Foiled

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Plans for neighborhood skating programs in Belleville have been temporarily put on ice — for lack of cold weather.

Faced with the frustration is the city's parks department which, over the years, has been increasingly gearing greenbelt areas to winter play.

This year, the department has plans to maintain 19 outdoor rinks around the city.

Only problem is that the weather has not been consistently cold enough for outdoor skating — in fact it's been one of the balmiest starts to winter in 50 years in some areas.

Work started Monday on many rinks as temperatures seemed to sharpen. And then the weather turned mild — again, said parks general foreman Ed Burleigh.

High in Belleville Tuesday was 39 degrees.

After the rinks were cleared of snow cover, the thaw set in. And there's no sense flooding them to create them to an ice surface unless temperatures are consistently 25 degrees or lower.

The problem originates way down in the Gulf of Mexico.

Warm winds from the Gulf have helped boost temperatures 18 degrees above normal, in most of southern Ontario. In Toronto it was the mildest December in 50 years — an average of 34.2 degrees high for the month.

But a bleaker break is on the way.

An Arctic weather front is moving south, say weather forecasters, and the above-normal temperatures are expected to end Saturday.

Maritime Cities Buried Under 20 Inches of Snow

HALIFAX (CP) — An overnight snowstorm cut a devastating path through the centre of the Maritimes and several cities in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick were buried today in up to 20 inches of snow.

Offices, shops and schools were closed in the New Brunswick centres of Saint John and Moncton and in Amherst, Sydney and Truro, N.S. Secondary streets in these cities were plugged solid this morning, although two or three main streets were passable.

Power failures occurred in many areas as high winds accompanying the storm played havoc with lines and whipped the heavy snowfall into huge drifts.

Bus service was shut down in the hardest-hit centres and air travel and ferry service in the region was badly disrupted.

The problem threatened to be more problemsome in Sydney as a strike by civic employees entered its third day. Workers agreed to operate two snow plows to clear emergency paths in major streets.

Eight inches of snow covered most streets in the Cape Breton city.

Police said the city was virtually paralyzed. Another four inches of snow were expected in Cape Breton and northern Nova Scotia today.

In New Brunswick, the storm dumped up to 20 inches of snow in the southern part of the province.

Saint John was the hardest hit, with all schools and most commercial concerns closed. Police reported the city at a standstill, although main streets were being cleared.

In Prince Edward Island, most schools were closed today after the storm deposited up to seven inches of snow.

Some business were reported preparing to open in Charlottetown, however.

Weather Forecast By Frogs

PEKING (Reuter) — A peasant weather observer in central China's Honan province forecasts the weather—by listening to the croaking of frogs.

The official Hsinhua news agency said a folk proverb claims that "a downpour coincides with frog croaking."

But veteran weather-watcher Chang Chi-tsai made careful observations of his own, and found it was not as simple as the ancients had thought.

He says that if frogs croak on a fine day, it will rain in two days. If frogs croak after rain, it will be fine weather. If frogs do not croak after successive overcast days, it will continue to rain.

Month's Indian Ocean Cruise Is Planned by U.S. Carrier

WASHINGTON (AP) — A powerful navy carrier fleet sailed toward the Indian Ocean today as rumblings persisted over State Secretary Henry Kissinger's interpreted warning of possible U.S. military action in an oil emergency.

The six-ship study mission, led by the 85,000-ton nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Enterprise, was expected to enter the Indian Ocean within a few days after a voyage from Subic Bay in the Philippines.

The Pentagon acknowledged the Enterprise's sailing but would not identify its destination. However, sources said the carrier, the nuclear-propelled cruiser Long Beach, two destroyers, a supply ship and an oiler were bound for the Indian Ocean.

Pentagon spokesman William Beecher said Tuesday the group is on an operational mission, but denied reports it is bound for waters off South Vietnam, where government troops have been reeling under Communist attack.

The White House affirmed the Pentagon statement. At the same time, President Ford was described as watching developments in South Vietnam closely.

Congress has banned any U.S. bombing or other military action in Indochina. Any such move would require prior congressional approval, officials said.

In Honolulu, Admiral Noel Gayler, commander of U.S. military forces in the Pacific, said it is "difficult to imagine" any circumstances under which U.S. troops would be sent back to Vietnam.

Price to Cut Demand

Ford Plans Dearer Gas

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford has decided on an energy policy that deliberately increases gasoline prices to discourage demand but rejects direct fuel restrictions or rationing, an informed administration source says.

The source also said Tuesday that Ford has won the voluntary agreement of auto makers to improve gasoline mileage, but that he would not propose federal mileage standards or a horsepower tax.

However, Ford was expected to propose standards or tax credits to improve building insulation.

The administration's energy policy is to be made public this month. Many of Ford's expected proposals would require congressional action, especially in imposing or easing taxes.

Ford was expected to stick to his goal of reducing oil demand by one million barrels a day by the end of this year and to select a target for limiting oil imports by 1985 to something between 10 and 20 per cent of U.S. demand, compared with the present 36 per cent.

But his energy policy was not expected to include a decision on stockpiling oil against the threat of sudden shortages, a subject to be studied further in the next several months.

The administration source said Ford was expected to propose:

—A tariff of $3 a barrel on imported oil and a $3 excise tax on domestic oil, costing consumers about $18.6 billion a year at present demand levels. Such increases could raise the price of gasoline about 7½ cents a gallon and other petroleum products by various amounts.

—General tax reductions to send the money back to the public for spending on other goods or services.

—Removal of price controls from "old" oil brought into production by 1972, allowing its price to rise to prevailing levels, now about $11, from $5.25 a barrel.

—The end of federal regulation over interstate prices of natural gas.

—A voluntary agreement by auto makers to improve gasoline mileage 40 per cent by 1979, bringing the average performance of 1980 models close to 20 miles a gallon.

—Federal standards or tax credits for improving the insulation of buildings, with some sort of financial aid for insulating the homes of the poor.

—Stimulation of coal production, either through leasing of additional federal land or by enforcement of clauses in existing leases which require "due diligence" in mining the land. The administration would seek the easing of certain clean air standards to allow increased burning of coal.

No Truth to Report

Red Seeks U.S. Cure

BOSTON (AP) — An official of the Sidney Farber Cancer Centre said today there is no truth to reports that Soviet Leader Leonid Brezhnev will enter the hospital for treatment.

"The report is absolutely unfounded," William Koster, administrative vice-president, said. "We haven't been contacted at all."

The Boston Globe said today it had learned from a police source that the 68-year-old Soviet Communist party chief would enter the cancer centre at the Children's Hospital sometime later in the day.

In Moscow, the official Soviet news agency Tass said Brezhnev, his wife, their relatives and friends attended funeral services there for his mother today.

The Boston office of the FBI and state and local police all said they knew nothing of the reported visit.

In Washington, state department officials said they had "no evidence to support" the newspaper's story.

Last Friday, syndicated columnist Charles Bartlett reported that while Soviet spokesmen were saying Brezhnev cancelled a scheduled trip to Cairo next week because he had the flu, he actually was suffering from leukemia.

The Soviet news agency Tass announced Dec. 30 that the trip was postponed indefinitely. No reason was given. Later, an Egyptian newspaper said "health reasons" forced cancel-

Meanwhile, a funeral was held in Moscow today for Brezhnev's mother, Natalia Denisovna Brezhnev, and officials said the Soviet leader was present

Mrs. Brezhnev's death was announced Tuesday. She was believed to be about 87.

The official Soviet news agency said Brezhnev, his wife, their relatives and friends were in the hall of the Scientists' Club where the body lay in state.

Viet Cong Zones Are Bombed

SAIGON (AP) — Waves of South Vietnamese planes attacked the Viet Cong headquarters at Loc Ninh and nearby Communist areas in retaliation for the loss of the capital of Phuoc Long province, the Saigon command announced today.

F5 fighter-bombers raided troop concentrations, anti-aircraft positions, ammunition dumps and supply centres in the Communist zones below the Cambodian border north of Saigon Tuesday night and today, and pilots reported ammunition explosions that sent smoke 3,000 feet into the air, a command spokesman said.

New Contracts Ratified

Sudbury and Wellington County Teachers Back at Schools

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Separate school teachers in the Wellington and Sudbury districts were to return to work today after ratifying new contracts Tuesday.

Sudbury teachers voted 611 to 242 in favor of a 16.7-per cent wage increase plus a cost-of-living allowance over a one-year contract.

The 1,037 teachers affected now will get salaries ranging between $7,084 and $18,575. The previous grid ranged between $6,160 and $15,710.

The agreement includes a grievance procedure and a new dental and group-life insurance plan.

Wellington teachers voted 142 to 38 for average pay increases of 14 per cent at the bottom of the scale and 11 per cent in top categories. There were 243 teachers and 4,688 students affected by negotiations there.

The one-year agreement provides a minimum starting salary of $6,840 and a maximum of $19,760. Previous minimums and maximums were $6,000 and $17,800, respectively.

Other developments Tuesday:

—Talks between the London-Middlesex separate school board and its teachers continued in Toronto.

—Bargaining between the Ottawa separate school board and its teachers shifted to Ottawa from Toronto.

—Both sides in the Carleton dispute were to arrive in Toronto today for talks with Education Minister Thomas Wells.

—The Elgin separate school board met in St. Thomas and decided to leave it up to a mediator to set meeting dates with its teachers and attempt to have its 10 schools open and supervised by paid volunteers by Thursday, despite resignations from most of the teachers.

—Separate school classes in the Oshawa-centred Durham region returned to normal after teachers ratified an agreement giving them average pay increases of 20.6 per cent in a one-year contract. The new pay scale will range between $7,775 and $19 200.

Eighty five per cent of 4,168 teachers represented by the Ontario English Catholic Teachers Association (OECTA) missed classes Monday due to contract disputes in six districts and a professional development day in a seventh region.

A similar percentage of 2,500 teachers were staying home again today, affecting a student population of 51,200.

Three separate schools in London-Middlesex were to open today with the help of paid volunteers and supply teachers, as the school system entered its third day with 404 teachers off the job.

Board negotiators agreed Tuesday to meet Mr. Wells in Toronto. The board had previously insisted that the teachers go back to work before its negotiating committee would accept mediation or meet with the minister.

Schools will also be open for parents to come and pick up books for their children to do home study, said Gene Ennis, the board's superintendent of operations.

Mr. Ennis said parents are being encouraged to keep their children home, but children attending the three schools which will open will receive supervision.

John Dempster, a labor ministry mediator, travelled to Ottawa Tuesday to direct talks between the separate school board there and its teachers who are seeking an average 20-per-cent raise. The latest publicized board offer was 13 per cent.

At St. Thomas, the Elgin dispute was quickly becoming the most bitter of the original seven.

Chief board negotiator John Welsh, elected board chairman for 1975 at Tuesday's inaugural meeting, said he hopes to have all schools open by Thursday.

Mr. Welsh said negotiations "are going favorably" and they will probably resume next week. He left it to provincial mediator, Harold Howells to schedule further talks with teachers.

In the interim, the board is seeking volunteers from the community who will be paid $3 an hour. Substitute teachers will be paid according to qualifications, Mr. Welsh said.

Twelve of the board's 88 teachers are reporting for work.

The teachers are forbidden by law to take strike action.

Previous agreements between the boards and teachers expired Dec. 31. Eighty five per cent of the teachers submitted resignations effective midnight Dec. 31 to back requests for substantial salary increases made by their negotiating committee.

Damage Extensive

A collision between a jeep-snow plow and a pick-up truck Tuesday resulted in $4,000 damage to the two vehicles involved.

The driver of the jeep-snow plow, Sherwood Vader, 38, of 56 McFarlane Dr., Belleville, was treated and released from hospital with abrasions to his face. Driver of the half-ton pick-up, Bernard Hill of Skyview Trailer Court, in Trenton, was uninjured.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said the accident which occurred about 7:35 a.m. Tuesday at College St. W. and Glendale Rd., came about as the jeep-snow plow was plowing the driveway of Wonder Bakeries on College St. W. Police said the pick-up was owned by Percy Tyrell of RR3, Belleville.

Police said Mr. Vader has been charged with failing to yield from a private driveway.

Town Firemen Still On 1973 Contract

TRENTON — It is almost certain little progress will be made in negotiating a 1975 contract with town firefighters until a settlement is reached over last year's contract.

At present, the 1974 contract has moved into the arbitration stage after unsuccessful negotiations between the town and firefighters. Negotiations ended in early summer, 1974.

At council's committee of the whole session here Tuesday, several councillors questioned the ability of the town to negotiate a 1975 contract under such circumstances.

Mayor Robert Patrick said, with the 1974 contract unsigned, "We can't have really meaningful talks in a majority of areas."

Since September, when both sides appointed their members of the arbitration board, disagreement has centred on the name of the board chairman. Just recently, an Ottawa man was selected chairman.

No date for an initial board meeting has been set.

Fire fighters now are paid on the basis of a 1973 contract. Once 1974's contract is signed, it will be retroactive to Jan. 1, 1974.

Councilors agreed Tuesday to keep confidential details on bargaining positions taken by both sides. Details will be released once the 1974, and subsequently the 1975 contracts are signed.

Trenton Rejects Park Camping and Sculpture

TRENTON — Neither camping grounds nor a proposed 70 - foot high land sculpture will be located in Centennial Park, council agreed Tuesday during discussion of plans to redesign the town's major waterfront park.

Council discussions followed recommendations made by the Trenton parks board to Toronto planning consultants currently working on the park's redevelopment.

The consultants have tentatively suggested provision be made for a camp site — either for trailers or tents — at the east end of an enlarged park.

During the committee of the whole session, councillors decided the proposed camp site be used for passive parkland in the near future.

Any decision to change its use could be made at some future date, it was felt.

Mayor Robert Patrick said he doubted the town could afford development costs for a camp site. Councillor Peter De Groot said the installation of services could prove "awfully costly".

Councils decision ends differences it has had with the parks board over use of town parks for camping. A board bylaw prohibits use of parks for camping, except by caravans under special permits.

Also shelved was a consultant's suggestion a 65-70 - foot land sculpture, or hill, be created right on the waterfront of what Mayor Patrick called the town's park "showplace".

The concensus was that the proposed hill — also termed too ambitious by the parks board — would negate a panaoramic view of the waterfront.

Councillors agreed a comparative hillock of some 15 feet would be more suitable. It would be used in conjunction with an as yet unknown form of bandshell or open air platform.

Warden Sworn In

Prince Edward County warden for 1974 Keith MacDonald (left) turns over the chain of office to the 1975 warden, Clifford Walker. Warden Walker was escorted to his seat by his brother Donald who was warden of Prince Edward 21 years ago and another past warden Donald Bond.

Snow Creates Problems

Unshovelled snow and speeding snowmobiles brought a large delegation of senior citizens to Stirling council last night. Council told the group there was no bylaw to force residents to shovel their sidewalks, but said it would look into the matter. Albert Light, standing, feared for the safety of pedestrians when snowmobiles travel abreast up Church St., hitting speeds of 70 miles an hour at times, he said.

Walker Named New Warden Of Prince Edward County

By MARG. HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — South Marysburg Township reeve Clifford Walker, Tuesday was elected warden of Prince Edward by a unanimous vote of county council.

In his inaugural address, Warden Walker stressed the county must push forward in a time when many feel the economy of the country is not as strong and stable as in recent years.

Industry must be enticed for a balanced economy said the new warden. He noted the county's scenic location attracts many tourists and retired persons but industry is required to round out the picture.

The warden discussed the question of restructured county government observing the issue has "slowed to a crawl" in Prince Edward County.

When implementation of a one-tier system was proposed in 1974 the public wanted facts and figures before making a decision he said.

Warden Walker said he is convinced the three major political parties agree the government is unprepared to deal with the multitude of small municipalities in Ontario. The parties disagree, however, on the type of restructure needed and seem to lack definite policy for presentation.

The warden predicted small municipal council eventually will disappear and when this takes place the county must be prepared to let the government know what it wants.

He predicted council's road committee will face a busy year in 1975 with rapidly rising costs and public demand for service. The county has several incomplete road projects halted by lack of funds. The warden said he hopes these will achieve top priority this year.

Taylor Backs County

PICTON — If Prince Edward County restructures its government initiative must come from the local council, not the provincial government says James Taylor, MPP Prince Edward-Lennox.

Mr. Taylor, addressing the inaugural meeting of county council, strersed the province has not given direction or inrestructure.

He emphasized the county should not be presured by fears that inaction will lead to government intervention.

Mr. Taylor said Prince Edward's residents who have roots in the county no doubt know best how the area should grow and the type of development needed.

"You people are responsible for the type of location of development in this county," he said.

Dial-a-bus Study Sought

TRENTON — Council agreed Tuesday to request a meeting with the province to explore the possibility of a study to gauge the need and the costs involved in creating a dial-a-bus service in Trenton.

Council's discussion came in response to an offer of assistance from the ministry of transportation and communications.

Mayor Robert Patrick said that judging from reaction to the dial-a-bus idea during December's election, it "would be less than responsible" if council did not at least look into the matter.

When first proposed last October, council backed away from the idea, apparently fearing the town would be forced to make good any losses a bus service might incur.

Stirling Senior Citizens Request Snow Removal

STIRLING — A large delegation of senior citizens complained to Stirling council this week of unshoveled sidewalks, snowmobiles doing 50 to 70 miles an hour on the streets, and cars splashing them.

Council told the group, a number of whom are tenants in the Ontario Housing Corporation's 24-unit apartment on Church St., that there is no bylaw forcing people to shovel their sidewalks.

Albert Light, who acted as a spokesman for the delegation, said: "With two schools on the street, there are many buses to contend with. Snowmobiles travel at 50 to 70 miles an hour, not one behind the other, but abreast. It will be an awful thing if one of these people is hit to get something done."

The corner around the post office and past the Masonic Hall were singled out as nuisance spots.

Councillor Wayne Martin said that since the sidewalks there are flush with the highway, the plows push it right back on the walkway. Mr. Martin said the town does not have enough men to shovel the sidewalks, nor the equipment.

As far as a bylaw forcing residents to shovel sidewalks, councillor Martin said it has not worked in other municipalities, despite the threat of the cost of removal of snow by town employees being added onto the tax bill of a delinquent resident.

Sewers Delayed

STIRLING — This community will have an Ontario Municipal Board hearing on January 23 to hear objections to a sewer lagoon, and to set the mill rate for taxes to pay for new sewers costing almost $600,000.

Peter Anderson, of Greer and Galloway Construction Engineers, brought the new Stirling council up to date this week on the matter. He said there were three objectors to the proposed 13-acre sewage lagoon, which would be located south of the present 11 acre site.

Mr. Anderson said the capacity of the present system is not great enough and sewage which has not been fully treated sometimes flows into Rawdon Creek and then to the Trent River.

One of the objectors is the landowner for the proposed lagoon site, and a neighboring farmer in Sydney Township. The other objector is the Hastings Federation of Agriculture.

Mr. Anderson said the clay soil is ideal for the proposed lagoon, but is too sandy west of the present lagoon, where the landowner facing expropriation wants the lagoon located.

"At the moment, the landowner is not prepared to sell," Mr. Anderson said. "The ministry of the environment is proceeding with expropriation."

Reeve Ray Short asked if the sewer extensions throughout Stirling could go ahead without he lagoon. Mr. Anderson said they could, but hookup to the sewers could be refused. He though that the sewer installation could be speeded up by doing it in this fashion. He said that after the OMB hearing it would take four weeks for the sewer extensions to begin.

Economic Caution

Mayor Robin Jeffrey in her inaugural address of the year sees no alternative to fiscal belt-tightening. Commitment to further development, major projects and services will be tempered by the fact of an inflationary economy and the prospect of some projects being held back.

That briefly is the reality of the economic situation facing Belleville and other municipalities in 1975. And we are faced also with the sobering thought that the longer a project is postponed the more it will cost whenever work finally gets under way.

Overall the world economic situation affords little comfort, and this is reflected by a current article in The Economist. In a review of the present recessionary cycle, the British journal discusses the beginnings of slump in 1974 following a whole generation when industrial nations prospered — from 1948 until last year when growth patterns slid ominously.

It goes on: "It is easier to see how recession can turn into a slump . . . as it did in the early thirties. The slump may deepen through 1975. It seems likely to bottom out in 1976 at the earliest. At best it may be 1977 before the world gets back into its former stride of five per cent a year growth."

But The Economist is not even certain of this optimistic outcome. And it blames "contagious inflation" for having destroyed the boom. In one, somewhat convoluted passage, it notes: "Within countries, democratically-elected governments were obliged by voters to expand state spending by more than wage earners individually would allow to be paid for by restraints on the growth of their private living standards." What this says simply is the old James Coyne adage, in the days of the Diefenbaker government, that Canadians "are living grandly beyond their means" — a phenomenon which obviously was being witnessed in other countries too.

The Economist sees potential for solutions in international co-operation but warns that this is not always possible when times are bad . . . so that the prudent will also look to their "national survival kits" as well.

It offers as contents of such a 1974-77 kit a number of goodies which Canada, along with other nations, may not find easy to come by. Such as: reasonable trade union leaders; a political consensus on tolerable income distribution; broad political agreement on the form of the economic system; a government able to enforce its will on sectional interests; sufficient home-grown energy; a relatively small international trade sector; a relatively small manufacturing sector compared with services; a relatively slow growing labor force as well.

Faced with this kind of economic formula, it is little wonder that municipalities such as Belleville are placing emphasis on caution in the days ahead — with the one bright spot the strengthened industrial base achieved locally, and the prospect of further consolidation in the ensuing year.

Tragedy 'Down Under'

It is unfortunate that tragedy is often the means of bringing some remote part of the world to the fore. Those who are familiar though with Hobart, Tasmania, know the bridge across the Derwent River, today a scene of tragedy following a shipping accident.

Coming on top of the Darwin cyclone, it has brought death and destruction to Australia's north-south extremities.

Actually this is the second time in recent years that Hobart has been in the news — the last time in connection with forest fires that licked at the edges of the city's suburbs from surrounding high ground.

Closing Down

Another sign of our frantic times, of Alvin Toffler's "Future Shock" ("Present Shock" might be more appropriate) society, is the closing down of one of London's most famous restaurants, The Caprice. One reason, according to manager John Moroni is the faster pace of life — people rush their food, like most other things. And, calamity, many diners no longer know or care whether food is frozen or fresh. What a world! Where's the leisure some people are said to enjoy?

Living Costs Keep Rising

The Economy And Why Nobody Is Willing To Cut Prices

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Almost everybody agrees that we are in a recession. But nobody has cut prices—except on the stock market.

How come? What's happened to the law of supply and demand, to the "market forces" of economic theory?

Why do the price of cars, for example, rise year after year, even when it is clear that consumer price resistance is contributing to the glut of unsold cars?

And does the combination of rising prices and falling demand prove the case for mandatory price controls?

Some economists answer all such questions by citing a phenomenon of the market place—a resistance to any change, in either direction, from the going rate of price increases.

Their argument seems to be borne out by a glance back at price performances during each of the recessions of the past 30 years.

With each succeeding recession, prices have been more strongly resistant to downward pressure.

The question is not so much whether the current recession will bring price cuts—but, rather, whether it will reduce the rate of price increase, standing currently at 12 per cent a year.

Manufacturers are notoriously slow to cut prices. Any competitive advantage may be minimal in the long run, and difficult to predict.

Besides, the labor content of the cost of most goods rises substantially and automatically, year by year, although labor productivity is scarcely rising at all

The giant U.S. auto industry apparently is waiting for Congress to act to stimulate spending. In the meantime, the Big Four are sticking to their 1975 prices despite the industry's inventory of 1.7 million unsold cars.

Behind the current behavior of prices is an underlying public belief—held especially by a younger generation that has never known a period of stable prices—that inflation is not to be subdued.

That belief is confirmed by political leaders in both Canada and the United States, who give only lip-service to anti-inflation, but respond vigorously to any increase in unemployment figures.

Economists love to debate their cherished theories about the types of inflation—the "cost-push" type, in which costs cause prices to rise, and "demand pull" inflation, in which excess demand pulls prices up.

In modern-day inflation, the two types are really one. Higher demand leads to higher production, which stimulates the demand for industrial materials. Their prices rise, manufacturers pass the increase along to the consumer, workers demand wage increases to offset inflation, and so on.

Despite the recent history of inflation, it still is true that nothing—well, almost nothing—goes up forever. The prices of industrial materials and farm products, for example, are just beginning to reflect slower growth.

The cost of living will certainly go up again this year—petroleum products are just one obvious area of price increase—but the rate of inflation could be slower unless government over-reacts to the unemployment figures and carries its pump-priming program (announced in the Nov. 18 budget) to extremes.

Central Intelligence Agency Is Getting Some Unwanted Publicity

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

For an intelligence operation which is supposed to be secret in all or most of its operations, the CIA, Central Intelligence Agency, has had nothing but repeated publicity.

And the formation of an investigative team under the direction of Vice-President Nelson Rockefeller to find out why the CIA entered the domestic intelligence-gathering area, has already given it even more.

U.S. federal law establishing the CIA in 1947 at the height of the Cold War, explicitly eliminated the agency from domestic surveillance, that area being the preserve of the very capable FBI, Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Indeed the FBI, during its many years under the late Edgar Hoover, was so good at flushing out domestic security risks to the detriment of the rising drug and Mafia threats, that Hoover was openly criticized for not seeing the shift in domestic crime threats.

Remember the several gung-ho U.S radio and TV series on the FBI, all approved by Hoover himself, all displaying clean-cut agents, "ask-first-shoot-later" specialists keeping America free of communism?

Now it is revealed the CIA, which made a mess of many of its overseas operations in a way the FBI never did domestically, was ordered to keep tabs on Americans domestically.

A record of this comes from early 1973 when then president Nixon and his aides involved the CIA directly in surveillance of not only their political foes, but a list of about 10,000 Americans in the war protester and similar anti-establishment political movements.

In fact the CIA involvement in domestic intelligence went beyond the Watergate co-conspirators' local use of it, back to 1968 and the beginning of the Nixon years when such personalities as Eartha Kitt were surveilled.

You may remember she said her piece during a formal dinner at the White House harshly advising Mr. Nixon to get out of the war in Vietnam?

Overseas the CIA was supposed to have been involved in a horde of political crises, notably in Latin America. There was the 1954 overthrow of a neo-Marxist regime in Guatemala, a precursor if you like, of Castro's victory in Cuba in 1959.

The CIA is alleged to have supplied funds and arms to one Colonel Castillo Armas who overthrew the Arbenz pro-Marxist regime, was himself made president and later was assassinated in domestic political feuds.

The Bay of Pigs fiasco in 1961 has had repercussions ever since. CIA judgments on the strength of the then-new Castro revolution were disastrously wrong. Castro won that brief invasion and has had to warn his people ever since against the threat of a new American invasion.

And only the CIA knows to what extent it has tried to move agents in and out of Cuba since 1951. Certainly the so-called Cuban conspirators in the Watergate break-in had been involved with the CIA at the time of the Bay of Pigs invasion.

Not to forget the CIA role in the overthrow of former and dead Chilean Marxist president Salvador Allende. You can take your pick whether it was the CIA, or the IT and T machinations admitted to by public documents, which had the largest U.S. interventionist role in overthrowing an elected Marxist government in Latin America.

Finally the CIA has been unable to prevent publication of several books on its internal operations by former members of the agency.

All in all a not very secret, but rather inept secret service.

Winter Sport And Privacy Issue

Ottawa Journal

An ancient time ago (at least one or two years), the names belonged to an almost private geography: Hidden Valley, Franks, Burma Road, Shamrock Treffle, George's, Merry-Go-Round, Wester, Huron, Ridge Road. Only a hardy breed travelled to the Rockpile or climbed to the heights of the Ramparts. These trails and places were the special world of the cross-country skier in Gatineau Park.

Now, the secret is out, Ridge Road is the Macdonald-Cartier expressway of the park. Burma Road has been straightened and widened and the National Capital Commission feels self-righteous. The main trails around Camp Fortune on a Sunday afternoon look like part of Napoleon's retreat from Moscow.

Of course this population explosion is something to be welcomed. It is entirely healthy. The pleasures of trail skiing should be shared by everyone who has the zest (never mind the ability) for the sport. If a certain trendiness seems to have taken over, the motive - and there are many - is not important. The enjoyment is

But the newcomers should at least be aware of the sacrifices the old-timers are making. The feel of the solitude, the great silence, the privacy: these are at last as important rewards as the satisfaction of negotiating a steep hill. Now the hills are full of the sound af people, not all the hills but enough of the hills so that it requires imagination and extra effort to enjoy the old full pleasures.

This is why the NCC is wrong to widen trails in Gatineau Park, however humanitarian its motives. One "developed" trail is sufficient for those who for their own reasons do not want to venture afield. As more and more trail skiers become more skilled and more discriminating, they will themselves search out other cross-country areas which now should be fanatically protected..

The places for new bulldozed and manicured trails are in the other cross-country areas wpich the NCC and others have opened up outside of Gatineau Park. In the park, a trail skier still hopes to see a beaver at work on a tree, a deer cross his path; he hopes to feel alone in his world. With some care, he still should be able to enjoy the old pleasures along with all those now discovering his secret.

George Gathercoole

Retirement Of Hydro Chairman

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — A man who has been a big power in Ontario politics for nearly 30 years has retired.

On Dec. 31, aged 65, George Gathercole left office as chairman of Ontario Hydro.

And this ended a career in Ontario public service which started in 1945 and which saw this graduate economist for some 10 years as probably the second most powerful man in provincial government.

Gathercole entered the government service in 1945 after leaving the navy.

He started as assistant statistician, though it is believed he was the first full-time professional economist ever to work for Ontario government (today they would be numbered in the hundreds).

He did not figure prominently in the 1940s but once Leslie Frost took office in 1949 he began to rise.

In 1951 Frost who had been treasurer since 1943 and therefore had been close to Gathercole's work named him provincial economist, a new position he created.

And from then on he was a power-house.

He became the closest man to the premier in government, and Frost steadily used him more and more as an adviser.

He was the key man in federal-provincial negotiations, in drawing up such programs as hospital insurance and Metro Toronto and generally everything important in government.

The two became so close, in fact, that at times you could wonder if you were talking to Frost or Gathercole.

The premier, for example, had an expression "great fella" which he used when talking about a person.

After a while when you asked the provincial economist about a person you would get the response "great fella".

In 1961 when he was getting ready to leave office Frost put Gathercole in Hydro as vice-chairman and then in 1965 he became chairman.

Hydro recently has come in for criticism, but really its achievements under the Gathercole regime have been stupendous.

Its production now is 2¼ times what it was when he took over. Perhaps even more important he was the father of its nuclear development.

There were certain gambles involved in switching to nuclear energy. But Gathercole, convinced that nuclear energy was the most reliable, and in the end least expensive, source of power took them. And though there were some problems along the way to date they have paid off—particularly in view of the soaring price of oil, coal and gas, the alternative fuels.

Incidentally, the low point of Hydro under Gathercole would have been the long investigation into the utility's new head office building.

But he still stoutly defends this deal, and says that if the project were undertaken today it would cost twice as much.

Inflation Strikes At The Arts

Kitchener - Waterloo Record

In the arts, Canada has come a long way in the past 20 years. Still, we are not so self-sufficient that we can afford to ignore the danger signals in this aspect of Western civization in most countries where they are not guaranteed by full government support.

The most obvious trouble spot for North American music lovers is New York's Metropolitan Opera, where a $9 million deficit is forcing consideration of a reduced 1975-76 season or complete cancellation. Even for those who never manage to get to a Metropolitan production, this would send shock waves through all levels of the arts because of its prestige and its weekly broadcasts..

But for Canadian theatre people and musicians, the news from Britain is even more ominous. The situation there has led to headlines like that which appeared in the London Observer: Can We Afford The Arts?..

The problem, as at the Met, is one of money. Inflation has its effects in the arts as in everything else, and there is a fear that, on the theory they are not really essential, they will become early victims of further national belt-tightening..

Britain's post-war renaissance in the performing arts, which is vital to the tourist business, has been engendered largely by its state-subsidized companies. Their increasing stature and popularity has led to plans for new building projects, the largest of which is now in its final stages on London's South Bank..

But even this - the National Theatre which has been talked about for a century and more - is considered in jeopardy, while a merging of the two national theatre companies, the Royal Shakespeare Company and the National Theatre of Britain, is rumored. Unless solid government commitments are forthcoming, perhaps a quarter of the provincial repertory theatres may have to close.

This kind of economy did not appeal to National Theatre director Peter Hall, who argues that a time of crisis is no time to discard these elements of the cultural armory. In fact, in his opinion it is a time when the inspiration of great classic and modern theatre and music are especially needed to maintain national morale..

Except for some outstanding examples, Canadian arts activities are still dependent in important ways on related activities in Britain or the United States. And, of course, we are by no means immune to the direct effects of inflation and of growing union demands..

This is not to suggest that a little paring is not often good for an operation which has attained the status of a national institution, like the Stratford Festival, for instance..

The essential element is still the dedicated artist who does not think primarily of money but is concerned more with the opportunity to exercise his or her art in favorable surroundings. Thus there is this underlying need for adequate basic facilities and staff, in Britain today and the Canada of tomorrow if our economic troubles stay with us.

Bible Digest

by H. B. DEAN

"For the Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord." Thessalonians 4:16,17

The great gathering of God's people is in the making. We shall meet again never to part. He has made it possible. "Even so come Lord Jesus."

Government And Claims Of CSAO

Editor:
The Intelligencer

I am at a loss to understand the meaning behind some recent Provincial Government statements

While negotiations were underway between Government and CSAO for the Operational Categories, there were many statements by Mr. Winkler that civil servants were already getting a higher salary than their counterparts in industry

This information was on all the media as well as a five page memorandum printed and mailed to all civil servants at the taxpayers expense. After the wage contract was settled on December 29, however, Mr. Winkler made the statement and I quote"It (the 21½ per cent raise) is fair in that it gives these 19,000 employees wage rates comparable with those for similar positions elsewhere in the Province" The above statement is fairly accurate so I wonder about the others coming from the Civil Service Commission or Queen's Park for that matter.

Snowmobiles And Holiday Scene

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

I awoke early on New Year's Day to a beautiful day, clear, crisp, clean, with flakes of snow falling gently.

That was early, but as the day wore on the noise from snowmobiles grew so loud that being outside was worse than downtown Toronto; the smell of oil fumes grew so bad that the industrial section of Hamilton on a foggy day would have been a relief.

I watched as snowmobilers raced around the small park which adjoins the rear of the house where I live — effectively barring the use of the swings, slides and outdoor rink to my kids.

As I said the day started out well, but the snowmobilers ruined it.

Ground Beef Recipes: An Endless Variety of Nourishing, Economical Dishes

Ground beef is one of those foods you can face day after day in the kitchen and still produce a wide variety of dishes for the table.

Here are a few suggestions to add to your repertoire.

Surprise Meatloaf

one lb. ground pork
one lb ground beef
¼ cup fine dry bread crumbs
¼ cup finely chopped onion
⅛ tsp. Tabasco pepper sauce one tsp. salt
½ tsp. dried leaf thyme
½ tsp. dried leaf oregano

Filling

one cup cooked rice
two cups shredded unpared zucchini
(2 medium zucchini)
one large tomato peeled and diced
two tbsp. finely chopped onion
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
½ cup grated Swiss cheese
one egg, slightly beaten
⅛ tsp Tabasco pepper sauce

In large bowl, combine all ingredients for meat mixture; mix well. Press over bottom and sides of a 9 by 5 by 3 inch loaf pan, reserving enough mixture to cover top after adding filling, meat shell should be at least 1 inch thick.

In bowl, mix all ingredients for filling, and firmly press into cavity of meatloaf. Press reserved meat mixture over top and bake in 375 degree F. oven 1 hour and 20 minutes. (After 1 hour of cooking time pour off excess liquid from loaf.) Serves six.

Skillet Supper

one lb ground beef
one tbsp. oil
½ cup chopped celery
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup carrot coins
1 can(28 ounces) tomatoes
½ cup rice (uncooked)
½ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
dash chili powder
2 tbsp. ketchup
½ tsp. Worcestershire sauce
1 can corn niblets

Brown ground beef in oil, add celery, onion, carrot and cook 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Drain fat well. Add tomatoes, rice, salt, pepper, chili powder, ketchup, Worcestershire sauce and corn niblets. Cover and simmer 25 minutes, stirring occasionally. Serves four.

Double-Crust Beef Mushroom Pie

two tbsps. margarine
two pounds ground beef
½ cup chopped onion
½ lb. fresh mushrooms, chopped
½ cup soft white bread crumbs
10 ¾-oz, can gravy
salt, pepper and herbs to taste
one beaten egg
pastry for two 8-inch double crust pies

In hot fat in frying pan, cook meat quickly, stirring to break up slightly, until it loses its red color. Remove meat and in pan saute onion and mushrooms until onion is tender. Drain off any excess fat.

Return meat to pan and add crumbs and gravy. Season with salt and pepper, and flavor with a choice of rosemary, thyme, savory, sage or marjoram. Lightly mix in eggs..

Spoon into two pastry-lined 8-inch pie pans Dampen rim of lower crust and cover the pies with pastry. Seal and crimp. Cut slits in top of pies for escape of steam, and decorate with cut-outs of left-over pastry. Bake at 425 degrees for about 30 minutes, until golden brown. Makes 8 servings. Accompany with crisp salad. If desired, serve one pie fresh and freeze the other for future use..

SURPRISE MEATLOAF OFFERS A DELICIOUS FILLING OF RICE, VEGETABLES AND GRATED CHEESE

Meat Balls In Buttermilk Sauce

one third cup milk
three slices bread
1½ lbs. lean ground beef
¾ cup chopped onions
2½ tsps. salt
½ tsp. pepper
¼ cup flour
one tbsp. sugar
1½ tbsp. dry mustard
three tbsp. butter
three cups buttermilk
one egg beaten
one tblsp. chopped parsley
four cups hot cooked rice

Pour milk over bread; let stand 5 minutes. Mix with meat, onions, 1½ teaspoons salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Form into 24 balls. Place in baking pan and bake at 450 degrees F. for 15 minutes..

Meanwhile mix flour, sugar, mustard, and remaining salt and pepper; blend into butter. Gradually stir in buttermilk. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until sauce is thick and smooth. Blend a little hot sauce into egg; stir into remaining sauce. Add parsley. Remove meat balls from oven. Pour sauce over meat balls. Reduce heat to 300 degrees F. and bake meat balls 30 minutes. Serve over bed of fluffy rice..

Aegean Meatloaf

two pounds ground lean beef 1½ cups soft bread crumbs
one cup milk
¼ cup instant minced onion
two eggs, lightly beaten
1¾ tspc. salt
½ tsp ground cinnamon
¼ tsp. ground black pepper

Combine all ingredients in a large mixing bowl. Mix lightly but thoroughly. Turn into a 9 by 5 by 3 -inch loaf pan. Bake at 375 F. for 50 to 60 minutes or until done. Remove from oven; let rest in pan 10 minutes. Turn out onto a serving platter..

It's the cinnamon that gives the meatloaf its elusive, deliciously different flavor. Serves eight..

Meat Ball Stroganoff

one lb. lean minced beef
one tsp. garlic salt
¼ tsp. pepper
¼ cup milk
one egg, beaten
½ cup fine, dry bread crumbs
2 tblsp. salad oil
½ cup chopped onion
10 oz. can mushrooms, drained
2 tblsp. flour
¼ tsp. paprika
10 oz. can mushroom soup
one cup dairy sour cream
poppy sesame seed noodles

Combine first six ingredients. Shape into 1½ inch balls. Brown on all sides in oil. Remove to warm platter and keep hot. Cook onion and mushrooms for five minutes in frypan in which meat balls were cooked. Stir in flour and paprika, then undiluted soup. Simmer over low heat till sauce thickens - about 5 minutes. Blend in sour cream. Add meat balls. Cover and keep hot. Serve over cooked noodles..

Poppy-Sesame Seed Noodles - Cook an 8 oz. package noodles as package directs. Drain. Lightly brown 1 tablespoon sesame seeds in 1 tablespoon butter. Add 1 tablespoon poppy seed. Stir through drained, cooked noodles along with ⅛ teaspoon seasoned pepper and ½ teaspoon grated lemon rind.

Ann Landers

Letter to Alcoholic Dad

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a teenager—one of several kids. Our father is an alcoholic. I can't tell him how feel, so I wrote it down. I hope you will print my thoughts. My father reads your column every day. It might help him and other fathers who are alcoholics. Thanks, Ann.

I've been watching him die since I was old enough to understand.

His death is slow and painful;

Not only painful for him, but for his wife and family.

I think dying slow is much worse than dying suddenly.

I don't understand why he does it.

Why would a person want to die before he has to?

I know it isn't because he doesn't love us.

We have our little disagreements, but doesn't everyone?

And I know for sure that he loves my mother.

Of course, they argue, but doesn't every married couple?

I don't hold it against him. He's sick.

We love him so very much!

It's killing us watching him die.

Please STOP drinking, Dad.

—Love, Your Family

Dear Family: Here it is.

And for those of you who wonder if that letter was written by YOUR teen-ager, the answer is—"it could be."

If you want to give yourself and your family the best gift in the world, one that won't cost a dime, I suggest that you look in the phone book, call Alcoholics Anonymous and attend their next meeting.

Doris Clark

Pursuing Happiness Means Work

A person can put the stamp of his own spirit upon his work so that it becomes uniquely his. Fellow street-sweepers were discussing one of their number after his death.

One man said: "What impressed me was his interest in doing a good job; look at the way he took special pains to sweep clean around the lamp posts. You could always tell a lamp post that Charlie had swept around."

When opportunity for advancement or improvement in your job knocks at your door she is usually wearing overalls. The pursuit of happiness means work; freedom means being able to work for things you want; independence means standing on your own feet free from dependence on the bounty of others; self-respect is the result of working for what you get.

Royal Bank Letter.

How we value our work has a good deal to do with how we value ourselves. And our joy in life has a good deal to do with the creativity we put into whatever we put our hand to every day.

Dear Doris: We have an old dog - 13 years to be exact. He is rheumatic and has a growth hanging down from his neck which I am sure gives him pain.

The children love him, but when they try to hug him or play with him he yelps - then everybody feels badly.

I have said I'll have him put to sleep and out of his misery, but then six noisy voices are raised in protest. They call me a -

Would-be Murderer

Dear Would-Be: Your dog is your friend - and theirs. Your dog depends on you to be his friend - and I'm thinking his friendship might just mean depending on you to do what is best for him. The vet can help by diagnosing and telling you his chances for a painless old age.

If there are none, the decision to help him move on to dog heaven might be the kindest. But let it be the decision of the entire loving family - with a plan to pick up a new puppy on the way home! Nothing can heal the wound more happily.

Dear Doris: I am 20 and have been going with a 25-year-old guy for a year now. My mother dislikes him and she won't tell me why; and he says as long as she dislikes him we will never settle down.

My younger sister is going with a no-good clown and Mom likes him! The real trouble is every time I talk to her I get so mad that I can't even talk any more.

Love Problem.

Dear Love: Could it be that your mother sees things about this man which would only make you angrier if she discussed them? For one thing, he is five years your senior. Have you known enough boys to make this choice?

As for your boy friend's comment that your mother's dislike would prevent you settling down, could this be a stall? If by any chance he is cooling off, it is far better for you to recognize it now than later.

You will show maturity when you are able to keep your cool. The situation with sister has nothing to do with you, and your mother may have her reasons. Take a long objective look at the whole situation before you stage a rebellion you may be sorry for.

Asbestos Warning Repeated

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Morton Shulman, NDP member of the Ontario legislature, said Tuesday that information to be released in the United States next week suggests asbestos in drinking water "can cause gastro intestinal cancer."

Dr. Shulman, who last month warned of high levels of asbestos particles in drinking water in communities on the Great Lakes, told a news conference that the Ontario government is taking chances with the lives of Ontario residents through its "wait and see" stance.

He said Ontario Environment Minister William Newman made "a terrible blunder" in attempting to sooth anxieties following Dr. Shulman's disclosures.

The NDP member said he believes asbestos in drinking water is a "far more serious carcinogen (cancer-causing agent) than tobacco," and advised persons drinking water from the Great Lakes to install distillation units in their homes.

Consumers Oppose Hike

OTTAWA (CP) — The Consumers' Association of Canada (CAC) has launched legal efforts to halt proposed rail passenger fare increases to take effect Jan. 15.

The consumers' association said Tuesday it has asked the Canadian transport commission for permission to appeal proposed 15-percent rail fare increases filed in mid-December by CP Rail and Canadian National Railways.

The association also requested an interim order to hold up the increases for 120 days. This would allow the commission to hold a public hearing on the fare increase, the consumers' group said.

A commission spokesman said it has not yet been decided whether it will hear the CAC applications.

Sugar Booster

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Penwalt Corp. said Tuesday it is testing a chemical that might increase sugar production by 25 per cent.

The substance, known as slpenthol, prevents matured sugar cane from converting sucrose into lower sugars, increasing the yield in each acre of raw sucrose, which is then refined into sugar.

Basford Better

OTTAWA (CP) — Revenue Minister Ron Basford has left hospital and begun a Florida vacation after medication was found to treat his circulatory ailment, a spokesman said Tuesday.

Eight Accused Guards Absent Day of Beating

TORONTO (CP) — Jail records produced Tuesday at the royal commission investigating allegations of guard brutality at the Toronto Jail showed eight of the 15 guards alleged to have beaten James Frost, a prisoner there last spring, were not working at the time and another had not yet been hired.

Christopher Marshall, 27, now serving six years in Kingston penitentiary for armed robbery, began testifying Monday in detail before County Judge Barry Shapiro about the alleged beating of Frost.

By Tuesday, Marshall had named 13 of the 15 guards he said "waded in" to punch Frost.

Robert Carter, lawyer for the guards, produced attendance records for May 25, date of the alleged beating, which showed eight of the guards Marshall named were off duty. Another was not hired by the jail until June 3.

Under questioning, Marshall wavered on his identification of some guards, but remained firm in his identification of others.

Horn Wed

MONTREAL (CP) — Kahn-Tineta Horn, director of policy planning with the department of Indian affairs, has married her longtime companion Dr. George Miller, Miss Horn announced Tuesday.

Miss Horn, 32, a former model and Indian activist, said she plans to remain with department of Indian affairs in Ottawa "for the foreseeable future," while Dr. Miller, 43, said he will stay in La Macaza, Que., as director of Manitou College, an Indian institution, for "another year before I go to graduate school."

The couple said they spend weekends together at the Caughnawaga Reserve near Montreal with their three children, Ojistoh, 3, Kahente, 2, and Yoseres, 1.

Bail Denied

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — Mr. Justice Arthur Jessup turned down Peter Demeter's application for bail Tuesday pending his appeal of a murder conviction.

Chrysler Cuts Prices $400

DETROIT (AP) — Auto industry analysts believe other U.S. car makers may have to follow Chrysler Corp.'s lead in granting price rebates of up to $400 on specific models to increase their sales.

But spokesmen for General Motors and Ford Motor Co. said their firms had no immediate plans to discount their models.

Chrysler, with 320,000 unsold 1975 models, is launching the industry's first big price discounts since domestic car sales began plummeting more than a year ago.

Chrysler will offer the rebates to buyers of new cars and light trucks beginning Monday in an unprecedented five-week campaign which it hopes will stimulate sales.

The Chrysler campaign, scheduled to end Feb. 16, offers rebates of $20 to $300 on a specific model each week. Another $100 will be rebated on specific trade-in models that include both Chrysler and competitors' cars.

The plan is to be backed by advertising estimated to cost about $5 million.

Under the discount plan, the first of its kind in automotive history, rebates will be given to buyers directly by the company and not by the dealers.

Two Life Terms Given Torturer

LAS VEGAS (AP) — A 29-year old Edmonton man has been sentenced to two consecutive life sentences in Nevada state prison without possibility of parole for helping torture a San Jose, Calif., couple to death at a motel here.

District Judge Joseph Pavlikowski sentenced Claude Theriault, the second man to be convicted of the 1971 killing of Eugene and Mary Carone, both 47.

A third Edmonton man, Lloyd Paulette, 26, is scheduled to go on trial today for the killing.

National Food Policy Aim of Prices Board

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Food Prices Review Board has set the development of a co-ordinated national food policy as one of its goals for 1975, a board official said Tuesday.

John Morris of Ottawa, the board's director of agricultural research, said such a policy should deal with exports and other issues.

"We won't have all the answers, but we hope to reach conclusions and offer some reasonable policy alternatives for government to consider," he said. "We should make a valuable contribution to the development of a policy."

Hospital Facing Blood Shortage

Blood bank stocks at Belleville General Hospital are at a low point and hospital officials today are hoping a current supply shortage soon will ease.

If not, some surgical operations may have to be cancelled.

The situation results from a lighter-than-hoped response to Toronto blood donor clinics run by the Canadian Red Cross — blood supply centre for hospitals in the province.

The Red Cross is issuing blood only for emergencies because its supplies have dwindled to 350 units, a Toronto report said today.

This is less than half a day's normal use by the 86 hospitals in Ontario — including BGH — which draws on the Toronto central supply.

The Christmas-New Year's holiday season is a customary period for blood supplies. Toronto donor clinics that set goals of 4,000 units were 10 per cent short. Regular clinics in Toronto Monday produced only 336 units.

BGH normally receives supplies twice a week — or as required in emergencies — from the Toronto supply centre.

A check with the Red Cross today confirmed the hospital would be sent "some blood — but very little," said Leni Amann, charge technologist at the hospital blood bank.

The hospital only has "limited" supplies on hand, he said.

The bank used an average of about nine units a day.

If more supplies are not received later in the week then "I would definitely think we would have to cancel some surgery," said Mrs. Amann.

Labor Council Protests City Committee Makeup

By COLI BRUCE
Staff Reporter

The Quinte District Labor Council will make an official protest to city council that there is not one official labor representative on any one of Belleville's 34 civic committees.

Quinte District Labor Council president Doug Sword said Tuesday three council members, including himself, submitted their names as citizens interested in serving on committees. Two other council members submitted their names independently.

None was selected for committee work.

Mr. Sword said he considers the situation hypocritical in that aldermen — during the recent election — complained of a heavy workload and called for increased "grass roots participation".

All civic appointments to committees are made by council during a caucus session. There is no record of comments or votes on each applicant. The majority of civic appointments are unpaid positions.

Labor Council members Tuesday night were indignant that no member received appointment with labor leader Ian Reilly commenting, "If they had a committee drawing night soil from Hillcrest we'd be right on it."

Mr. Sword said he is "disappointed" that no labor representative was assigned to civic duties and added "I doubt if we'll ever be politically or socially acceptable to the people who run city hall."

"We were rejected, dejected, and neglected," he said.

The labor council will contact council through a letter expressing "displeasure", said Mr. Sword.

City hall ran a newspaper advertisement asking for interested citizens. Earl Dafoe, city clerk, said experience is helpful but is not generally available in the candidates.

"We have to start with fresh people as a rule," he said.

The five members of the labor council who applied for appointment are Ian Reilly, Canadian Director of union trades and labor department of the Canadian Labor Congress, Doug Sword, president of the council and president of People Against a Contaminated Environment, Jim Wiseman, member of the United Community Services board of directors with experience on the YMCA board, Carson McLaughlan, aldermanic candidate, and Jack Thomas, treasurer of the labor council.

"Unions are vitally concerned with the operation of the community," said Mr. Sword. "Council's invitation for public participation is ludicrous."

Mr. Sword said new faces are needed on Belleville's civic committees. "You won't get new ideas with the same old faces."

Spirit of Giving Alive and Well

By SHARON AIRHART
Staff Reporter

A local manufacturer donated two cartons of warm jackets.

A group of employees of the hospital collected more than $100 to make a Christmas basket for a family with seven children.

A business man took 11 lonely persons to Christmas dinner at the Four Seasons Hotel.

These are some of the extraordinary gestures made by the community in what Ruth Burrows, director of the Volunteer Bureau which operates the Christmas Sharing Program, says was a year with "more spirit abroad" than ever.

"It must be a reflection of the fact that times are a little sticky; people are aware there is more need,' she says.

A few important luxuries came with the necessities: someone donated three decorated Christmas trees, a dozen persons knitted toys and socks to go in Christmas baskets.

There were 503 baskets prepared this year, by schools, by employee groups, by individuals and some put together with donations from groups like the Salvation Army which donated the proceeds from its Christmas Concerts and a road hockey team which raised money and donated it to the program.

More than 1,200 children received toys this year through the program conducted by the Bureau and the city's firemen.

Meals on Wheels recipients weren't forgotten on Christmas Day, either.

In addition to their usual hot nourishing lunch they received a corsage made by a volunteer, Christmas cake baked by Quinte Secondary School students, and an extra cooked chicken from the Women's Christian Association.

Everyone — 52 elderly persons — in the program received a gift, too.

After Christmas, the giving continued when the Salvation Army treated elderly citizens to dinner at Sneaky Pete's.

Dead Trees Profitable

The city parks department wasn't stumped when its dead trees were refused at the area municipal dump.

It found an alternative — and created a few extra dollars for the city's treasury.

Felling and removal of dead or dying trees around the city's greenbelt is an ongoing task for parks maintenance crews.

Once felled the trees are cut into sections. Many of the smaller logs now are stockpiled by the department — for use at picnic barbecue sites in its parks system. Other timber sections find use in the department's woodwork shops. But the bigger logs serving no practical purpose were once carted to the dump.

Recently, however, dump operators have refused the bulky, space-consuming logs, say department officials.

They came up with one solution: The wood, cut to required lengths, is trucked to a Trenton pulp and paper company.

Any proceeds from sales go to city coffers.

A final solution would be a wood chipper, with which all felled timber could be slivered, said Lloyd Syer, parks director. Wood chips could be used for mulch in parks upkeep.

Protesters Defend Results of Vote

TYENDINAGA — Opponents of the elected band council on this Mohawk reserve have cautioned against any "bureaucratic doubletalk and deceitfulness" over the results of their recent referendum calling for new council elections.

Spokesman for the group Tuesday insisted Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan must act with "integrity" and call another election.

Clell Maracle, a dissenting member of the band council and a spokesman for the opposing group, said results of the plebiscite now likely will be mailed to the Indian Affairs department. A delegation then will seek a meeting in Ottawa with Mr. Buchanan.

Warnings of what they expect was issued by the council's opponents in a statement which, in turn, was a sequel to Chief William Brant's discussion of the referendum with department officials.

Chief Brant said he was told the plebiscite had to reflect a majority of the eligible voters on the reserve. The referendum showed 116-11 ballots favoring a new election from a census listing 489 voters.

In setting up the plebiscite process, the protesters said it followed the "exact process" set down by James Beckett, department attorney. In a Kingston press statement Mr. Buchanan himself also had committed himself to allowing an election if certain procedures were observed.

The opposition spokesmen said they now expect Mr. Buchanan to "honor his words" since they observed all requirements.

From Chief Brantt's comments it appears some department officials — "not the minister" — are now "hedging in their commitment about an election.

They fulfilled their commitment, said the spokesman and now have "tossed the ball" to Mr. Buchanan. They "expect him to act with integrity and schedule the date for an election by custom."

The election by custom would see the reserve chief selected by councillors elected. At present candidates for chief run separate election campaigns.

Winter Wood Work

Some parkland improvements can go on all year round — even when greenbelts are hidden by snow. Lorne Goodfellow wields axe and he and fellow city parks department reduce once-mighty oak for disposal at Highway 2 park east of Belleville, which is joint project of city and Thurlow Township.

They're Fence-mending

Safety fencing on toboggan slopes is subject to damage — but some of it is being caused by vandalism, say city parks officials. As a result checks now are made twice a week on the slopes which are proving popular winter recreation sites for city dwellers. Doing repair work at Herchimer Ave. reservoir slope Tuesday were Bob Bosma (left)and Angus Cole.

Vandalism at Toboggan Sites Causing Concern

One of the city's most popular cold-weather pastimes has been hit by a mild touch of vandalism.

Safety fences on toboggan and sled hills created by the city's parks department are being consistently damaged.

The department has added another slope this year to make a total of six toboggan hills around the city.

As a safety measure, the play areas are marked off with snowfencing.

The purpose was two-fold. The fencing marks off the sites from snowmobiles which may be using surrounding areas.

Snowfencing is pliable and absorbs the impact of any youngster who may sled off course. Some such collisions may cause damage.

But the fences are being deliberately and consistently broken, the damage marked by jagged stakes and splinters.

As a result, parks crews now check and repair the fences twice weekly, says parks director Lloyd Syer.

"Snowfencing is expensive, but we don't know of anything we can really use as an alternative," he says.

The fencing costs $40 for 100 feet.

But the slopes have proven a hit with city dwellers and are in constant use each weekend, he notes.

"So we're having some damage. But, with the number of people obviously enjoying these hills, it's still a pretty cheap form of recreation.

The slopes are at East and West Zwick's parks, Hillcrest public school, Stanley Park, and — the two newest — Herchimer Ave. reservoir and the North Park St. greenbelt area north of Highway 401.

Bureau Still Waiting For UCS Aid Decision

TRENTON — United Community Services officials in Belleville today refused to disclose whether the Citizens Bureau will receive any funds as one of 14 members of the United Way campaign.

The Trenton-based bureau expects to receive a maximum of $2,000 from United Way coffers. Since mid - summer, when a Local Initiatives Program (LIP) grant ran out, it has been short of funds.

A decision to either cut the bureau's allocation or completely end it was to have been made by members of the budget and allocation committee of the UCS at a meeting in Belleville Tuesday.

A labor source told The Intelligencer today, the budget committee had stalemated on the question of Citizen Bureau funding and that the decision would be left completely in the hands of the full board of the UCS when it meets Thursday.

Vigrinia O'Rourke, UCS president, said last week the board felt strongly that if the bureau could not arrange for a major, secondary source of money, United Way dollars may not be granted.

As of Tuesday, no other money, United ay dollars bureau.

City Concerned About Canvassing

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

A two-day blitz for charitable donations to the International Society for Krishna Consciousness (ISKCON) World Relief Fund, conducted here last Thursday and Friday by the Hare Krishna Movement, might produce discussion among officials for some form of regulation governing outside organizations whose aims parallel those of local branches.

ISKCON representatives were present on Front St. and at retail establishments throughout the city, soliciting money for their fund, and asking people to accept literature on their movement and its philosophy.

The Finanacial Appeals Review Board, which holds jurisdiction over funding drives, such as ticket sales and tag days, was not advised in advance of ISKCON's plans, and only cursory identification was provided by ISKCON representatives to those persons approached for money.

City clerk Earl Dafoe said Tuesday the issue may raise discussion among council or board members for some form of control of out-of-town appeal groups which have no representative body in the city.

"Perhaps it is something that should be regulated," he commented. "Up to this time, I don't think it has been a problem. I think this is probably the first instance in a long time."

There is no city bylaw regarding fund-raising campaigns, said Mr. Dafoe. The review board has the power to grant permission upon application, he explained. "They report to council what they have done."

When ISKCON first arrived, they informed both city police and city hall of their presence and intentions. Chief Douglas Crosbie pointed out police do not act unless complaints are received about soliciting practices.

Gary Reid of the city treasury department said the city's only power is to check on the authenticity of any group's registration number. "We try to make sure people are protected," he said.

George Thompson, review board chairman, noted "My committee has no legal authority" to stop groups from soliciting funds. "This is purely a moral thing."

Diane Settle, Belleville's CANSAVE representative, said with the lack of sufficient identification and the manner in which ISKCON solicited, "some people might feel concerned".

Mrs. Settle was approached by one man on Front St. "I thought they came on pretty strong. They were pretty pushy. They were really accosting people."

She said she felt the approach might give similar groups a bad reputation. "People lump these organizations together," she said.

Rose Marie MacMullen of 34 College St. W., one city resident approached at Towers Department Store by a young man, related, "I was going to give him change, but he asked for a bill. He said inflation was affecting everyone."

No Attempt to Deceive

There was no intent on the part of the Hare Krishna Movement to deceive city residents here during last week's ISKCON World Relief Fund campaign, a spokesman for the Toronto centre of the Krishna consciousness said Tuesday.

Duryodhanaguru Das, a public relations official explained in an interview the reason ISKCON representatives gave only brief identification to the people they approached for donations, and why their approach seemed rushed.

"A lot of people are in a hurry, so they try to make the presentation as quick as possible," he said. "It's not that we're trying to deceive anyone. We don't force people."

Literature on ISKCON was handed to donors afer they gave money to facilitate identification, he noted "We don't want them to think they've been taken," he said. "So, that's why we give out the literature."

Thief Nabbed

PICTON — A Kingston man was apprehended by town police early today during a break-in attempt at Gordon's Mens Wear on Main St.

Derick DeYoung, 25, of Kingston, was charged with break and enter after Sgt. Scott Hele and Constable Donald Camp of the Picton Police Department discovered a man at the rear of the store where a garage door had been opned and a window broken.

Four Remanded

MADOC — Four men involved in a shootout in Marmora Dec. 7 were remanded Tuesday in provincial court here for a preliminary hearing before Judge R. C. Jackson Feb. 25.

Reginald O'Shea, 21, of RR 1, Springbrook, Ronald Lloyd Walton, 38, of RR 4, Marmora and James Lawrence Walker, 34, of RR 4, Marmora, are charged with assault causing bodily harm and dangerous use of a firearm. Leo Joseph O'Shea, 26, of RR1, Springbrook, is charged with dangerous use of a firearm.

Peter Dennis Gale, 21, of Hamilton, charged with discharging a firearm with intent to wound, failed to appear.

Council Meets Jan. 21

Hastings County Council will hold its inaugural session in Belleville starting Jan. 21.

The first session of the year will be a two-day event, Carl Bateman, county administrator said Tuesday.

The formal inauguration ceremony will open the session which will also see selection of a new warden.

CAVETT - Dick Cavett and Christopher Porterfield.

For much of this book the authors have followed the format in which Dick Cavett is most at home and in which he is familiar to millions of television viewers - that of conversation. But conversation in which the tables are turned - with Christopher Porterfield acting as host and Cavett answering the questions. The result is a kind of autobiography which ranges widely and freely from boyhood in Nebraska, through experiences in Hollywood, to some famous guests on the television show.

ELIZABETH; THE LIFE AND CAREER OF ELIZABETH TAYLOR

- Dick Sheppard.

Five stormy marriages, two major scandals, a million-dollar salary, and numerus illnesses have made Elizabeth Taylor the most publicized personality in the history of show business. Dick Sheppard goes behind the headlines and tries to show her as a person - as a wife and mother, friend and actress. It is a portrait of an intelligent and complex woman with vast reserves of personality.

TRAVELS IN A DONKEY TRAP - Daisy Baker.

Daisy Baker, age 76, lives in North Devon with her daughter and son-in-law. Finding that she could no longer walk about the country and into the village, she acquired a donkey and cart. A new life opened up for her. She writes of the donkey, their rambles together and she reminisces about her life in domestic service and her marriage. A charming little book.

BABE: THE LEGEND COMES TO LIFE - Robert W. Creamer.

Here is the first in-depth, adult biography ever written about Babe Ruth, the most spectacular figure American sport has ever produced. The boy who spent most of his growing years in a school for "bad kids" became the idol of the nation. Robert Creamer tells of the games, the overeating and drinking, the flaring temperament, the tragedies and glories. This has been told before, but Mr. Creamer has spent years separating the true from the false and the real character from the legend.

MOVIE MAGIC - John Brosnan.

This intriguing book takes the reader behind the scenes of movie-making and tells the secrets of the special effects department. From a 1902 picture "Trip to the Moon", to James Bond, and "2001: a Space Odyssey", John Brosnan tells of the ingenuity, skills and techniques behind some of the most extraordinary sequences in the history of the cinema. He examines photographic effects and mechanical effects with diagrams and illustrations. The battle scenes in "Battle of Britain," the parting of the Red Sea in "The Ten Commandments," the battle with the skeletons in "Jason and the Argonauts," all are a tribute to the "Movie Magician".

MEMO FROM HELEN GAGEN, CONSUMER ADVISOR

HANDLE MEATS SAFELY IN YOUR HOME

Because they take such a large part of your food dollar, and because they are not sterile and therefore susceptible to spoilage, meats deserve tender, loving care not only during production and sale, but after buying them as well.

Whether they are fresh or frozen, get meats, poultry and fish home as fast as possible after buying. Unwrap fresh meats, place on a clean plate, cover loosely with foil or plastic and refrigerate promptly. Pop frozen meats, etc., into your freezer at once. If planning to freeze for any length of time, remove them from their wrapping and rewrap closely, excluding air. Label.

Before handling meats, thoroughly wash hands and work surfaces and be sure utensils are clean. Avoid wooden surfaces—they harbor bacteria unless scrubbed with an anti-bacterial solution. After cutting up fresh meats, wash hands, work surfaces and utensils with hot, soapy water before touching other foods.

And remember that there is danger in allowing even cooked meats to stand over 2 or 3 hours at room temperature. Hot cooked meats should be used when done, or refrigerated at once, even if it means making the refrigerator work overtime.

Little Interest in Bid For Snow Removal Jobs

City hall hasn't warmed to a proposal that would have revised its snow removal operations.

In recent weeks the Belleville branch of the Greater Ottawa Truckers Association has been seeking city interest in using its services in street storm cleanups.

It said a single telephone call to its central despatch point would mobilize its member truckers into operation.

The city hall system has its works department call out truckers logged on a rotating list after replying to public advertisements.

City manager Wilbur Purcell told council there has been no problem with this mobilization method.

Many association vehicles are tandem trucks. But, noted Mr. Purcell, the city for years has contracted for larger tractor-trailers, particularly in downtown areas, and this has proven more efficient.

However, in other city areas where the smaller tandems are used, rental periods will be shortened thus permitting more bids on removal jobs by truckers.

Mr. Purcell's report also pondered if contracting with the association would be fair to truckers who are non-members.

"Would it be fair to them to insist they be members of the association if they hoped to receive any work on snow removal in the city?" queried his report.

It would also make the city more reliant on an organization other than its own works department.

Such a situation could be projected into other possibilities: The day might come when the city would have to negotiate on rates and conditions with a single organization before it could expect service.

Missing Funds Found

Police said Tuesday a night deposit bag containing about $3,000 missing from Amodeo's Super Save Market on N. Front St. has been found.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said the money reported missing Thursday was the New Year's Eve deposit receipts of the store.

Jim Wipple, manager of the Royal Bank branch on N. Front St. said the deposit bag was wedged in the night depository and found when the unit was dismantled by a representative of a safe company.

Bleecker Contract Approved

Planning Needed If City to Get Winter Funds

To reap the benefits of senior government largesse often demands that municipalities plan ahead.

The reminder was given city council this week.

Up for approval was a $4,000 contract for consulting engineering services on an addition to the Ben Bleecker Auditorium recreation centre.

The expansion would include a storage area and recreation facility for weight-lifting—linked to the northend of the auditorium.

Ald. Ben Corké asked if such a project was the most urgent improvement needed for the building. He also questioned its priority.

Ald. Jean Smith said the expansion originally was conceived for submission under the Winter Capital Projects Fund — a scheme involving federal and provincial governments paying the cost of labor employed during winter months.

The Ben Bleecker project was not eligible for subsidy this winter.

But it is necessary to have plans for such projects ready to benefit from senior government subsidy schemes when announced, she said.

If you don't start moving at the beginning of the year there's no way you have plans ready ...," Ald. Smith warned.

"This is what happened to us on many of the renovations on the Memorial Arena."

Added Mayor Jeffrey: "Last year we had to let a lot of the money that was available to our community go down the drain because we weren't ready to use it."

Council agreed with city manager Wilbur Purcell's report that the design engineering services of Greer Galloway and Associates be retained for the project. The company's proposal was the best received from three consultants, he said.

Borrowing Bylaw Passes

City council this week gave its treasury authority to borrow up to $8,364,000 to cover civic operating expenses until tax revenues start rolling in.

However, no taxpayer need blanch at visions of huge interest payments straining city coffers-even at a time of costly money lending.

The multi-million amount is mostly a paper figure — the allowance permitted by provincial government law based on city revenue.

Actually, the treasury only borrows from the bank as money is required.

For all 1974, for instance, says treasurer Frank Morrell, such advances from the bank only cost a total $3,962 in interest payments.

The treasury generally hits its lowest resources point around this time of year. The first tax installments are due the end of February.

"So we usually run a little short of funds between mid-January and February," explained Mr. Morrell.

With the borrowing bylaw, council also passed the standard companion regulation to levy an interim tax rate until the official mill rate is produced following approval of the 1975 budget in a few months time.

Canadians Urged To Camp In Winter

OTTAWA (CP) — By limiting camping activities to the summer months, Canadians are not taking full advantage of the environment around them, says Stewart Guy.

The 22-year-old Quebec City native has been camping during the winter for four years, hiking through the woods, sleeping out and cooking food over wood fires at temperatures often below zero.

"I prefer it to summer camping. You don't have the bugs. I like the crisp mornings and you don't have to go so far to be in the middle of nowhere."

Stewart said provincial and national parks tend to be crowded in the summer but have few visitors in the winter.

Mastering the challenges of winter camping provides considerable satisfaction, he said. A keen sense of unity develops among the people camping together.

"You depend on each other for companionship and for getting through the experience."

Stewart is a staff member at the Outdoor Living Centre, which runs a four-seasons outdoor program for Ottawa high school students.

Winter camping demands considerable preparation and knowledge of basic camping skills and he recommended that first-timers go with someone already experienced in winter camping trips.

Stewart prefers cross-country skis to take him through the woods, but said snowshoes are sometimes more useful. While skis allow a hiker to cover longer distances faster, snowshoes are better for crossing terrain with thick bush cover.

Proper clothing is essential to avoid frostbite, Stewart said. Several layers of light clothing provide more warmth than heavy clothing because they trap air that provides needed insulation.

"And you can take off one layer easily and put it back on when the temperature changes."

He suggests a heavy, down-filled nylon parka, worn over a number of interior nylon vests and sweaters. Nylon warmup pants are best for the legs.

The camper should look for a winter campsite sheltered from the wind, "an area where you're well-protected and where you can reflect heat," generally near the base of a cliff or a large rock.

The camper digs a hole in the soft snow until he reaches a hard base. He then lines the hole with spruce boughs from trees in the area.

They act as a natural cushion and the snow provides good insulation.

The experienced camper spreads a camper-mat of foam rubber on top of the spruce. Using trees, he erects a lean-to which can be covered with more spruce or with polyethylene sheeting.

Stewart said he learned how to prepare a winter camp from Indians in the Mittassini reserve of northwestern Quebec last winter.

Stewart and his friends carry most of their food on packs. The Indians taught him to use bannock—a combination of flour, baking powder, salt and lard.

There are edible plants in the winter forest. Rock trips and certain mosses can be eaten after they are boiled twice as can the buds on yellow birch trees.

With a simple snare of branches and a short length of wire, rabbits and other small game can be caught.

Of course, there are dangers. Frostbite can affect exposed parts of the skin and there is a danger of getting lost. But with maps and compasses the winter hiker should not encounter trouble.

Because of the high cost of winter equipment, "to a certain degree it's an elitist sport," Stewart said.

A nylon parka can cost $85, a down sleeping bag between $75 and $120, and cross-country ski equipment $100.

In order to give more people a chance to participate in winter camping, Stewart said there should be more organized programs like the one offered by the Outdoor Living Centre.

He cited as an example the Canadian Outward Bound Mountain School in Keremeos, BC.., which offers three-week courses in ski-touring, snowshoeing and mountaineering as well as first-aid and rescue techniques.

He also urged the national parks service to extend its activities beyond the summer months.

Pays For Loyalty

LONDON (AP) — A truck driver was banned from driving for life for watching the program Six Million Dollar Man on a portable television set while he was at the wheel. "I'll go on watching Six Million Dollar Man," he said after his conviction. "I wouldn't miss it for the world."

New Delhi Homeless In Danger of Freezing

BOMBAY (CP) — Sankaran Pillay, a carpenter from India's sunny state of Kerala, suddenly found himself jobless and homeless in New Delhi.

"I could not even go out in search of a job because no one told me North India can be very cold in winter," Pillay, 45, said. "Back in Kerala, there is just no winter."

He had been living under a road bridge, making $4 a day by doing odd carpentry jobs. Had it not been for a kindly welfare worker, Pillay would almost certainly have frozen to death.

Now he is lodged at a night shelter. The government has built nearly two dozen such shelters, in which nearly 5,000 citizens have found temporary homes, receiving bedding and blankets free of charge.

Officials estimate that at least 15,000 people in New Delhi may have to be accommodated in shelters when the winter reaches its peak by the end of January. Plans are under way to place several hundred in vacant government building .

But the homeless in most Indian cities are not so lucky. Already, more than 100 have died in a cold wave in Bihar state and 12 deaths are reported from the states of Uttar Pradesh and Rajasthan.

The Bihar government said two years ago that "no one will suffer because of cold." But a plan to build night shelters for the poor could not be pushed through because of shortage of funds.

come to the rescue of the poor in several winter-bound northern areas.

More than 10,000 have found shelter from the icy winds blowing down from the snow-covered Himalayas in temples, mosques and churches.

One temple in Hardwar, 200 miles from New Delhi, has taken in 300 women and children.

A Roman Catholic church in Lucknow has offered to look after 200 homeless citizens during the winter.

"We are looking after 600 homeles people," said Ram Dayal Sharma, trustee of a Hardwar temple. "The funds come from rich people in big cities."

Sharma said his winter guests belong to all religions and include several Western hitrhhikers and hippies.

As Only Liberal on Prairies Lang Had to Play Many Roles

REGINA (CP) — As the only Liberal member of Parliament from Winnipeg to the Rockies between October, 1972, and July, 1974, Otto Lang was the chief federal spokesman to and for the Prairies on virtually any subject. His role gained him the unofficial title of Minister of Everything.

As minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, a responsibility which is more familiar to westerners than his justice portfolio, Mr. Lang has clashed with provincial governments and farm organizations.

Yet he has not only kept his Saskatoon-Humboldt riding while Liberals were defeated almost everywhere else on the Prairies. He has put virtually all his programs into effect and felt secure enough this year to question the low Crowsnest Pass limits on railway grain tariffs—a move that earlier generations of Prairie politicians would have considered political suicide.

In the current federal-provincial dispute over resource taxation he delivered the warning that Ottawa would impose unprecedented taxes on provincial Crown corporations if they sought to divert oil revenue from federal tax collectors.

In an interview with The Canadian Press, Mr. Lang criticized Saskatchewan Premier Allen Blakeney for conduct "detrimental to Confederation," promised a new formula within six to 12 months to make freight rates fair to the west, and said his greatest pleasure in politics has been seeing political leaders from other regions come to understand and sympathize with Prairie problems.

Following is a partial transcript of the interview:

Q: How serious is the present clash between Ottawa and the western provinces over such issues as resource revenues, feed grains, grain marketing and transport? Do you agree, for example, with Premier Blakeney's assertion that the loyalty of Western Canadians to Confederation is being eroded?

A: I have no doubt that some of the things that politicians like Premier Blakeney are saying are detrimental to Confederation. But I think that's taking a very narrow and short-run view. The stabilization plan will over the years likely benefit Saskatchewan on average about $80 million in terms of current prices. . . . That's a sudden, additional transfer into Saskatchewan—to the farmers, of course, not to the government—and that really has to be put into account in any kind of reckoning like this. . . .

Q: In a recent interview, Mr. Blakeney said that he didn't want to look at the whole picture in terms of one particular issue. He said he felt that on the average Saskatchewan was only getting back from the federal government its fair share considering the amounts that Saskatchewan has put in. Do you feel, for example, that in judging the rights or wrongs of the resource-tax issue that you should consider such things as the stabilization plan?

A: I think each issue can be looked at on its own. But I think that if you're going to make such generalizations as to say that this is endangering the very spirit of Confederation then you've got to look at the whole picture. . . .

Q: Do you see any inconsistency between holding down the price paid by eastern consumers for Saskatchewan oil and allowing, say, Ontario steel manufacturers to charge the Prairies the going rate for their product?

A: Well, the difference really is that in the case of oil there is no free, competitive international market. . . . A group of Arab countries determined that they wanted about $11 for their oil. Nobody has done that kind of thing in regard to steel. If they have, inside the country, we'll use the Combines Act to try to stop them from doing it.

We can't use the Combines Act against the Arabs so the world is stuck with $11 oil. . . . The question of what the exact price of oil in Canada should be is one then of judgment. And the judgment will include the question of a high enough price to discourage over-use, a high enough price to encourage exploration and development, a high enough price probably to make alternative sources of energy . . . attractive.

Q: Do you foresee as great a battle with provincial governments and farm organizations over your proposal to remove the Crowsnest rates as you've had, for example, with your feed grains policy or the 1971 stabilization policy?

A: I can't predict what kind of tactic the various parties and provinces will take. My proposal, of course, is not to remove the Crow rate but rather to transfer the benefit in a different way . . . by paying it into a Crow rate fund which would then be distributed directly to farmers.

Q: Why do you think so many of your policies have come under such harsh criticism from organizations like the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool and, indeed, the provincial governments?

A: I don't think you can lump those two together. The provincial governments, of course, have been politically opposed to my party and therefore they're apt to jump on anything. . . . A good number of my policies have been warmly endorsed by the pool. The ones that get more attention are the ones they oppose . . . .

Q: Turning to transportation, it's been 18 months since federal representatives promised to remove discrimination against western food processors and manufacturers. How much longer do we have to wait for action on this?

A: It's a complicated question and it's not easy to just invent a formula and apply it to make sure that rates are not unreasonable. It may take another six months or 12 months to develop the formula and put it into place. . . .

Q: What other major problems remain for western agriculture?

A: The most significant is the renovation of the transportation and handling system. This is not just a matter of closing old elevators or some lines. The really important question is getting the good elevators where they should be and upgrading the rail lines so that they can carry the hopper cars and handle them quickly and effectively. The improvements are going to require hundreds of millions of dollars of investment each year for a number of years. . . .

Q: And that would also involve massive investments in the port facilities?

A: Terminals and ports . . . switching yards, . . . all of these things are important in making sure that we can move what I believe will be ever-increasing volumes of grain for export. . . .

Q: What has been your greatest disappointment as chief federal spokesman for Prairie needs and what achievement has given you the most personal pleasure?

A: My greatest frustration is the amount of time wasted because people attacking new programs or new ideas . . . do so by distorting and misinterpreting everything, even when they know better. . . . My greatest satisfaction has come from seeing political leaders from all parts of the country wanting to understand the problems of my region and to be completely fair to it when they do understand it.

Q: You are referring to the sequence of events started at the Calgary conference?

A: . . . The Calgary conference . . . was partly a culmination and partly a new beginning: a culmination because it represented a willingness by the government to commit itself to a re-examination of national policy in regard to the west and a commitment to a new national policy. . . .

Mr. Everything

As the only Liberal member of Parliament from Winnipeg to the Rockies between October, 1972 and July, 1974 and the chief federal spokesman for the Prairies on any subject, Otto Lang gained the unofficial title of Minister of Everything. In the current federal-provincial dispute over resource taxation, Mr. Lang has warned that Ottawa would impose unprecedented taxes on provincial Crown corporations if they sought to divert oil revenue from federal tax collectors. Violence Plagues Vancouver's Large East Indian Community

VANCOUVER (CP) — Juvenile delinquency, fear and ignorance are blamed for violence plaguing the city's growing East Indian community.

Several East Indian families have been driven from their homes in the Killarney area of southeast Vancouver after beatings, rock-throwing and harassment from youths.

The area is primarily working class with a tradition of being the toughest in the city. East end youths have always been rough on each other.

Since 1960, the East Indian community has grown in the southeast section of the city which has had the biggest rate of petty crime in Vancouver for the last 20 years. Nearby are the Fraser River's job-producing mills and factories. Among other things, East Indians have been accused of lowering wages and living standards in the area.

The 1971 census found 36,285 people of Chinese origin and 8,940 of Japanese descent in Greater Vancouver. But it is the East Indian community, estimated between 15,000 and 20,000, that has been the focus for violence.

In one incident, youths taunted worshippers at the Sikh temple until a group of Sikhs, armed with boards and sticks, gave chase. Two youths were beaten.

Dr. Setty Pendakur, defeated in November in his bid for re-election as alderman, put part of the blame on growing racism. Now a professor of town planning at University of British Columbia, he came to Canada from India 20 years ago.

Ignorance about East Indians is rife in the rest of the community. They include Moslems and Hindus from India, Fijians and Ugandan Moslems originally from southern India. By far the largest number are Sikhs, Punjabi from northern India.

A white youth said a Sikh family was driven from its home after "Hindus" threw stones at a group of white girls. It appeared from his statements that the gang which attacked the family made no effort to find out if family members were involved in the stone-throwing incident.

Not all the confrontations have been with whites. Police said an East Indian family was harassed by two youths—one East Indian and the other Chinese. On the west side of the city, five East Indian high school students were beaten with sticks and wrenches by young Chinese. Police said the attackers were motivated by racial prejudice.

Various explanations and solutions have been given for the confrontations.

Dr. Pendakur said violence arose because Vancouver has had too many East Indian immigrants since 1969. He has confidence that the polyglot nature of Canadian culture will prevail and heal the breaches. But, he said, the federal government must not bring in more people than the country can absorb.

He said recent immigration has caused problems within the East Indian community which was previously small and well-integrated but now is filled with divisions.

He said in an interview that critics of East Indians fasten on clothes, hair, music and language.

When Dr. Pendakur talked to about 80 Grade 11 and 12 students, they said East Indians are putting Canadians out of work and lowering wages and living standards.

He was asked to talk to the students after many of them told their teacher they didn't want East Indians in the area.

Dr. Pendakur said recent immigrants, of all national groups, are ready to work harder, for less money, than Canadians. However, because British Columbia, especially the lower mainland—is heavily unionized, wages cannot be driven down, he said.

It is in the minimum wage fields that East Indians are welcomed by employers, Dr. Pendakur said. They do jobs which white Canadians will not perform, at least not for long.

He said the rapid increase in East Indians has shown up in a startling change in the population of one elementary school where the students now are 80 per cent East Indian, up from 10 per cent a few years ago.

When he walked around the neighborhood he found the racial breakdown in the school was not a reflection of the breakdown in the area. He said families with young children are sending them farther away.

"We must tackle this problem right now, before ghettoes are created," he said.

Dr. Pendakur lives with his family in a gracious house in the west side.

Inderjit Singh Kohaly, publisher of the quarterly magazine Indo-Canadian, said about 75 per cent of the East Indian population of Greater Vancouver are laborers, mostly in the lumber industry which has been hit by slumping markets.

He said many men have been laid off but are scrambling to find other kinds of work. Mr. Kohaly and other community leaders said East Indians have a horror of welfare.

They'd rather work for low wages than take welfare.

Tara Singh Bains, 52, vice-president of the Sikh temple—scene of several confrontations—said the violence is caused by juvenile delinquency, not racism.

He said he spoke as a Canadian who had been in the country for 21 years.

"Canadian society is getting negligent," he said. "We talk too much and don't do enough about juvenile delinquency."

Inspector Doug McLeod said Vancouver police are trying to head off incidents before they happen.

He said police have been in touch with parents of youths who harass East Indian families to warn them but often find the parents are not interested.

East Indians often do not understand Canadian police, preferring to settle matters themselves, he said.

Venezuelan Drivers Face Psychiatrists

CARACAS (Reuter) — Venezuelans will shortly have to prove to a psychiatrist that they are fit to drive and are not potential killers behind a steering wheel.

Health Minister Blas Bruni Celli said that under a new law being presented to Congress all learner-drivers will have to take an examination to determine if they have aggressive impulses.

They will be interviewed by psychiatrists who are devising special tests and questionnaires.

Tough standards will also be set by examiners for the conventional road test.

"We are going to ensure that potential assassins are kept off the roads," the health minister said.

Official statistics show one person is killed in a road accident every two hours in Venezuela—some 4,380 a year.

Venezuela is the world's fifth-largest oil producer. Gas is cheap, money is easy and big American cars are assembled here.

For most Venezuelans a large car is an essential status symbol.

"He who doesn't have a car here is lost," one motor dealer said.

Venezuelans drive their cars down the modern city highways at hair-raising speeds. On the narrower streets they keep their foot hard on the accelerator.

There's no lane discipline The rule seems to be if there's a gap in the next lane make for it. A glance in the rear mirror is only an afterthought, usually too late.

It is not all that unusual to see as many as six collisions in a half-hour taxi drive through the city centre

Unlike most other Latin-American republics, in Venezuela even the poor can afford large cars.

A down-payment of less than $500 is enough to put four more wheels on to the crowded roads.

One in four of the capital's two million inhabitants own cars and the national average of one car to every five people is the highest in South America.

Middle-class families often own two or three cars.

The capital itself resounds day and night to the din of blaring horns.

Sometimes traffic is so heavy that it takes half a day to make two trips in the city centre. Traffic jams often build up for six miles.

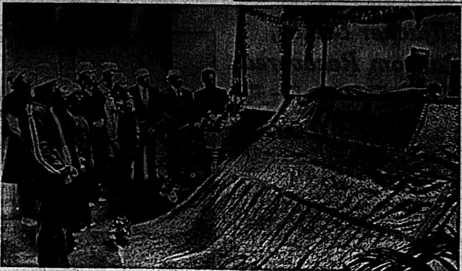
The jams are sometimes made even worse by a strict local law

Anyone involved in a car accident must leave his car exactly where it comes to rest, even if it blocks three lanes on a busy road, until the police arrive—if they can get there.

The car is becoming a national plague. A justice ministry official said.

Because of the difficulty of driving in the city, thousands have taken to motorcycles.

There are more than 150,000 of them in Caracas and, true to form, one is involved in an accident every 20 minutes.



Temple Tour

Shoes are doffed and temporary turbans were worn by students and teachers from a Vancouver high school when they toured a Sikh temple and attended a service as an introduction to the Sikh religion. Juvenile delinquency, fear and ignorance have been blamed for violence plaguing Vancouver's East Indian community. (CP Photo)

Not Should We Eat Less But Rather How Much Less

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Dr. Richard Vosburgh, dean of the department of consumer and family affairs of the University of Guelph, says the question of whether North America should cut down food consumption is no longer important or valid.

Dr. Vosburgh, who recently saw starvation during a two-week trip to Ghana, said in an interview the real questions are when North America should reduce consumption and by how much.

"North America has a standard of living that is just fantastic," he said. "I used to be able to say that, know it, believe it and not have the emotional charge associated with it since I've been to Africa."

Dr. Vosburgh's expertise is in world food marketing—the process of quickly and efficiently moving food supplies from one area to another.

One suggested solution to the food shortage has been a world food bank into which countries would deposit surplus food for withdrawal by hungry countries.

Part of the problem could be solved by improved storage and distribution of food.

"The last couple of generations have seen a tremendous emphasis on food production and very little on distribution," Dr. Vosburgh said.

One of the many church agencies trying to fight the shortage is the Mennonite Central Committee of Akron, Pa.

The committee director, Dr. Peter Dyck, said North Americans will have to get by with less food and probably spend more for what they have.

Dr. Dyck recently was awarded an honorary doctor of laws degree from the University of Waterloo for more than 30 years service in world relief.

The committee was created in 1920 as a response to famine in the Ukraine following war, revolution and a severe drought. Dr. Dyck now is directing the committee's attempts to improve the agricultural abilities of Third World countries.

"There were good farmers in the Ukraine—why couldn't they put seeds out?" Dr. Dyck said. "We were sensible enough to realize that it was going to rain again."

But the Third World today knows little of advanced agricultural techniques.

"An agriculturalist today is almost worth his weight in gold—if he has a degree and is willing to get dirt under his fingernails," Dr. Dyck said.

Hijacker Seized, Ransom Recovered

LONDON (AP) — Police at an airport north of London overpowered the hijacker of a British airliner Tuesday night, freed the five members of the plane crew unharmed and recovered $230,000 in ransom.

The man commandeered the British Airways BAC111 as it was preparing to land at Heathrow Airport here after a flight from Manchester.

The pilot, Captain Harry Lea, 53, radioed that the hijacker was armed with a .32-calibre revolver and a canister filled with explosives. Police said later the gun was a realistic-looking toy and the canister contained no bomb.

Finally, officials handed over a parachute and the ransom.

Security chiefs decided to have Lea fly over England for more than an hour, then land at Stansted, an airport for charter craft north of London, where they would try to make the hijacker believe he was in France.

Two planeloads of troops and police were rushed to Stansted, and all signs and billboards there were covered, but the ruse did not work. Police said the hijacker realized he was not in France and demanded a car to take him to Dover, on the English Channel. When that was refused, he tried to make a break, taking steward Allan Bond, 33, as a hostage.

A police dog handler grabbed the hijacker a few yards from the plane, and in the melee the handler's dog bit Bond. His wound was miner.

Argonotes, a monthly newsletter published by the Toronto Argonaut Football Club, has a front page message from team owner Bill Hodgson.

Says Hodgson: "As a sports fan, I know that rookies usually make mistakes which cost games and seasons. We had 17 first-year players on our squad (in 1974) and we also had an 18th rookie in our front office-myself.

"Our rookie players benefitted from the 1974 season and I can assure you that I benefitted most of all.

"Consequently, we Argonauts are looking ahead to 1975 with optimism and enthusiasm."

Later in his remarks, Hodgson states: "If loyal fans were the sole factor in winning a championship the Argos would win the Grey Cup every year. All I am promising you for 1975 is a total effort by our entire organization to realize that objective as quickly as possible and to provide you with exciting, entertaining football."

Best of luck, sir.

Bill Friday won't be leaving the ranks of hockey officials, after all.

Rated the No. 1 referee in the World Hockey Association, Friday recently announced his retirement, stating he was tired of the heavy workload and continual travel.

Friday met with Bud Poile, the hockey league's vice-president of operations and the popular official has agreed to stay on for the remainder of the season at least.

Said Poile: "We met with Bill and other officials and everything is straightened out.

"We'll ease Bill's travelling schedule and he'll fulfill his contractual obligations to us."

Wellington Peewees are flying in their Trent Valley League action this season.

After 10 games, the league leading Wellington youngsters have yet to taste defeat, coming up with nine wins and a tie, good for 19 points.

Bancroft and Campbellford share the runnerup spot with identical 6-2-2 marks for 14 points each. And Madoc is right in step with 13 points (6-3-1).

Following in order are Frankford with 10 points; Colborne and Stirling, nine each; Brighton, eight; Tweed, four; Marmora, two and Warkworth, none.

The Warkworth youngsters have been having their problems. A new entry, carrying an Ontario Minor Hockey Association E classification, the Warkworth team has had trouble getting ice time and has played only eight games to date.

Campbellford's Art Nicholas and Brighton's Carl Deline was waging a ding-dong battle for the lead in the points race and they've got company in the persons of Glenn McQuaid of Wellington and Marmora's Francis Doyle.

Nicholas has 24 goals and 10 assists for 34 points and a share of the lead with Deline who has scored 22 goals and earned 12 helpers.

McQuaid is just two off the pace with 32 points (20-12) and Doyle has 30 (22-8).

Next in line is Bancroft's Robbie Sargent and Frankford's Grant McCrae with 23 points each. Colborne's Andy Fawcett with 22; Ray Irwin and Jamie Newton of Campbellford, Jeff Rupnow, Bancroft, Brian Doxtator, Stirling and Alan Currie, Brighton each has 21 points while tied with 20 apiece are John Jackson of Wellington, Scott Hayton, Bancroft and Michael Vilneff, Marmora.

Kingston's Wayne Dumont tucks the puck underneath Belleville Lion's Major Midget goalie, Allan Portt to put his club in front 2-1 in Tuesday night's Ontario Minor Hockey Association contest at the Memorial Arena. Dumont scored despite the defensive efforts of Belleville's David McBride. The Kingston scorer also added an assist to his output to lead his club to 4-3 win. The game was the first of a best-of-five opening round playoff series.

Lions Club Edged in Opener

The Belleville Lions Major Midgets dropped a heartbreaker Tuesday night as they opened their best-of-five Ontario Minor Hockey Association playoffs with a 4-3 loss to Kingston at the Memorial Arena.

"You can't win games when you miss chances like we did," said Lions' Coach, Robb Burrowes. "They scored a couple of easy ones and we didn't connect on ours."

The locals missed at least four clean-cut goals in the final seven or eight minutes of the game. Slow reactions in the slot and a few zigs when there should have been zags were the only things that kept the Lions from wining the game.

Kingston coach, Gerry Wagar, commented before the game that his club would have to stay on top of the Lions all the way through the contest.

"They're a scrappy bunch," said Wagar. "We know we can't let up or they'll beat us.

"I think we should beat them, though," he added.

Wagar's gang never let up, nor did they portray any overconfidence in their style of play. Belleville simply outhustled them over a major portion of the contest.

When it was all over Wagar was a little less confident of his chances and wasn't prepared to make any predictions.

Burrowes justifiably stated "We should have won that game."

As for predictions the Belleville coach said, "I think the series is going to go five games and I think we can beat them."

The Lions are going to have their hands full coming back from this one. The next two games in the series are on Kingston ice. Thursday at 7 p.m. and Tuesday, January 21, at 7 p.m. are the playing dates.

Things aren't quite as bad as they seem, however. Belleville should have their starting goalie, Mark Meehan, back in commission for the rest of the series. He's been out the last week-and-a-half with a knee injury.

"All we need is to start connecting on a few of those chances," said Burrowes. "That's all it will take."

Belleville got off to the slowest start in their history this season, but in recent weeks have really put things together. While Kingston finished second, and Belleville fourth in the league standings, the locals have defeated the Limestone City crew in their last two meetings.

Belleville put together a strong power play and an excellent penalty killing display scored all three of their goals while playing with a man advantage and did not give up a goal while playing shorthanded. The visitors took six of the game's 10 infraction calls.

A solid forechecking attack led by Tony Meagher, Kelvin Pope and Paul Hayman kept Kingston off balance throughout most of the contest. A good backchecking effort by all the forwards and good positional play by the local's defencemen gave goalie Allan Portt plenty of support.

The difference in the game came at 1:42 of the third period when Kingston's Brian Clancy shot the puck from a sharp angle from the Belleville corner and it deflected into the net off Portt's stick.

"Flukey," said a Kingston spectator, "but they all count on the scoreboard."

Other Kingston goals were scored by Dan Dundon, Neil aulkner and Wayne Dumont.

Belleville replied with singles from Mike Wilman, Clint Riendeau and Meagher. Add to 6 point ma

Three Cats on All-star Squad

The Belleville Bobcats placed three players on the East Division Metro Junior B all-star team selected on the weekend. Jim Richardson, Rob Foster and Dave Taylor will all be skating for the East when they take on the West Division all-stars at the Memorial Arena on Wednesday, January 22.

Bobcat trainer, Chris Rutledge, was selected to handle those duties for east division squad.

This is Richardson's second consecutive selection to the squad. This year, as the Bobcat's leading point-getter with 17 goals and 25 assists, he was chosen with Pickering's Steve Falkner and Kingston's Kip Atkin to fill the spots at right wing.

Foster, the Cats second highest point-getter with 14 goals and 18 assists, will join Cam Small of Pickering and Jeff Rorabeck of Oshawa Legionaires at centre ice.

Taylor, Pickering's Kevin Owen and Peterborough's Jake Ayotte were selected to cover the right side of the blueline.

The left defensive spots were filled by Pickering's Bruce West, Larry Gibson of Peterborough and Mario Giallonardo of Markham.

Left wing was filled by Chuck Durocher, of Pickering, Cam McGregor of Kingston and Whitby's Bill Christie.

Pickering goalie Jim Metz will start the contest and Rob Duncan of Peterborough will take over in the second half.

While the Pickering Panthers monopolized the ballots for the eastern squad with six selections, Bramalea Blues had six and Wexford Warriors took five of the 20 possible selections to the western team.

Barry Oakes, of Bramalea, and Bruce Knaggs of Wexford, will be sharing the goaltending duties. In front of them on the left side will be Bramalea's Rob Duggan, Bill Metcalf, of Wexford, and Dave Brennan of North York. On right defence is Bramalea's Ian Joyce, Wexford's Jim McIntosh and Geoff Shaw of Toronto Young Nationals.

At centre ice is Doug Crawford, of Bramalea, Brian Cleaver, of Wexford, and John Stornic of St. Michael's Buzzers.

Left wing spots are filled by Steve Beasley, of Bramalea, Dave Northern, of Wexford, and Craig Ahbe of Toronto King City Red Wings.

Bramalea's Dean Hartwell was selected to fill one right wing spot and Loris Muzzatti, of St. Michael's, and Alf Colquhoun of Etobicoke, earned the other two.

Rick Hay of Bramalea will coach the west team while Sherry Bassin of Pickering will guide the east. Jack Minaker of Markham Royals was chosen the east division manager and Gil Palmeroy, of Kingston, will assist Rutledge as trainer.

For the west, Wexford's Don Linthwaite will manage and Roy Hesslop of the Red Wings, and Jim Dillon of St. Mike's, will handle the trainers chores.

BCI Senior - Junior Tournament

Local Seniors Tops in Running

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

It looks as though basketball enthusiasts are in for another fine, competitive display of the sport through the 1975 edition of the BCI Senior - Junior Tournament this Saturday.

What makes it even better for local spectators is that tournament favorites are all from this area.

Nicholson Nicks will be just one of the local teams involved. Last year, the nucleus of the senior squad was junior. In the junior half of the tourney, the Nicks went all the way to the final before bowing out

This year, that junior team has advanced to senior. Though they're mainly first year, it hasn't hurt them a bit. So far this season the Nicks have won the Trenton Black and Gold Championship, the Consolation title at the Durham Tournament and were runners-up in the Queen's University Christmas Tournament. In it they lost the championship by one point.

Even though the Nicks are an 'A' school by rating (according to enrolment) they are considered a real threat in the BCI tournament. Tourney convener, Bill Miller, says, "They play excellent defence and when shooting well they can beat anyone, any place, anytime." Miller is so confident of their ability, despite their lack of senior experience, he rates them the number one 'A' senior team in Ontario.

Led by 6-foot-5 Dale Wilson and 6-foot-3 Jeff Boyle the Nicks are given a good chance to win it all.

Nicholson isn't the only pre-tournament favorite from Belleville however. The Quinte Saints and BCI seniors are both very much in the running for the championship.

Quinte seniors have a long list of successes behind them. And this season are consistently adding to that list. They won the BCI tourney two years ago. They were all-Ontario champs in AA playoffs last year.

In early December the Saints defeated Ottawa Lisgar in an exhibition match. Lisgar is the defending AAA Ontario Champ. Quinte won the Regiopolis tournament in Kingston last month and during the Christmas break went all the way to finals of the coveted Carleton University Tournament.

The Saints only have two players back from last season's senior club, but those two are more than enough. Steve Hale and Steve McCracken are two of the better shooters and playmakers in the city and with returnees like them Quinte needn't ask for more.

Take 3

The Saints have a well balanced club, but one of their greater assets is their defence. Miller says, "their pressure defence alone can win games for them, but when they're shooting well they are devastating."

Then comes the BCI seniors. That club is also a top contender for the tournament title. They were third in all-Ontario AA last season and are definitely in the running this year.

Early in December they played an exhibition game against Ottawa Lisgar. BCI ended Lisgar's 52 game winning streak that included the Ontario AAA Secondary School Championship last season.

BCI took top honors at the Zoo Invitational tournament last month and over the Christmas break earned the Consolation title at the University of Waterloo Tournament.

Larry Wilson is the team's top scorer and one of the better rebounders in the area. Right behind Wilson is Gary Donovan. He's a real playmaker and has to be rated among the best ball-handlers in the province. Both players have been extensively scouted by universities throughout the province.

Another local entry in the tournament that cannot be discounted is Trenton. The Tigers are basically comprised of last year's junior AA Central Ontario Champs. Miller considers them the tourney's dark horse.

The remaining four teams in the tourney are from out of the Quinte area. Last year's champion, North Albion Collegiate from Toronto, will be back to defend their title.

Fellows Secondary, from Pembroke, an all-Ontario AA competitor last year will also be looking for a shot at the tournament title and Orillia District is throwing in their hat. Orillia is basically a junior team, but they've been so successful at the junior level they have moved up to senior for this event.

Rounding out the eight senior squads trying to capture top honors is Kingston Collegiate. They competed in all-Ontario AAA last year and edged Nicholson out of a tournament championship by one point at the Queen's Christmas Tournament. The KCVI club is very strong and has a lot of height and is therefore rated the number contender from outside the Quinte area.

BCI Junior Title Up for Grabs

The championship title will be up for grabs this time around in the junior half of the BCI Senior-Junior Basketball Tournament this Saturday.

Neither last year's champs nor the runners-up will be back this year.

The tourdey's defending champion, Orillia District, has not entered a junior squad in the event. Instead Orillia has taken the best of the juniors and combined them with the best of their seniors and entered the team in the senior half of the competition.

Nicholson's junior squad from last year, the other finalist, has advanced to the senior level and the school has not entered a junior team.

With the tournament title open to all of the eight teams, it's anyone's guess who will take it.

Tournament convener Bill Miller feels Oshawa Central has the best chance. "They're well coached and have some excellent shooters and therefore I'd give them th nod as the pre-tournament favorite."

However, to discount BCI's own junior squad would be a grave mistake. Earlier in the year they won the Black and Gold Tournament in Trenton, and in league play this season have demonstrated a well balanced scoring attack and an aggressive defence.

Also entered from the local league is Quinte. The Junior Saints have been improving with every game and should prove a threat.

Last year both Quinte and BCI were tournament semifinalists.

Two other local squads in the running are Moira and Centennial. The Trojans have made an adequate showing this season, considering they have been unable to practice regularly because of gym alterations. The Chargers, from Centennial, have simply had trouble making the pieces fit this season. Possibly the jig-saw could fall together for the tournament.

"Both those teams could be in the championship game if things go right for them," said Miller.

Rounding out the eight team list are Kingston Collegiate, Cobourg East, and Fellows Secondary, from Pembroke.

Rollins Falls To Kingston

Rollins Major Peewees closed out the season on a sour note Tuesday night as thy lost to Kingston 7-3 in Ontario Minor Hockey Association action.

The locals got singles from Tony Parks, Charlie Doran and Louis Crawford.

Rollins meet Oshawa in the first round of the playoffs and this Saturday take on the Frankford Bantams at the Dick Ellis Rink at 9:3 p.m.

Caps Get Tie With Boston

By GLENN COLE
The Canadian Press

The high-flying Boston Bruins rolled into the Capital Centre at Landover, Md., Tuesday night and took on Washington Capitals, consistent losers this National Hockey League season.

The Bruins, who had road wins over Los Angeles Kings and Minnesota North Stars late last week, met a club that had managed only two goals in its last three games and had been blanked in its last two outings.

The Bruins had smashed the Capitals 10-4 and 12-1 in Boston earlier in the season, and expected an other successful night. But the Capitals battled to a 3-3 tie, and the shocked the Bruins players didn't want to talk about it.

In other action, California Seals surprised St. Louis Blues 3-2 and New York Islanders downed Toronto Maple Leafs 5-3.

The Capitals came from behind three times to gain their draw with the Bruins before 15,222 fans.

Washington's Mike Marson registered his second two-goal performance of his initial NHL season but Peter Laframboise got the game-tying goal at 3:50 of the third period.

Ron Low, beaten for nine goals in the Caps' 10-0 loss to Montreal Saturday night, was outstanding in the Washington net after starting goalie Michel Belhumeur left the game mid-way through the first period with a pulled muscle in his side. The two goalies combined for 41 saves.

The Bruins banned reporters from their dressing room after the game.

"They're in a bad mood," said coach Don Cherry. "They're very tired. They just feel very bad in there.

"We didn't play our hitting game. It showed. When we hit, we win."

Rookie Fred Ahern, called up from the minors for the Seals game last Sunday against Philadelphia Flyers, scored his second goal in as many outings to give California its win over St. Louis.

Ahern fired the puck off goaltender John Davidson's stick into the top of the net with 4:51 remaining in the third period.

The Blues jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first period on goals by Pierre Plante and Chuck Lefley but the Seals, unbeaten in their last four starts, got second-period goals from Joey Johnston and Al MacAdam to tie the score.

The Islanders scored three times in the first period and held on to defeat the Leafs.

Billy Harris, Eddie Westfall, Dave Lewis, Garry Howatt and Denis Potvin scored for New York. Ron Ellis, George Ferguson and Jim McKenny replied for Toronto.

The Islanders announced they had acquired centre Jude Drouin from Minnesota North Stars in exchange for veteran right winger Craig Cameron.

The deal was described as the second part of a trade last Sunday which saw the Islanders acquire Jean-Paul Parise in exchange for Doug Rombough and Ernie Hicke.

Stags Bailed Out

DETROIT (AP) — Tuesday was a belated payday for Michigan Stags as the World Hockey Association stepped in with cash to bail out the financially-troubled team ownership.

John Kanel of the WHA office in California flew in the money for the bi-weekly salary payments, which had been due on Jan. 1. The team payroll is believed to be about $12,500 every two weeks.

WHA president Dennis Murphy said Tuesday the league would try to save the Stags and is doing everything possible to try to locate more financial help in Detroit or elsewhere.

Kanel said every effort would be made to keep the Stags in Detroit. He said he was almost certain that the team would finish the season.

Leads Phoenix

Howie Young Gets Chance

By NEIL CAMPBELL
The Canadian Press

Phoenix right winger Howie Young had nothing to complain about after the Roadrunners edged Toronto Toros 3-2 in a World Hockey Association game Tuesday night.

The 37-year-old veteran, who contends he has not been getting enough ice time with the Roadrunners, played a regular shift against the Toros and helped set up the last two Phoenix goals.

First he set up a first-period goal by Michel Cormier to give Phoenix a 2-1 lead. Then he got the second assist on John Migneault's insurance goal in the third period.

Young, once a promising National Hockey League defenceman with Detroit Red Wings, scored 37 goals for the Roadrunners last year when they were in the Western Hockey League.

This year he hasn't been playing regularly and has scored only three goals for Phoenix.

Young was playing out his career in the WHL with the Roadrunners before they got their WHA franchise. Drinking hurt his career when he was younger and he is one of sport's best-known reformed alcoholics.

A Toronto crowd of 12,652 saw the Toros, who led the WHA's Canadian Division for most of the season, drop three points behind first-place Quebec Nordiques.

The Nordiques edged Michigan Stags 3-2 in overtime to increase their lead. In Tuesday's other WHA games, Minnesota Fighting Saints beat Chicago Cougars 4-2, Indianapolis Racers topped Vancouver Blazers 4-2, San Diego Mariners defeated New England Whalers 5-3 and Winnipeg Jets tied Cleveland Crusaders 4-4.

Chris Bordeleau poked in an overtime goal with Michigan goalie Gerry Desjardins down on his knees to give the Nordiques their win. The goal came at 3:04 of sudden-death overtime.

A third-period goal by Serge Bernier had wiped out a 2-1 Michigan lead.

Mike Walton scored one goal and assisted on another for the Saints, who dominated their first period against Chicago, taking a 3-1 lead.

Bob Sicinski broke a 1-1 tie when he scored for the Racers in the second period and Kerry Bond added a decisive goal less than a minute later.

Claude St. Saveur scored both Blazer goals on power plays early in the first period and late in the final period.

Andre Lacroix scored one goal and set up two others for the Mariners, who built a 3-0 lead in the first 15 minutes.

Lifting the goaltender for a sixth attacker in the final minutes of a game paid off in a tie for the Crusaders for the first time in their three-year history.

Cleveland pulled goalie Gerry Cheevers with 45 seconds later and Richie Leduc gave the Crusaders the tie just 14 seconds later. There was no scoring in the overtime period.

Among Winnipeg's goals was the 35th of the season by Bobby Hull.

Drolet on Target

NORFOLK ,Va. (AP) — Rene Drolet scored two goals and assisted on two others to lead Virginia Red Wings to a 7-1 victory over Hershey Bears in the only American Hockey League game Tuesday night.

Virginia goalie Doug Grant shut out the Bears and turned in 30 saves after Dean Shermeta gave Hershey a 1-0 lead at the 6:58 mark of the first period.

Bob Krieger tied it for the Red Wings with the first of his two goals less than a minute later, and Michel Bergeron scored what proved to be the game-winner with 4:55 left in the period on an assist from Drolet.

The Red Wings added three goals in the second period and two in the third. Mike Jakubo had two assists for Virginia.

In the only game tonight, Syracuse travels to Hershey.

Marlies Keep Rolling

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The largest Hamilton attendance in more than five years—3,142 spectators watched leading Toronto Marlboros down Hamilton Fincups 4-2 Tuesday in Ontario Hockey Association Junior A play.

The victory extended the Marlboros' unbeaten streak to 15 games with 13 wins and two ties and stretched their lead to 14 points over second-place Peterborough Petes. Hamilton is in fourth spot.

Mark Napier, with his 46th goal, Bruce Boudreau, with his 42nd, Lynn Jorgenson and Bill Wells scored for Toronto. Napier and Boudreau each picked up two assists.

Greg Hickey and Rick Seiling replied for Hamilton which outshot Toronto 45-31.

Toronto was assessed five of the nine minor penalties and took period leads of 1-0 and 3-1.

In other league action Tuesday, London Knights trounced Kingston Canadians 9-4 and Oshawa Generals dumped St. Catharines Black Hawks 4-2.

Soviets Top Rangers

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Second-period goals by Vladmir Vikulov and Sergei Glazov led Soviet Red Army to its seventh consecutive tour win Tuesday, a 5-3 victory over Kitchener Rangers of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series.

The Soviet team had led 3-2 after 20 minutes on goals by Glazov, Valdmir Popov and Gennadi Tsycankov.

After Glazov put the Soviets in front 1-0 at 1:47 with his first of two goals, Tony Cassolato and Mark Thiel replied for the Rangers within 93-seconds. The Rangers' other goal came late in the third period when Red Laurence broke into the clear and beat Nikolai Adonin.

Fergie Is Big In Texas

DALLAS AP) — Canadian Ferguson Jenkins, a 25-game winner in his first season with Texas Rangers of the American League, has been selected Pro Athlete of the Year by the Texas Sportswriters' Association.

Jenkins, of Chatham, Ont., edged team-mates Jeff Burroughs and Mike Hargrove in the balloting

Jenkins earlier was named Canadian Athlete of the Year.

Other finishers in the balloting included Nolan Ryan, the no-hit pitcher of California Angels; Johnny Rutherford, who won the Indianapolis 500; Drew Pearson, Dallas Cowboy wide receiver; Gordie Howe of Houston Aeros; Dan Pasterini, Houston Oilers quarterback; Riley Odoms, Denver Broncos wide receiver; golfers Lee Elder and Sandra Haynie; Diron Talbert of Washington Redskins, and Rudy Tomjanovich of Houston Rockets of the National Basketball Association.

Can - Am Series Shifted

COLLINGWOOD, Ont. (CP) — Can-Am ski races scheduled for next Monday and Tuesday have been shifted to St. Sauveur, Que., because of poor conditions on the steeper racing hills at Blue Mountain ski resort.

Gord Canning, vice-president of Blue Mountain, said Tuesday there is enough snowmaking equipment to throw artificial snow on the racing site but to do so would mean no snow could be made for the public sections.

Designated as part of the Can-Am series, the Campbell-Weider series have been moved to Mont St. Sauveur.

Takes Exception to Remarks

Tarkenton in Verbal Battle

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The mood of the Super Bowl, and perhaps a touch of Minnesota's confidence as well, was jolted Tuesday when Viking quarterback Fran Tarkenton lambasted a couple of 1974's also-rans.

Tarkenton criticized quarterback Ken Stabler of Oakland Raiders and wide receiver Paul Warfield of Miami Dolphins. Stabler and Warfield had taken some verbal swipes at the Vikings and Pittsburgh Steelers who meet Sunday for the National Football League championship.

Warfield said a half-healthy Miami squad could beat either the Steelers or the Vikings. Stabler, meanwhile, said that the NFL's two best teams—one of them Oakland—weren't playing for the title.

The Raiders had a 12-2 regular-season record, tops in the league, and knocked off the defending Super Bowl champion Dolphins 28-26 in the first round of the playoffs, with Stabler throwing four touchdown passes.

But they lost 24-13 to Pittsburgh in the American Conference championship game when the Steelers intercepted three of Stabler's passes and turned two of them into touchdowns.

"I never hear these guys making such statements before they play a team," Tarkenton said.

"I didn't hear Stabler say that Oakland could beat Pittsburgh eight out of 10 times before they played. And he doesn't have to play Pittsburgh this week.

CFL Rule Changes

Two - point Conversion In WASHINGTON (CP) — There will be further strain on the cerebral powers of coaches in the Canadian Football League when the 1975 season gets underway.

Because of a rule change approved Tuesday, they will have to decide after touchdowns whether to play it safe and kick for a single point or gamble by running or passing for two points.

The ball will be spotted on the five and the attacking club may try for a single point by placement or go for two points under the change approved at the annual meeting of the CFL's rules committee.

Under the old rule, the ball was spotted on the 10-yard line for the point-after attempt. The conversion was worth only one point, no matter how it was accomplished.

The two-point conversion has been in effect in United States and Canadian college football for several years and is used in many Canadian high school leagues as well.

The committee rejected a proposed reduction to 11 from 12 players on the field for each team, which would have brought the Canadian game in line with U.S. rules.

Also turned down were the fair catch, another U.S. rule, and a conversion to metres from yards for field measurements.

All of the changes approved Tuesday must be ratified at the league's annual meeting Feb. 20 in Toronto.

The rule-makers decided not to let defensive teams wipe out field goals by running them back from the end zone, but did add, a third option for teams that have just given up three points.

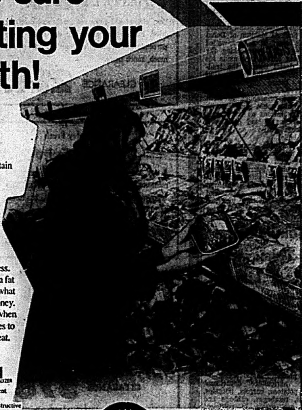
you manage better. . . Our ground meat analyzer will make sure you're getting your money's worth!



The Loblaws Ground Meat Analyzer is now in all Loblaws Meat Departments. What it does is simply provide you with an accurate reading of the fat content in our ground meat. Each time a fresh amount of hamburger or ground beef is made, a check is made to determine the proper content of fat. And you'll be certain that the ground meat you buy is every bit as good as we believe it is.

Of course, knowing the fat content of the ground meat you buy doesn't really mean too much unless you understand the way we classify ground beef. Loblaws ground beef comes under three classifications. Hamburger, formerly called minced beef, with a fat content of 27% or less. Ground beef, formerly minced chuck, with a fat content of 20% or less. And Lean Ground Beef, formerly minced steak, with a fat content of 15% or less. Loblaws wants you to know what you're getting for your money. Especially when it comes to meat.

Persian Gulf Sheiks Autocrats But They Must Listen to All

DUBAI (AP) — Arab sheiks rule the mini-states of the Persian Gulf with supreme autocracy. But they are more accessible to their people than the heads of Western states.

Even a potentate with unlimited power has to observe the ancient custom of majlis, which literally means "the place of sitting."

It enables the man at the bottom to speak to the man at the top without going through appointments secretaries and the other middlemen that function in a Western-style democracy. And it works.

High Highness Sheik Rashed Bin Said Al Maktum of Dubai holds court in a glass-walled sitting room, overlooking the thriving harbor that made his tiny desert domain the trading centre of the Persian Gulf long before oil was discovered.

Lesser princelings in flowing white robes glide in with hunting falcons on their arms to discuss a land dispute, a business venture or just to say hello.

A taxi-driver comes to borrow money for a ferry ride. He gets it.

Bedouin warriors guard their ruler with automatic rifles. But anyone is allowed to approach the sheik, and those who wait their turn are served sweet tea and bitter coffee.

The ambassador from Bangladesh fidgets impatiently. His business is pressing. But he has to wait while the Sheik listens gravely to a barefoot subject complaining about some dead goats. The matter is settled with smiles.

Sheik Rashed is a simple old man, hawk-nosed wrinkled, clad in a white galabiye (bedsheet) and a black cloak trimmed with gold thread. His couch is littered with coarse, brown tobacco leaves which he periodically stuffs into a pipe.

He takes off his sandals and plays with his toes as he listens to a merchant with a fat diamond on his pinky ring.

Sheik Rashed is virtually illiterate but his business acumen is legendary and he likes nothing better than a long palaver about goods and commerce.

Dubai was a gold-smuggling port when he inherited the sheikdom from his father 15 years ago. Now it boasts the biggest docks in the Middle East, exports and imports total $1.2 billion and oil rigs in the blue-green waters of the Persian Gulf bring in $700 million a year.

At 63 the sheik is a multi-millionaire. He has surrounded himself with government ministers and foreign consultants to advise him how to spend it. But only Sheik Rashed can decide whether it buys gold-plated Cadillacs or a fertilizer plant.

"I have no money," he tells an American visitor. "Everything is spent on development projects in Dubai. I need more loans."

The sheik's current dream is a $100-million trade centre, a 33-storey structure that will be the highest building in the Arab world. But even this cannot deplete the Dubai treasury. His chief economic adviser, an Englishman, privately conceded that the sheik is accumulating a surplus of $600 million a year.

"We are not afraid of Western civilization," he says. "We have our religion, our customs, they cannot change. The foreigners are helping us to develop Dubai. We can grow rich together."

Dubai is the only Persian Gulf state which has not seized a share of its foreign oil concessions.

"Maybe next year," says the sheik. "I am in no hurry."

He sweeps to his feet and leaves the room. Those waiting to see him will just have to wait. It is time to face Mecca and pray.

MAYOR OF MUSIC

BOSTON (AP) — Arthur Fiedler, a long-time conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra, has been given an inscribed baton and declared Boston's Mayor of Music. Mayor Kevin H. White honored Fiedler at a city hall ceremony.

Family Farm Takeovers Less Likely

EDMONTON (CP) — Vegetable crops don't easily come to mind when you think of farming in Alberta but the industry has been booming in recent years.

While vegetables are an expensive, high-risk crop and relatively uneconomical to grow in the province more than 1,900 acres of fresh vegetable crops were produced in 1974.

The agriculture department says potatoes, carrots, parsnips, onions, rutabagas, cabbage and corn are grown in sufficient quantity to supply a major proportion of the retail vegetable market.

Each of those crops usually costs a vegetable farmer about $300 an acre to produce and although the growing season is short, new Alberta products are appearing on the market every year.

The industry is spreading from the southern areas where it originated and market gardens are operating successfully near Edmonton and Fairview in the northwest.

Vegetables for processing also are on the increase, primarily corn, peas and carrots, and the province has three large processing plants, one at Taber and two at Lethbridge. One plant handles mainly potaotes and the other two process green and wax beans, beets, potatoes, peas, corn and carrots.

Plan Stamps

OTTAWA (CP) — Three more Olympic stamps, which carry surcharges destined for the 1976 Summer Olympics in Montreal, are to be issued Feb. 5, the post office announced Monday.

The three stamps, which feature swimming, rowing and sailing, carry surcharges in addition to their face value.

All Convicts To Draw Wages

OTTAWA CP — Beginning with 80 medium-security prisoners at Joyceville prison near Kingston, Ont., the Canadian penitentiary service will gradually put federal convicts to work at as much as $2.20 an hour, a penitentiary service official said Tuesday.

But it will be at least a year before the Joyceville pilot project for prisoner employment is under way and even longer before paid work is available to most of the more than 9,000 convicts in federal institutions, the official said.

He said penitentiary authorities are going ahead with a cabinet-approved plan, announced last May by Solicitor-General Warren Allmand, to put convicts into everyday working situations and pay them the going federal minimum wage. The minimum wage now is $2.20 an hour but could be higher by the time the project is in operation.

The Joyceville prisoners will construct metal office furniture to be sold to the government, the official said. A new building must be constructed at the prison and production facilities must be set up before the project can begin.

The program would be expanded at an unspecified later date to include other instruction.

Train to Find Jobs.

The aim is to condition convicts to the idea of regular paid work so they can obtain jobs more easily on release. Mr. Allmand has said the program should reduce the number of ex-convicts who return to criminal activities.

Under the program, the prisoners would keep only a small canteen allowance with the bulk of their salaries, minus deductions for room and board income tax, unemployment insurance, medicare and pension, going into bank accounts. Prisoners' families would have access to the bank accounts but the prisoners themselves could not receive the money until released. Prison authorities have not yet estimated how much net income convicts would receive, though gross pay for a 40-hour work week at the current minimum wage would total $88.

The official said prisoners will receive less than the minimum wage while training for their duties.

The decision to go ahead with the plan follows an experiment at William Head institution in British Columbia two years ago where prisoners were paid for working in a construction camp.

All Return to Prison

72 Murderers Given Holiday

OTTAWA (CP) — Seven two murderers and other serious offenders were given Christmas and New Year's leave by the penitentiary service and all returned to prison on time.

The service said Tuesday that 54 persons serving life sentences were given temporary absence in the Christmas period and 18 during New Year's by institutions across the country.

A total of 1,271 persons got leave during the season and virtually everyone returned on time. At present there are nine still at large, six from the Christmas season.

During Christmas 1,032 got leave and all but 11 returned on time. Five returned late and six still are at large. The service works that out to a 98.8-per-cent success rate.

Over New Year's 239 got leave and all but three returned. They still are at large. The service says this works out to a 98.75-per cent success rate.

Paramedics Fight For Right to Work

CALGARY (CP) — A real-life drama is unfolding in Calgary as paramedics—ambulance attendants trained to use sophisticated equipment to save lives—fight for the legislative right to use the tools of their trade.

The 58 paramedics who man the city's fire department ambulances want the Alberta government to approve legislation which will give them the right to perform medical functions under the radio direction of physicians.

Their plight is almost a carbon copy of a television movie which appeared two years ago depicting the life and struggles of paramedics employed by the Los Angeles fire department.

California subsequently passed legislation giving paramedics the protection of the law to perform medical functions under a doctor's supervision.

The Alberta legislation was introduced in the 1974 spring session of the legislature and was eventually tabled in the fall for consideration in the 1975 spring session.

There are fears that the bill may be delayed or ignored by a government that will be preoccupied with energy resource battles and preparations for an expected spring election.

The legislation would require paramedics, nurses and hospital orderlies to register and would establish standards for practice which they could follow under the direct supervision of a doctor.

The Calgary paramedics expressed fear that the delay leaves them open to civil suits by patients.

Dr. W. H. A. Donald, chairman of Calgary's ambulance medical advisory board, said "the government really has no right to delay the legislation, no right at all."

"What do they know about the work of paramedics? It's up to the government to get their finger out and pass the legislation."

Michael Woodlock, division superintendent for city ambulances, said recently acquired advanced paramedic equipment is being used, with or without the legislation.

"We're going ahead with the plan to have one paramedic in every ambulance," he said. "There is no way that we will just stand there and watch people pass on to another world because of legislative dithering."

Dr. Donald conceded that the province's "Good Samaritan Act," which protects persons who render first aid to an injured person from later civil court action give paramedics almost ironclad protection but added that approval of the paramedical legislation "would make the men a lot happier."

Orphan Boys Helping Guard Cambodian City

KOMPONG SPEU, Cambodia (AP) — The "orphan platoons" defend three mud-walled forts and guard a three-quarter mile long section of the defence perimeter of this provincial town 30 miles west of Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital.

The 123 boys range in age from 10 to 14. Their families have been killed in the 4½-year-old war between government forces and Communist-led insurgents or remain in rebel territory. They are in a volunteer unit supported by the government commander, Brig. Gen. Chantarangsei, a prince and cousin of deposed leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk.

Armed with a varied assortment of vintage Second World War weapons and captured insurgent arms, the boy soldiers have repulsed seven insurgent attacks in the last year.

Four of the boys were killed last month when they set off a mine while on an ambush patrol. These have been the only casualties reported.

The company of troops is split into three 40-man platoons based in triangular mud-walled posts that measure 50 yards on a side.

Recently outlying patrols of one of the camps fought skirmishes with insurgent troops whose main line is only a half-mile away.

The crackle of gunfire broke out and a few bullets stung the air overhead. The boys, many dressed in dirty shorts, took their bunkerline holes behind machine-guns or rifles.

One patrol had run into a rebel squad only 500 yards from one post. The firing died down after a few minutes.

The unit is watched over by 23 older soldiers and three officers. The commander is called "papa" and he calls the trooos "my sons".

One boy said: "We don't mind living like this. We have no families and no place to go. The general is the only one who cares for us."

The boys are paid $2 a month each out of the general's pocket but they are provided a normal soldier's rice and ammunition ration

Gen. Chantarangsei is attemepting to get the troops on the regular army roll so they will be able to draw normal pay. They are defensive forces not assault troops.

Kompong Speu has come under increasing insurgent pressure in the last few weeks. One avenue of attack is through the thick tangled second growth of brush in front of the orphan's three positions

Skin Flick Performers Are Sought

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pornographic film casting director Bob Cecchini and his assistant Calpurnia say they're looking for actors with good personalities. They interview up to 15 would-be skin flick stars every day.

Prospective porn stars must be young and physically attractive, but "we try to find people with good personalities," says Cecchini.

"If we think they are pleasant, there's a good chance they'll be easier for directors and cameramen to work with.

"Surprisingly enough, the personality emerges on screen, even in the kind of films we make."

Calpurnia interviews the women and Cecchini the men for the Mitchell Brothers sex film company.

Some people seek the work for the money, they report. Others do it to satisfy their curiosity or their ego and some see it as a way to break into legitimate films.

"Most of the chicks simply want to earn some money," Cecchini said in an interview.

The applicants come from a variety of walks of life.

"We've had insurance men, bankers, brokers, lawyers, an optometrist and one doctor," Calpurnia said.

Mitchell Brothers, who make films for the national market and operate six theatres in the San Francisco Bay araa, expect to hire some 200 actors and actresses during the next year to make 20-minute sex films. They pay a guaranteed minimum of $150 a film.

BIRTHS

WILSON — Don and Anne (nee Loucks), Belleville, are pleased to announce the safe arrival of their baby daughter Meredith-Ann at Belleville General Hospital on Tuesday, Dec. 31, 1974. Weight 8 lbs., 8¾ ozs.

IN MEMORIAM

BROWN — In loving memory of a dear daughter and sister Muriel who passed away January 8, 1972.
No one knows our heartaches,
Only those who have lost can tell.
Of the grief that we bear in silence,
For the one we love so well.
—Sadly missed by Mom and Dad Armstrong and brothers.

BROWN — In loving memory of a dear sister Mrs. Muriel Brown who passed away January 8, 1972.
The years may wipe out many things,
But this they wipe out never,
The memory of those days,
Which we have spent together.
—Always remembered by sister Betty and family.

WOOD — In loving memory of my dear wife Barbara Ann, who passed away Jan. 8, 1967.
Though tears in my eyes do not glisten,
And my face is not always sad,
There is never a night or a morning,
But I think of the wife I had.
Not a day do I forget you.
In my heart you are always here,
For I loved you and miss you,
As it ends the eighth year.
—Lovingly remembered by husband George.

WOOD — In loving memory of a dear mother, Barbara Ann, who passed away Jan. 8, 1967.
If I had all the world to give, I'd give it yes, and more.
To hear her voice, to see her smile,
And greet her at the door.
But all I can do dear mother is go and tend your grave,
And leave behind tokens of love,
To the best mother God ever made,
I like to think when life is done,
Wherever heaven may be,
She'll be standing at the door,
Up there to welcome me.
—Lovingly remembered by daughter-in-law Linda, grandchildren Debbie, David and Sherry Lynn.

CHASE, Mrs. Percy — In loving memory of my mother who passed away Jan. 8, 1974.
There is nothing so treasured,
And nothing so rare,
As the love that a mother,
And daughter can share.
Through joy and through laughter,
Through sorrow and tears,
They develop a closeness,
That grows through the years,
This love that they share,
Doesn't need to be spoken,
It's a wonderful bond,
That can never be broken.
—So dearly loved, so sadly missed by daughter Marie and son-in-law Allan Osterhout, Willowdale.

CARD OF THANKS

The family of the late Mrs. Muriel Hay would like to express their sincere appreciation to friends and relatives for the cards, flowers and donations during the passing of our loved one. Special thanks to the staff on the 7th level of Belleville General Hospital, as well as Doctors MacIntosh, Hartt and Manderville. Sincere thank you to Canon Peter Tett, who officiated at the services.
Betty Jones and Family.

The family of the late Jerry Doran wish to express sincere thanks to all our relatives, friends and neighbors for their kindness and sympathy at a time when it was needed and appreciated. We will never forget. Special thanks to the VON, the Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 99, the UTU 403, Father George Mullin and the O'Brien-Steele Funeral Home.
